

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY SYSTEM
PLATINUM JUBILEE 1922-1997

75

GLORIOUS YEARS OF DEDICATED LIBRARY SERVICE

CENTRAL REFERENCE LIBRARY

REFERENCE BOOK

FOR CONSULTATION ONLY

Call No. 0111, 6K672 Acc No. /236140

H1

THE EXAMINER

and Other Pieces Written in 1710-11

JONATHAN SWIFT

Presented by

The British Council Library

Jonathan Swift

from the portrait by Charles Jervas in the National Portrait Gallery

---

---

JONATHAN SWIFT

---

The EXAMINER

and Other Pieces Written in 1710-11

Edited by Herbert Davis

1492.

Oxford: Basil Blackwell: 1966

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN
AT THE SHAKESPEARE HEAD PRESS
ST ALDATES OXFORD

0111,6K672c

1236/40

First printed in this edition 1941

Reprinted (photolitho) 1959

Reprinted 1966

Reprinted by photolithography by
The Compton Printing Works (London) Ltd. and bound by
The Kemp Hall Bindery, Oxford.

---

---

The CONTENTS

THE INTRODUCTION

page ix

THE EXAMINER

No. 13. November 2, 1710	1
No. 14. November 9, 1710	3
No. 15. November 16, 1710	8
No. 16. November 23, 1710	13
No. 17. November 30, 1710	19
No. 18. December 7, 1710	24
No. 19. December 14, 1710	29
No. 20. December 21, 1710	35
No. 21. December 28, 1710	40
No. 22. January 4, 1710	46
No. 23. January 11, 1710	52
No. 24. January 18, 1710	58
No. 25. January 25, 1710	63
No. 26. February 1, 1710	69
No. 27. February 8, 1710	75
No. 28. February 15, 1710	80
No. 29. February 22, 1710	85
No. 30. March 1, 1710	91
No. 31. March 8, 1710	96
No. 32. March 15, 1710	101
No. 33. March 22, 1710	106
No. 34. March 29, 1711	110
No. 35. April 5, 1711	116
No. 36. April 12, 1711	121
No. 37. April 19, 1711	126
No. 38. April 26, 1711	132
No. 39. May 3, 1711	136
No. 40. May 10, 1711	142
No. 41. May 17, 1711	147
No. 42. May 24, 1711	152
	157

THE EXAMINER (continued)

No. 43. May 31, 1711	162
No. 44. June 7, 1711	167
No. 45. June 14, 1711	172

A SHORT CHARACTER OF HIS EXCELLENCE
THOMAS EARL OF WHARTONpage* 175SOME REMARKS UPON A PAMPHLET entitled
A LETTER TO THE SEVEN LORDS ETC

185

A NEW JOURNEY TO PARIS

207

APPENDIXES

A. A Letter to the Examiner	219
B. A Continuation of A short Character of Thomas Earl of Wharton	229
C. A Letter to the Seven Lords of the Committee appointed to examine Gregg	241
D. A Learned Comment on Dr Hare's Sermon	259

TEXTUAL NOTES

273

THE INDEX

281

---

---

ILLUSTRATIONS

Jonathan Swift. From the portrait by Charles Jervas, in the National Portrait Gallery (Reproduced by permis-of the Trustees.) frontispiece

FACSIMILES of TITLE PAGES, &c.

A Short Character of His Ex. I. E. of W. L.L. of I——	page 175
Some Remarks upon a Pamphlet etc.	185
A New Journey to Paris	207
A Letter to the Seven Lords etc.	243
A Learned Comment on Dr Hare's Sermon	261

---

---

The INTRODUCTION

THE works contained in this volume were written during the first year of Swift's political activity in the service of the new ministry, which followed the Queen's dismissal of Godolphin in August, 1710, and the success of the Tories in the subsequent elections. The change had been brought about partly as a result of the natural antagonism between the Queen and the Whig ministers she had never liked, and her estrangement from the Duke and the Duchess of Marlborough, and partly as a result of the popular feeling which had been aroused against the Dissenters by the Sacheverell trial. But in spite of the overwhelming Tory majority in the House of Commons, the Ministry for the next two years was a coalition composed of the more moderate elements of both sides, supported by the Church of England party, in accord with the wish of the Queen for a 'moderate or comprehensive scheme' and with Harley's own instinct for a national government. Already in 1708 St John had suggested this scheme to Harley: 'there is no hope I am fully convinced but in the Church of England party, nor in that on the foot it now stands, and without more confidence than is yet re-established between them and us.' And again: 'The fiery trial of affliction has made the gentlemen of the Church of England more prepared to form such a party than from their former conduct it might have been expected.'<sup>1</sup>

Before the end of 1710 Swift was on terms of intimate and cordial friendship with Harley, and had devoted himself with enthusiasm to the support of the new government. His own account of what had happened was written later in his Memoirs relating to that Change in the Queen's Ministry in 1710.

A much fuller and more exciting day to day record is to be found in the Journal to Stella, and in his letters to Archbishop King during these months. He had at first been concerned at the disappearance of the Whigs from office: 'I never remember such bold steps taken by a Court : I am almost shocked at it, though I did not care if they were all hanged.'<sup>1</sup> And he looked forward to a winter of party struggles, of which he would be an indifferent spectator. But that mood did not last long. He occupied himself in sending a long paper<sup>2</sup> to the Tatler, concerned with current fashions in writing which he disapproved of, and in writing a lampoon on Godolphin, entitled The Virtues of Sid Hamet the Magician's Rod.<sup>3</sup> On September 30 he reported that he was to be introduced to Harley, in connection with the business of the First-Fruits for the Church of Ireland, and by that time he was clearly aware of the possibility of the new situation. 'Tis good to see what a lamentable confession the Whigs all make me of my ill usage; but I mind them not. I am already represented to Harley as a discontented person, that was used ill for not being Whig enough; and I hope for good usage from him. The Tories dryly tell me, I may make my fortune, if I please; but I do not understand them, or rather, I do understand them.'

---

<sup>1</sup> St John to Harley, Oct. 11 and Nov. 6, 1708 (H.M.C. Bath, i, 191, 194), quoted by Keith Feiling, History of the Tory Party, 1640-1714, Clarendon Press, 1924, p. 415.

A fortnight later he was confident that the business of the First-Fruits would certainly be done; and he was on good terms with his new friends whom he had delighted by his verses on Godolphin: 'Lord Peterborough would let nobody read them but himself; so he did; and Mr Harley bobbed me at every line to take notice of the beauties.'<sup>4</sup> Before the end of October he had been set to work at an arduous and important work, to carry on the weekly Examiner, which had been started by St John at the beginning of the previous August.

Swift's own account of this arrangement was given in the Memoirs as follows:

When the affair of the First-Fruits was fully dispatched, I returned my humble thanks to Mr Harley, in the name of the clergy of Ireland, and of my own; and offered to take my leave, as intending immediately to return to that Kingdom. Mr Har-

<sup>1</sup> Journal to Stella, Sept. 20, 1710.

<sup>2</sup> No. 230. See Vol. II of this edition, p. 173.

<sup>3</sup> Poems, ed. H. Williams (Clarendon Press) 1937. Pp. 131-5.

<sup>4</sup> Journal to Stella, Oct. 15, 1710.

ley told me he and his Friends knew very well what useful Things I had written against the Principles of the late discarded Faction; and that my personal Esteem for several among them would not make me a favourer of their Cause: That there was now an entirely new Scene, that the Queen was resolved to employ None but those who were Friends to the Constitution of Church and State: that their great Difficulty lay in the Want of some good Pen, to keep up the Spirit raised in the People, to assert the Principles, and justify the Proceedings of the new Ministers....

Upon the Rise of this Ministry, the principal Persons in Power thought it necessary that some weekly Paper should be published, with just Reflections upon former Proceedings, and defending the present Measures of Her Majesty. This was begun about the Time of Godolphin's Removal, under the Name of the Examiner. About a dozen of these Papers, written with much Spirit and Sharpness, some by Mr Secretary St John, since Lord Bolingbroke; others by Dr Atterbury, since Bishop of Rochester; and others again by Mr Prior, Dr Freind, &c.; were published with great Applause; but, these Gentlemen, grown weary of the Work, or otherways employed, the determination was, that I should continue it; which I did accordingly for about eight Months. But, my style being soon discovered, and having contracted a great Number of Enemies, I let it fall into other Hands, who held it up in some manner till Her Majesty's Death.

The purpose of the Examiner had been stated in A Letter to the Examiner,<sup>1</sup> written by St John in August, and afterwards printed as an Introduction to the collected volume of Examiner, 1712. In its criticism of the Junto and in its attitude towards the war, it provided an outline of the policy which it was Swift's business to reiterate and develop. It was answered by A Letter to Isaac Bickerstaff,<sup>2</sup> where it is pointed out that the writer appears by the whole tenor of the book to be 'conversant at Court, and with the Principles of his Party'; 'so that, in short, it seems to be the Sum and Quintessence of what can be said for them.'

---

<sup>1</sup> See Appendix A.

<sup>2</sup> Letter to Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq: Occasion'd by the Letter to the Examiner. London, 1710, p. 4.

Swift first acknowledges the Letter to the Examiner in his Examiner for February 15, and then complains of the difficulties he had encountered in trying to carry out his task. 'I have been very careful,' he says, 'in obeying some of your Commands; and am going on as fast as I can with the rest. . . . But, Sir, I labour under a much greater Difficulty upon which I should be glad to hear your Advice. I am worried on the one Side by the Whigs for being too severe; and by the Tories on the other for being too gentle.'<sup>1</sup>

In this way he would support his claim that he had remained as he was from the beginning neither Whig nor Tory, but simply a Church-of-England man; though he had deserted his friends Lord Somers and Lord Halifax, and gone over to the side of Harley and St John. It was not hypocrisy or deceit that the very first words of the new Examiner had been these:

It is a Practice I have generally followed, to converse in equal Freedom with the deserving Men of both Parties; and it was never without some Contempt, that I have observed Persons wholly out of Employment, affect to do otherwise.<sup>2</sup>

He continued to emphasize the evils of the two extremes of party:

The Evils we must fence against are, on the one side, Fanaticism and Infidelity in Religion; and Anarchy, under the Name of a Commonwealth, in Government: On the other Side, Property, Slavery, and the Pretender from France.<sup>3</sup>

He professed as Examiner to occupy an impartial position, which exposed him to the constant attacks of fanatics responsible for papers like the Review and the Observator, as well as from the Non-juror, Charles Leslie in his even more 'pernicious', if less 'stupid', Rehearsal. As for the distinction between Whig and Tory, that seemed to him to have no longer any meaning: 'I would be glad to ask a Question about two Great Men of the late Ministry [i.e. Marlborough and Godolphin] how they came to

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, pp. 85, 88.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p. 3.

<sup>3</sup> See below, p. 3.

be Whigs? And by what figure of Speech, half a Dozen others, lately put into great Employments, can be called Tories?<sup>1</sup>

This contempt for party was not an affectation, nor was it merely strategy. Swift, like Harley, refused to believe that it was inevitable that the Government should be either Whig or Tory. They still hoped that it might be possible for the ministers of the Crown to rely upon the support of conservative and moderate opinion, without delivering themselves up to a dual party system, which had actually been in existence only since the Revolution. If it is true to say that 'Harley desired neither a government wholly Tory, nor the dismissal of Marlborough, but he wished to destroy the increasing influence of the Whig Lords over the Cabinet, and to continue a moderate ministry, relying as heretofore not on either party but on the favour of the Queen and the support of the nation',<sup>2</sup> it is clear why Swift joined him; for that was exactly Swift's own view in 1710, and remained his conviction so long as he continued to write the Examiner.

When he first took up his task, he accepted it as his main function to justify the changes in the ministry that the Queen was making. He pointed out that power was getting too much into the hands of the moneyed men, the new war-profiteers, whose interest it was to continue the war; and that by the change in her ministers the Queen had saved the country from the knavery of these stock-jobbers, who had been responsible for many scandalous abuses in all sorts of public management since the Revolution. His next argument was to stress the revolutionary plans of the former men in power, and to show what would be likely to happen if they came back, particularly in endangering the Church and the Monarchy. He admitted that one or two among the former ministers possessed very valuable qualities; but they had proceeded by a system of politics which the constitution could not suffer; for the moneyed men were obliged to enlarge the circle of their supporters, by taking in 'a whole Herd of Presbyterians, Independants, Atheists, Anabaptists, Deists, Quakers and

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 15.

<sup>2</sup> G. M. Trevelyan, England under Queen Anne, London, 1930-4, ii, 317.

Socinians.'<sup>1</sup> Again and again he returned with the same answer to the question 'Why was the late Ministry changed?'

It was become necessary by the Insolence and Avarice of some about the Queen, who, in order to perpetuate their Tyranny, had made a monstrous Alliance with those who profess Principles destructive to our Religion and Government: ... [it] was changed for the same Reason that Religion was reformed; because a thousand Corruptions had crept into the Discipline and Doctrine of the State, by the Pride, the Avarice, the Fraud, and the Ambition of those who administered to us in Secular Affairs.<sup>2</sup>

But the full powers of the Examiner were shown when he proceeded to more particular enquiries, and laid bare the evidences of corruption in the Army, the Church and the Ministry, as particular incidents occurred to bring them to notice. The new ministers were naturally not popular among Marlborough's friends in the army; and certain incidents took place in December, 1710, which caused the government to take vigorous action. The details are given in the Journal to Stella for December 13:

Meredyth, Macartney, and Colonel Honeywood are obliged to sell their commands at half value, and leave the army, for drinking destruction to the present ministry, and dressing up a hat on a stick, and calling it Harley; then drinking a glass with one hand, and discharging a pistol with the other at the maukin, wishing it were Harley himself; and a hundred other such pretty tricks, as enflaming their soldiers and foreign ministers against the late changes at Court. Cadogan has had a little paring; his mother told me yesterday he had lost the place of envoy....

The Examiner for the following week, December 21, made use of this incident to discuss the place of the army in the state, and the danger of allowing the officers of the army any political influence while on active service, or of putting too much power into the hands of army leaders by granting commissions for life. 'A General and his Army are Servants, hired by the Civil Power to act as they are directed from thence.' They must not 'concern themselves in Matters of the Cabinet, which are always either far above, or much beside their Capacities . . . especially in what relates to the Choice of Ministers, who are never so likely to be ill chosen as when approved by them.'<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 92.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p. 93.

In the Church, the opposition came only from the Whig bishops, whom Swift took occasion to attack over the differences between the upper and lower Houses of Convocation, and the unwillingness of the Bishops to take proper notice of the Queen's address—'an unhappy Circumstance when the Majority of the Bishops draws one way, and that of the Lower Clergy another.' Unfortunately, this opposition was not easy to deal with, as Swift pleasantly admits in this neat sentence. 'Time and Mortality can only remedy these Inconveniences in the Church, which are not to be cured, like those in the State, by a Change of Ministry.'<sup>2</sup> This paper was followed by an ironical account of all that the late ministry had done for the Church, and in particular their attempts to remove the Test Act.

But the weight of the Examiner's attack was reserved for the political leaders; it was necessary to discredit the late ministry and to convict them of the many great abuses which had been visibly committed, but which owing to the defectiveness of the laws and the weakness of the Prerogative could not be legally punished. It was his business to supply such defects as these by the use of satire:

whereby those whom neither Religion, nor natural Virtue, nor fear of Punishment were able to keep within the Bounds

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 43.

<sup>2</sup> See below, pp. 50, 51. To this Examiner, Dec. 25, 1710, attacking the Upper House of Convocation, Swift's old antagonist, the Rev William Wotton, replied in a pamphlet entitled The Case of the Present Convocation considered etc., in which he explains the full propriety of Convocation's proceedings and defends 'this See of Bishops', as the chief defenders of Christianity against these impious writers and freethinkers still left unpunished by the new government. He compliments the Examiner on his style—he wants not that Life and Spirit which are necessary to make his Papers be read—but promises to watch him closely whenever he comes to deal with Church matters.

of their Duty, might be with-held by the Shame of having their Crimes exposed to open View in the strongest Colours, and themselves rendered odious to Mankind. Perhaps all this may be little regarded by such hardened and abandoned Natures as I have to deal with; but, next to taming or binding a savage Animal, the best Service you can do the Neighbourhood, is to give them warning, either to arm themselves, or not come in its Way.<sup>1</sup>

Godolphin had been dealt with already in those scornful verses, Sid Hamet's Rod, which had celebrated his downfall; but it was a more serious and more urgent matter to begin to undermine the reputation of the Duke of Marlborough at the height of his power and success, and to rouse feeling against the most successful party manager among the Whigs, lavish of money and promises, the Earl of Wharton, who had just returned to resign his post as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The relations of the new men in power with Marlborough were bound to be difficult. The Duchess had succeeded in completely alienating the Queen, but the public reputation of the General had not suffered. And there is reason to believe that both Harley and St John were anxious not to break with Marlborough; and also that it would not have been wholly impossible for him to have remained on good terms with them.<sup>2</sup> Swift's Examiner of November 23, 1710 was not so much an attack on Marlborough, as a reply to the violent 'clamour of Tongues and Pens' for some time past 'against the Baseness, the Inconstancy and Ingratitude of the whole Kingdom to the Duke of Marlborough, in return of the most eminent Services that ever were performed by a Subject to his Country.'<sup>3</sup> The comparison between the recognition given to Marlborough and the Triumph granted to a Roman General was intended to show the generosity with which he had been treated, and to convey a discreet warning against the danger of ambition and avarice. The Medley for December 4, 1710 replied by putting forward a very different account, in which the estimated cash value of towns taken by Marlborough was most satisfactorily balanced against all the benefits that he had received.

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 141.

<sup>2</sup> See Diary of Mary, Countess Cowper, London, 1864, p. 112.

<sup>3</sup> See The Medley, VI and VII.

Swift gives his own view of Marlborough very honestly in the Journal for December 31, 1710 [St John] told me he had been with the duke of Marlborough, who was lamenting his former wrong steps in joining with the Whigs, and said he was worn out with age, fatigues and misfortunes. I swear it pityed me; and I really think they will not do well in too much mortifying that man, although indeed it is his own fault. He is covetous as Hell, and ambitious as the Prince of it: he would fain have been general for life, and has broken all endeavours for Peace, to keep his greatness and get money. He told the queen, he was neither covetous nor ambitious. She said, if she could have conveniently turned about, she would have laughed, and could hardly forbear it in his face. He fell in with all the abominable measures of the late ministry, because they gratified him for their own designs. Yet he has been a successful general, and I hope he will continue his command.

In February, 1710, Swift attacked Marlborough again, with intent to discredit the man who was covetous as hell, and ambitious as the prince of it; but was careful not to touch the successful general. The Letter to Crassus is the perfection of what Swift aimed at in his role of Examiner. The quiet intensity and restraint give his words a quality of aloofness, as if beyond bias and passion. Not the slightest intonation is allowed to disturb this effect of judicial calm. ('I am an Examiner only,' he says, 'not a Reformer.')<sup>1</sup> And when he reads what he has written, he finds it good. 'Yes,' he remarks in the Journal for March 7, 1710-11, 'I do read the Examiners, and they are written very finely as you judge. I do not think they are too severe on the duke; they only tax him of avarice, and his avarice has ruined us. You may count upon all things in them to be true.' Some felt that they were not severe enough; Lord Rivers in conversation with Swift had cursed the Examiner for speaking civilly of the Duke. On the other hand the Medley retorted with violence that it had been said 'he was to maul the Whigs', and it was evident that he had 'a conscience exactly suited to such an undertaking, and a complexion to carry him through with it; for he would stick at nothing.'<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 82.

Thus again Swift could boast that he had maintained his position between the two extremes of party. But when he comes to deal with the Earl of Wharton, it must be admitted that he moves from examination to invective. The violence of his attack has roused the suspicion that he must have been moved by feelings of strong personal dislike, owing to Wharton's coldness towards him in Ireland. Swift may have been piqued by the fact that Wharton not only did not trust him and was unwilling to make use of him, but also seemed unaware of the danger of making Swift his enemy.<sup>2</sup> But to account for the violence of Swift's disapproval, it is not necessary to look beyond the fact that Wharton represented all that Swift most disliked and feared among the Whig leaders. He was the most dangerous opponent of all that Swift stood for. His zeal in using his immense wealth at elections against the Church party, and the 'success with which it was attended, the choice of sometimes twenty, sometimes thirty Members of Parliament chosen by his Procurement, made him the Butt of the Tories Hatred and Scandal.' He claimed to be a Churchman by choice, though by education a Dissenter; nevertheless he always declared himself to be a 'Friend to the Dissenters, not taking them in a religious but a civil Capacity, because they were always Friends to the Constitution; and for this Reason he was against everything which tended to put any Hardship upon them.' He gave the most sincere evidence of this in the case of the Occasional Bill. He had been very active in bringing about the union with Scotland. When rewarded by being made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, his main aim there was 'to reconcile the Church of England and the Dissenting Protestants as the surest means to weaken the Popish interest.'<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See The Medley, Feb. 12, 1711 (p. 235).

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Journal to Stella, Sept. 12, 1710: 'I never expected anything from Lord Wharton, and Lord Wharton knew that I understood it so.'

<sup>3</sup> See Memoirs of the Life of Thomas late Marquess of Wharton, London. 1711. pp. 27-28. 61.

He was therefore suspected of wishing to tamper with the Test Act, as a means of gaining the support of the Dissenters. The new ministry would gladly have left Wharton in Ireland; but after hearing the news of Godolphin's removal in August 1710, he made hurried preparations to return, and told Swift that he did not expect to continue in the government;<sup>1</sup> on his return to England he immediately became active again in the elections in opposition to the new ministers.

One of Swift's first tasks, therefore, as Examiner was to attack Wharton; and in his fourth paper, on November 30, 1710, taking his cue from Addison's speech of Alcibiades in the Whig Examiner of September 28, he imitated Cicero's speech against Verres to expose Wharton's government of Ireland.

What elements of truth were in the charges Swift brought against him can be easily recognized by comparing them with the account of his manner of life by an admirer in the Memoirs of the Life of that most noble Thomas late Marquess of Wharton, from which extracts have been given above. It is there, for example, clearly stated that he obtained the Lord Lieutenancy as a means of reimbursing himself for the vast expenses he had incurred in his lavish bribery of electors: 'he had expended such immense sums for the good of the Publick . . . that the Government were obliged to advance him to a Post of equal Honour and Advantage.' His way of living is described as agreeable to the humour of the Inhabitants of Ireland. 'The Day was for Council, the Night for Balls, Gaming Tables, and other Diversions, wherein his Lordship did not so much study Profusion as Elegance: and as he was a Man of Sense, he never quitted that Character to be thought Generous and Liberal, fine Names for Prodigality.' As to some other charges that Swift brings against him, this biographer also cheerfully admits that although his wife 'was a Woman of Wit and Virtue, yet her Person was not so agreeable to him as was necessary to secure his Constancy.'<sup>2</sup>

Probably about the same time Swift occupied himself with a much fuller examination of the character and activities of Wharton. This first appeared as a libellous pamphlet, which was distributed by dozens to several gentlemen's lodgings; 'then some bold cur ventured to do it publickly, and sold two thousand in two days.'<sup>1</sup> It was dated August 30, 1710; but this date was probably chosen by Swift simply because Wharton's activities in Ireland came to an end at that time. It was certainly not printed before December 1710. 'The character,' says Swift, 'is here reckoned admirable, but most of the facts are trifles.'<sup>2</sup> This is a formula that he frequently used to distinguish between his own writings and those of his understrappers. In this edition therefore, the Short Character of Wharton is included among Swift's authentic work, but the Relation of several Facts etc. is printed separately in the Appendix. There can be no doubt that he was responsible for the appearance of the whole; but the detailed information was supplied from Ireland, and there is no evidence that Swift had bothered to rewrite it. To the Short Character he had given all his attention; not merely as a piece of party journalism, but as a 'character', the study of a man whose easy insolence and complete unconsciousness of ordinary standards of behaviour must have made him the object of Swift's careful observation. Swift writes as one fascinated by the object before him; he had had the honour of much conversation with his Lordship, while he was in Dublin; he had even returned to England with him, whether in some sort of official attendance or not. He had been on the closest terms of intimacy with Addison, Wharton's secretary in Dublin. He had thus probably had the opportunity of studying his subject very carefully at a number of sittings.<sup>3</sup> He had been able to work at it with thoroughness but without partiality and without passion, which would anyhow be wasted upon a man as indifferent to applause as he is insensible of reproach;<sup>4</sup> a creature of a dangerous species, whose behaviour

---

<sup>1</sup> Corr. i, 190.

<sup>2</sup> Memoirs of Wharton, p. 18.

<sup>1</sup> Journal to Stella, Dec. 8, 1710.

<sup>2</sup> Journal to Stella, Jan. 1, 1711.

<sup>3</sup> For instance, on one occasion Swift had discussed with Wharton and Middleton, the Lord Chancellor, such subjects as 'the meaning of that word Liberty with Relation to Ireland.' Cf. Drapier's Letters, Clarendon Press, 1923, pp. 124-5.

<sup>4</sup> A year later they met at White's Chocolate house, and Wharton behaved exactly as Swift here prophesies, coming through the

must be thoroughly investigated in the interests of the public safety.

Nevertheless Swift does not attempt to hide the fact that he had been urged to this important work—"it is thought expedient, for some reasons, that the world should be informed of his Excellency's merits as soon as possible."<sup>1</sup> The Post-Boy was also called in to give assistance, with a crude acrostic, printed on December 12; and the following month the Examiner attacked again, singling out Wharton as one of the chief enemies of the Church.<sup>2</sup>

Swift's next function was to calm the fears of those who thought that any change of ministry at that time would be bad for credit, and that a ministry depending largely upon the support of the Tories would be sure to lead to the restoration of Popery, arbitrary power and the Pretender. He was committed to a defence of the new leaders against the criticism of the party newspapers.

At the beginning of February, 1710-11, he turns from invective to panegyric.

Why should not the present Ministry find a Pen to praise them as well as the last? This is what I shall now undertake, and it may be more impartial in me, from whom they have deserved so little. I have, without being called, served them half a Year in Quality of Champion; and by the help of the Queen, and a Majority of nine in ten of the Kingdom, have been able to protect them against a routed Cabal of hated Politicians, with a dozen of Scribblers at their Head: Yet so far have they been from rewarding me suitable to my Deserts, that to this Day they never so much as sent to the Printer to enquire who I was; . . . Therefore, my Resentments shall so far prevail, that in praising those who are now at the Head of Affairs, I shall at the same Time take Notice of their Defects.<sup>3</sup> crowd, calling after him, and asking how he did. But Swift adds with some pleasure: "This was pretty; and I believe he wished every word he spoke was a halter to hang me." Journal to Stella, Dec. 1, 1711.

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 184.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p. 57.

<sup>3</sup> See below, p. 78.

Even in panegyric, he will preserve still his character of Examiner. Even when he praises, he prefers if possible to use a kind of irony, by borrowing the standards which he assumes his opponents must be willing to accept. Thus he is ready to grant that the new Lord Keeper is wholly ignorant in the speculative as well as practical part of polygamy, and that he is no freethinker, nor has the courage to be the patron of an atheistical book while he is the keeper of the Queen's conscience. The greatest admirers of Mr Harley must also confess that his skill at cards and dice is very low and superficial: in horse-racing he is utterly ignorant, and to save a few millions to the public, he never regards how many worthy citizens he hinders from making their plumb. And Mr St John has still not procured himself a busy, important countenance, nor learned that profound part of wisdom, to be difficult of access.<sup>1</sup>

On March 8, 1710-11, an event occurred which gave Swift a splendid opportunity to exalt the character of Harley, and to turn upon all his detractors with violent denunciation. I quote from the account which appeared in the Daily Courant, under the date March 9:

Yesterday in the Afternoon, the Marquis de Guiscard was seiz'd, and carried before a Committee of Council at White-hall. While he was under Examination, he moved towards the Right Honourable Mr Harley, and with a penknife suddenly stabb'd him in the Breast. In the first surprize at so detestable an Action, a Gentleman drew his Sword and wounded the Marquis; who was afterwards committed to Newgate. 'Tis believed Mr Harley is in no Danger from his Wound.

The Examiner for March 15, is taken up with a very detailed account of the scene, in which Harley's quiet courage and magnanimity is effectively contrasted with the savagery of the vicious assailant. 'I think,' says Swift, 'there are few greater Instances of [magnanimity] to be found in Story. . . . He shewed no Sort of Resentment, or spoke one violent Word against Guiscard; but appeared all the while the least concerned of any in the Company. A State of Mind, which in such an Exigency, nothing but

<sup>1</sup> See below, pp. 78-80.

Innocence can give; and is truly worthy of a Christian Philosopher.'<sup>1</sup>

Swift's own private concern may be seen in the perturbed comments which appear in his Journal for that week. On March 8, he wrote: 'O dear M D, my heart is almost broken. . . . I am in mortal pain for him. . . . I now think of all his kindness to me. . . . pity me; I want it.' It is sometimes suggested that Swift's anxiety was largely due to the hope of advancement which he had placed entirely upon Harley's influence. But Swift's position cannot be fairly understood at this time without recognizing that his loyalty to Harley arose from a complete acceptance of his policy and methods as well as from a strong personal liking for the man. He may have been flattered by Harley's friendship, but he never admitted that he had been mistaken in valuing him so highly. Fifteen years later, in his Letter to Lord Chancellor Middleton he still maintained that Harley was 'the greatest, the wisest, and the most uncorrupt Minister, I ever conversed with.'<sup>2</sup>

Guiscard's attack also gave him a chance to turn upon Harley's political enemies, and to accuse them of being just as guilty as this wretch in their attempts to ruin him, 'both agreeing in the great End of taking away Mr Harley's Life, although differing in their Methods: The first proceeding by Subornation, the other by Violence; wherein Guiscard seems to have the Advantage, as aiming no further than his Life; while the others designed to destroy at once both That and his Reputation.'<sup>3</sup>

This attempt to incriminate some of the late ministry in connection with their examination of William Gregg, a clerk in Harley's office, who had been found guilty of selling secrets to the French, started a controversy which Swift kept alive during the rest of the summer and even after he had given up the Examiner. On March 22, he replied to the Medley and the Observator, who had accused him of lies and blunders, and provoked them further by taunting them with a desire to clear Guiscard from a design against Mr Harley's life, though they cannot 'clear their other Friends, who in the business of Gregg, were equally guilty

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 109.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p. 108.

<sup>3</sup> Drapier's Letters, p. 127.

of the same Design against the same Person; whose Tongues were very Swords, and whose Penknives were Axes.<sup>1</sup>

Many of Swift's Examiners were concerned with such particular occurrences. Even those which seem to deal with more general considerations will also be found to be answers to particular charges against the new government. The Medley and the Observer reiterated their warnings against the designs of the Tories to bring in Popery, Arbitrary Power, and the Pretender.<sup>2</sup> To meet their attacks, Swift undertook to examine the real principles of the so-called Whigs and Tories. As a moderate man, scornful of party strife, he exposed the Whigs as a dangerous, republican, anti-Christian faction, defended the supporters of the new ministry as upholders of the Constitution and the Church and the Landed Interest, and dismissed the other faction of extremists as Jacobites, Non-jurors and sympathisers with Popery. But he is never content with defence; he always recognized the advantages of aggression. He moves forward with such confidence and vigour that he is sometimes carried beyond a tenable position. He can even attempt to prove, for example, that not the Tories but the Whigs are more likely to bring in the Pretender:

What could be more consistent with the Whiggish Notion of a Revolution-Principle, than to bring in the Pretender? . . . the Whigs have a natural Faculty of bringing in Pretenders, and will therefore probably endeavour to bring in the great One at last: How many Pretenders to Wit, Honour, Nobility, Politicks, have they brought in these last twenty Years? In short, they have been sometimes able to procure a Majority of Pretenders in Parliament; and wanted nothing to render the Work compleat, except a Pretender at their Head.<sup>3</sup>

Or he will even appeal to the Dissenters against the Whigs, with whom he suggests they can have nothing in common except the 'Antimonarchical Principle and a few false Notions about Liberty,' and therefore as they have no hope of getting power they ought to be careful to secure the indulgence of the new government, and forsake the exhausted Whig cause.<sup>1</sup> So exhausted indeed, that by April 1711 the new government was beginning to be accepted inevitably; in the eyes of this impartial Examiner nothing could be found to justify any further objection against their management.

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 116.

<sup>2</sup> See Medley XXV, March 19, and XXVII, April 2, 1711; Observators for March, 1711.

<sup>3</sup> See below, p. 147.

In his paper for April 26 he raised the question of a Peace without the entire restitution of Spain; such conditions were set up by the former faction 'to pin down the War upon us; consequently to increase their own Power and Wealth, and multiply Difficulties on the Queen and Kingdom, until they had fixed their Party too firmly to be shaken.'<sup>2</sup>

To this the Observator immediately replied:

'Tis very necessary, according to the Schemes of the Faction, to sink the Trading and Moneyed Interest, so as they mayn't be able to cope with the Landed Interest; therefore I don't wonder at the Examiner's being for leaving Spain and the West Indies in the hands of the French.<sup>3</sup>

This was followed by a much fuller reply in a pamphlet, entitled A Few Words upon the Examiner's Scandalous Peace, in which the attitude of the Queen and the Ministry towards Spain is shown as it appeared in the Addresses of 1701, the Declaration of War in 1702, and the speeches and addresses of Parliament down to November 1709. The tenour of them all was that 'no Peace can be safe or honourable, unless the whole Spanish Monarchy be restor'd. And the Queen is pleased to declare, more than once, that she is of the same Opinion.' And finally the Examiner is challenged to explain why the Allies must dwindle in their terms of peace, when all goes so well.<sup>4</sup>

Swift did not reply directly to these arguments, but continued in his latest papers to try and prepare the public for a peace. Even in referring to the Queen's encouragement for building new Churches in London he is mainly concerned to show that all such designs must be checked by the necessities of a long and

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 129.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p. 140.

<sup>3</sup> Observator, April 25–28, 1711.

<sup>4</sup> A Few Words upon the Examiner's Scandalous Peace, London, 1711, pp. 17, 21.

ruinous war, though, he adds maliciously, the cost of the whole project at an estimate of six thousand pounds for a church, is somewhat under the price of a Subject's Palace.

At the end of his campaign, he returned once more to deal with the question with which he had begun—why was the last ministry changed? Not because they were Whigs with a certain set of principles, but because they were a certain set of persons, supported by those who hated the monarchy and the church, ‘as Unbelievers and Dissenters of all Sizes: Or Men in Office, who had been guilty of much Corruption, and dreaded a Change; which would not only put a Stop to further Abuses for the Future, but might perhaps, introduce Examinations of what was past: Or those who had been too highly obliged, to quit their Supporters with any common Decency. Or, lastly, the Money-Traders, who could never hope to make their Markets so well of Premiums and Exorbitant Interest, and high Remittances, by any other Administration.’<sup>1</sup>

He insisted that party divisions had become meaningless, and that the only real difference left between Whigs and Tories was that the one side apprehended greater danger from the Pretender and his party, and the other from the violence and cunning of other Enemies to the constitution; and it was clear that, since the Revolution of 1688, there had been less reason to fear Popery than the other faction.

He further justified the change that had been made by rendering an account of what the new Parliament had done during its first long session to enquire into abuses, to raise a fund for the national debt, establish credit, encourage trade and strengthen by the Qualification Bill and by Acts for the benefit of the church in England and Ireland both the landed and the church interest.

This Examiner appeared on June 7, 1711; and in the Journal for that date Swift says plainly enough: ‘As for the Examiner, I have heard a whisper, that after that of this day, which tells what this Parliament has done, you will hardly find them so good. I prophecy they will be trash for the future; and methinks in this day’s Examiner the author talks doubtfully, as if he would write no more.' Swift left London the next day, and stayed in the country at Wycombe with Lord Shelburn until June 20. On June 22 he comments again in the Journal: 'Yesterday's was a sad Examiner, and last week was very indifferent, though some little scraps of the old spirit, as if he had given some hints; but yesterday's is all trash. It is plain the hand is changed.' And again on July 17: 'No, I don't like anything in the Examiner after the 45th, except the first part of the 46th; all the rest is trash; and if you like them, especially the 47th, your judgment is spoiled by ill company and want of reading.'

---

<sup>1</sup> See below, p. 165.

The first part of the Examiner for June 14 really continues the last paragraph of the paper of the week before, and completes the attack on the Whig party-writers. It is unlikely that Swift had anything else to do with the last six Examiners, that completed the year from June 14 until July 26. A later statement in the Journal for November 3 is very definite: 'the first thirteen were written by several hands, some good, some bad; the next three and thirty were all by one hand, that makes forty-six: then that author, whoever he was, laid it down on purpose to confound guessers; and the last six were written by a woman.'

He does not admit that he gave hints to Mrs Manley, or was responsible in any way for providing her with information. It is strange therefore that they were allowed to be included in the fifth volume of the collected works, printed by Faulkner in 1738. Swift was careful however to have a note prefixed to them, which gives a little more information about those who were originally responsible for the Examiner. 'It was esteemed to be the Work of several eminent Hands, among which were reckoned my Lord Bolingbroke, Dr Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester, Mr Prior and some others.' His own work is stated here to consist of numbers 13 to 44. Those were the numbers of the Examiners for the dates November 2, 1710 until June 7, 1711, according to the reprint in a small volume which was printed for John Morphew and A. Dodd in 1712. The original numbering was 14 to 45; but in the reprint the Examiner for October 26, which was the original number 13, was omitted. It was an able exposition of the doctrine of Non-Resistance, almost certainly written by Atterbury. After insisting that he was against the comments. For instance, all that Swift probably wrote opposite the first passage he comments on, was 'is this sense or truth?' And opposite the words, 'if we be content to wait His Leisure' he may have written the query 'God's or Marlborough's?' Perhaps a sentence like this was suggested by Swift:

But if he means the present Ministry, it is certain they could find their own Interest in continuing the War as well as other People; their Capacities are no less, nor their Fortunes so great, neither need they be at a loss how to follow in a path so well-beaten.<sup>1</sup>

Swift was not in a mood to bother much with such an antagonist as Dr Hare. He had just brought to a successful conclusion his first year in the service of the Ministry, and had attained a position among them of independence and dignity and power not often reached by a man without either title, office, or even an honourable preferment. He was still needed. He had still one task to do, and there was no one else who could do it. This was to reconcile the nation to a peace which the Ministry had already secretly arranged.

It must have been for him almost a jest, just at this moment in the middle of September, 1711, to receive from Archbishop King a letter of gracious condescension, full of warnings and good advice. He urges Swift first to make use of the favour and interest he at present possesses to obtain some preferment that may be called a settlement; and secondly charges him with his duty to make use of his knowledge of the world and his reading in order to deal with some subject in divinity upon which he could produce something new and surprising 'with such uncommon remarks, as will render it both profitable and agreeable, above most things that pass the press.'<sup>2</sup>

It is difficult to believe that so astute an Archbishop could write such a letter to a man like Swift; but it may be taken as a proof that outside a small circle of his friends, no one really knew what exactly he had written, and what power he now held in his hands. Swift replied from Windsor Castle, on October 1, 1711, in a letter which is a complete revelation of the mind of the

<sup>1</sup> See below, pp. 263-4, 266.

<sup>2</sup> Corr. i, 285-6.

Examiner; and for that reason it may be fitting to quote a few sentences from it here. At this moment he could say with justice and with satisfaction:

I am as well received and known at Court, as perhaps any man ever was of my level; I have formerly been the like. I left it then, and will perhaps leave it now—when they please to let me—without any concern, but what a few months will remove. It is my maxim to leave great Ministers to do as they please; and if I cannot distinguish myself enough by being useful in such a way as becomes a man of conscience and honour, I can do no more; for I never will solicit for myself, although I often do for others.<sup>1</sup>

In this quiet pause before a period of great activity and success he examines his own position in this world of courtiers and great ministers, delighting in a sense of his power, but above all proud of his independence and his freedom. And this is what he claimed to be—one whom no man was great enough to set on work, though voluntarily and in friendship devoted to the service of the Ministry; one who would be no man's tool, though ready to be an instrument of good to the prince or people; no party politician, but a judicial Examiner of the state of public affairs, who valued his dignity and his integrity so highly that he refused to solicit a reward or to demand preferment.

---

<sup>1</sup> Corr. i, 291.

In the Month of August, 1710, a weekly Paper, called, The EXAMINER, began to be published. It was esteemed to be the Work of several eminent Hands, among which were reckoned my Lord B——KE, Dr. ATTERBURY, B. of R. Mr. PRIOR, and some Others. However it came about, the general Opinion is, That those Persons proceeded no further than to the first twelve Papers; after which, it seems to be agreed, that the Undertaking was carried on by the supposed Author of the four preceding Volumes, who began with Number 13, and ended at Number 44. For, although the Paper continued many Months after to be published, under the Title of, The EXAMINER; yet by the Inequality of the Performance, it was manifest to all judicious Persons, that the aforesaid supposed Author had not the least Share in them. Several of the supposed Author's Friends, who were assistant in correcting the foregoing Volumes, have done us the like Favour in revising these two Volumes.

---

---

THE EXAMINER.

---

No. 13. Thursday, November 2, 1710.

---

... Longa est Injuria, longæ Ambages, sed summa sequar fastigia rerum.

IT is a Practice I have generally followed, to converse in equal Freedom with the deserving Men of both Parties; and it was never without some Contempt, that I have observed Persons wholly out of Employment, affect to do otherwise: I doubted whether any Man could owe so much to the side he was of, altho' he were retained by it; but without some great point of Interest, either in Possession or Prospect, I thought it was the Mark of a low and narrow Spirit.

It is hard, that for some Weeks past, I have been forced, in my own Defence, to follow a Proceeding that I have so much condemned in others. But several of my Acquaintance, among the declining Party, are grown so insufferably Peevish and Splenatick, profess such violent Apprehensions for the Publick, and represent the State of Things in such formidable Ideas, that I find myself disposed to share in their Afflictions, although I know them to be groundless and imaginary; or, which is worse, purely affected. To offer them Comfort one by one, would be not only an endless, but a disobliging Task. Some of them, I am convinced, would be less melancholy, if there were more Occasion. I shall therefore, instead of hearkning to further Complaints, employ some Part of this Paper for the future, in letting such Men see, that their natural or acquired Fears are ill-grounded, and their artificial ones as ill-intended. That all our present Inconveniences are the Consequence of the very Counsels they so much admire, which would still have encreased, if those had continued: And that neither our Constitution in Church or State, could probably have been long preserved, without such Methods as have been already taken.

THE late Revolutions at Court, have given room to some specious Objections, which I have heard repeated by well-meaning Men, just as they had taken them up on the Credit of others, who have worse Designs. They wonder the QUEEN would chuse to change her Ministry at this Juncture, and thereby give Uneasiness to a General who hath been so long successful Abroad; and might think himself injured, if the entire Ministry were not of his own Nomination. That there were few Complaints of any Consequence against the late Men in Power, and none at all in Parliament; which on the contrary, passed Votes in favour of the Chief Minister. That if her Majesty had a mind to introduce the other Party, it would have been more seasonable after a Peace, which now we have made desperate, by spiting the French, who rejoice at these Changes, and by the Fall of our Credit, which unqualifies us for continuing the War. That the Parliament, so untimely dissolved, had been diligent in their Supplies, and dutiful in their Behaviour. That, one Consequence of these Changes appears already in the Fall of the Stocks: That, we may soon expect more and worse: And lastly, That, all this naturally tends to break the Settlement of the Crown, and call over the Pretender.

THESE and the like Notions are plentifully scattered abroad, by the Malice of a ruined Party, to render the QUEEN and her Administration odious, and to inflame the Nation. And these are what, upon Occasion, I shall endeavour to overthrow, by discovering the Falshood and Absurdity of them.

IT is a great Unhappiness, when in a Government constituted like ours, it should be so brought about, that the Continuance of a War must be for the Interest of vast Numbers (Civil as well as Military) who otherwise would have been as unknown as their Original. I think our present Condition of Affairs, is admirably described by two Verses in Lucan.

Hinc usura Vorax, avidumque in tempore fanus, Hinc concussa fides, & multis utile bellum.

Which, without any great Force upon the Words, may be thus translated.

Hence are derived those exorbitant Interests and Annuities; hence those large Discounts for Advances and prompt Payment; hence publick Credit is shaken, and hence great Numbers find their Profit in prolonging the War.

It is odd, that among a free Trading People, as we call ourselves, there should so many be found to close in with those Counsels, who have been ever averse from all Overtures towards a Peace. But yet there is no great Mystery in the Matter. Let any Man observe the Equipages in this Town; he shall find the greater Number of those who make a Figure, to be a Species of Men quite different from any that were ever known before the Revolution; consisting either of Generals and Colonels, or of such whose whole Fortunes lie in Funds and Stocks: So that Power, which, according to the old Maxim, was used to follow Land, is now gone over to Money; and the Country Gentleman is in the Condition of a young Heir, out of whose Estate a Scrivener receives half the Rents for Interest, and hath a Mortgage on the Whole; and is therefore always ready to feed his Vices and Extravagancies while there is any Thing left. So that if the War continue some Years longer, a Landed Man will be little better than a Farmer at a rack Rent, to the Army, and to the publick Funds.

It may perhaps be worth inquiring from what Beginnings, and by what Steps we have been brought into this desperate Condition: And in search of this we must run up as high as the Revolution.

Most of the Nobility and Gentry who invited over the Prince of Orange, or attended him in his Expedition, were true Lovers of their Country and its Constitution, in Church and State; and were brought to yield to those Breaches in the Succession of the Crown, out of a Regard to the Necessity of the Kingdom, and the Safety of the People, which did, and could only, make them lawful; but without Intention of drawing such a Practice into Precedent, or making it a standing Measure by which to proceed in all Times to come; and therefore we find their Counsels ever tended to keep Things as much as possible in the old Course. But soon after, an under Sett of Men, who had nothing to lose, and had neither born the Burthen nor Heat of the Day, found means to whisper in the King's Ear, that the Principles of Loyalty in the Church of England, were wholly inconsistent with the Revolution. Hence began the early Practice of caressing the Dissenters, reviling the Universities, as Maintainers of Arbitrary Power, and reproaching the Clergy with the Doctrines of Divine-Right, Passive-Obedience, and Non-resistance. At the same time, in order to fasten wealthy People to the New Government, they proposed those pernicious Expedients of borrowing Money by vast Premiums, and at exorbitant Interest: A Practice as old as Eumenes, one of Alexander's Captains, who setting up for himself after the Death of his Master, persuaded his principal Officers to lend him great Sums, after which they were forced to follow him for their own Security.

THIS introduced a Number of new dextrous Men into Business and Credit: It was argued, that the War could not last above two or three Campaigns; and that it was easier for the Subject to raise a Fund for paying Interest, than to tax them annually to the full Expence of the War. Several Persons who had small or encumbered Estates, sold them, and turned their Money into those Funds to great Advantage: Merchants, as well as other monied Men, finding Trade was dangerous, pursued the same Method: But the War continuing, and growing more expensive, Taxes were increased, and Funds multiplied every Year, 'till they have arrived at the monstrous Height we now behold them. And that which was at first a Corruption, is at last grown necessary, and what every good Subject must now fall in with, although he may be allowed to wish it might soon have an End; because it is with a Kingdom, as with a private Fortune, where every new Incumbrance adds a double Weight. By this means the Wealth of the Nation, that used to be reckoned by the Value of Land, is now computed by the Rise and Fall of Stocks: And although the Foundation of Credit be still the same, and upon a Bottom that can never be shaken; and although all Interest be duly paid by the Publick, yet through the Contrivance and Cunning of Stock-Jobbers, there hath been brought in such a Complication of Knavery and Couzenage, such a Mystery of Iniquity, and such an unintelligible Jargon of Terms to involve it in, as were never known in any other Age or Country of the World. I have heard it affirmed by Persons skilled in these Calculations, that if the Funds appropriated to the Payment of Interest and Annuities, were added to the Yearly Taxes, and the Four-Shilling Aid strictly exacted in all Counties of the Kingdom, it would very near, if not fully, supply the Occasions of the War, at least such a Part, as in the Opinion of very able Persons, had been at that Time prudent not to exceed. For I make it a Question, whether any wise Prince or State, in the Continuance of a War, which was not purely defensive, or immediately at his own Door, did ever propose that his Expence should perpetually exceed what he was able to impose annually upon his Subjects? Neither if the War last many Years longer, do I see how the next Generation will be able to begin another; which in the Course of Human Affairs, and according to the various Interests and Ambition of Princes, may be as necessary for them as it hath been for us. And if our Fathers had left us as deeply involved as we are like to leave our Children, I appeal to any Man what sort of Figure we should have been able to make these twenty Years past. Besides, neither our Enemies, nor Allies, are upon the same Foot with us in this Particular. France and Holland, our nearest Neighbours, and the farthest engaged, will much sooner recover themselves after a War. The first, by the absolute Power of the Prince, who being Master of the Lives and Fortunes of his Subjects, will quickly find Expedients to pay his Debts: And so will the other, by their prudent Administration, the Greatness of their Trade, their wonderful Parsimony, the Willingness of their People to undergo all kind of Taxes, and their Justice in appplotting as well as collecting them. But above all, we are to consider, that France and Holland fight in the Continent, either upon, or near their own Territories; and the greatest Part of the Money circulates among themselves; whereas ours crosses the Sea, either to Flanders, Spain, or Portugal; and every Penny of it, whether in Specie or Returns, is so much lost to the Nation for ever.

UPON these Considerations alone, it was the most prudent Course imaginable in the QUEEN, to lay hold of the Disposition of the People for changing the Parliament and Ministry at this Juncture; and extricating her self, as soon as possible out of the Pupilage of those who found their Accounts only in perpetuating the War. Neither have we the least Reason to doubt, but the ensuing Parliament will assist her M A J E S T Y with the utmost Vigour, until her Enemies again be brought to sue for Peace, and again offer such Terms as will make it both honourable and lasting; only with this Difference, that the Ministry perhaps will not again refuse them:

Audiet pugnas vito parentum Rara Juventus.

---

No. 14. Thursday, November 9, 1710.

---

*E quibus hi vacuas implent Sermonibus aures,
Hi narrata ferunt alio: mensuraque facti
Crescit, & auditis aliquid novus adjicit autor,
Ilic Credulitas, illic temerarius Error,
Vanaque Latitiae est, consternatique Timores, Seditioque recens, dubioque autore susurri.*

I AM prevailed on, through the Importunity of Friends, to interrupt the Scheme I had begun in my last Paper, by an Essay upon the Art of Political Lying. We are told, The Devil is the Father of Lyes, and was a Lyar from the beginning; so that, beyond Contradiction, the Invention is old: And, which is more, his first Essay of it was purely Political, employed in undermining the Authority of his Prince, and seducing a third Part of the Subjects from their Obedience. For which he was driven down from Heaven, where (as Milton expresseth it) he had been VICEROY of a great Western Province; and forced to exercise his Talent in inferior Regions among other fallen Spirits, or poor deluded Men, whom he still daily tempts to his own Sin, and will ever do so till he be chained in the bottomless Pit.

BUT although the Devil be the Father of Lyes, he seems, like other great Inventors, to have lost much of his Reputation, by the continual Improvements that have been made upon him.

WHO first reduced Lying into an Art, and adapted it to Politicks, is not so clear from History; although I have made some diligent Enquiries: I shall therefore consider it only according to the modern System, as it hath been cultivated these twenty Years past in the Southern Part of our own Island.

THE Poets tell us, That after the Giants were overthrown by the Gods, the Earth in revenge produced her last Offspring, which was Fame. And the Fable is thus interpreted; That when Tumults and Seditions are quieted, Rumours and false Reports are plentifully spread through a Nation. So that by this Account, Lying is the last Relief of a routed, earth-born, rebellious Party in a State. But here, the Moderns have made great Additions, applying this Art to the gaining of Power, and preserving it, as well as revenging themselves after they have lost it: As the same Instruments are made use of by Animals to feed themselves when they are hungry, and bite those that tread upon them.

BUT the same Genealogy cannot always be admitted for Political Lying; I shall therefore desire to refine upon it, by adding some Circumstances of its Birth and Parents. A Political Lye is sometimes born out of a discarded Statesman's Head, and thence delivered to be nursed and dandled by the Rabble. Sometimes it is produced a Monster, and licked into Shape; at other Times it comes into the World compleatly formed, and is spoiled in the licking. It is often born an Infant in the regular Way, and requires Time to mature it: And often it sees the Light in its full Growth, but dwindles away by Degrees. Sometimes it is of noble Birth; and sometimes the Spawn of a Stock-jobber. Here, it screams aloud at opening the Womb; and there, it is delivered with a Whisper. I know a Lye that now disturbs half the Kingdom with its Noise, which although too proud and great at present to own its Parents, I can remember in its Whisper-hood. To conclude the Nativity of this Monster; when it comes into the World without a Sting, it is still-born; and whenever it loses its Sting, it dies.

No Wonder, if an Infant so miraculous in its Birth, should be destined for great Adventures: And accordingly we see it hath been the Guardian Spirit of a prevailing Party for almost twenty Years. It can conquer Kingdoms without Fighting, and sometimes with the Loss of a Battle: It gives and resumes Employments; can sink a Mountain to a Mole-hill, and raise a Mole-hill to a Mountain; hath presided for many Years at Committees of Elections; can wash a Black-a-moor white; make a Saint of an Atheist, and a Patriot of a Profligate; can furnish Foreign Ministers with Intelligence; and raise or let fall the Credit of the Nation. This Goddess flies with a huge Looking-glass in her Hands to dazzle the Crowd, and make them see, according as she turns it, their Ruin in their Interest, and their Interest in their Ruin. In this Glass you will behold your best Friends clad in Coats powdered with Flower-de-Luce's and Triple Crowns; their Girdles hung round with Chains, and Beads, and Wooden Shoes: And your worst Enemies adorned with the Ensigns of Liberty, Property, Indulgence, Moderation, and a Cornucopia in their Hands. Her large Wings, like those of a flying Fish, are of no Use but while they are moist; she therefore dips them in Mud, and soaring aloft scatters it in the Eyes of the Multitude, flying with great Swiftness; but at every Turn is forced to stoop in dirty Ways for new Supplies.

I HAVE been sometimes thinking, if a Man had the Art of the Second Sight for seeing Lyes, as they have in Scotland for seeing Spirits; how admirably he might entertain himself in this Town; to observe the different Shapes, Sizes and Colours, of those Swarms of Lyes which buzz about the Heads of some People, like Flies about a Horse's Ears in Summer: Or those Legions hovering every Afternoon in Exchange-Alley, enough to darken the Air; or over a Club of discontented Grandees, and thence sent down in Cargoes to be scattered at Elections.

THERE is one essential Point wherein a Political Lyar differs from others of the Faculty; That he ought to have but a short Memory, which is necessary according to the various Occasions he meets with every Hour, of differing from himself, and swearing to both Sides of a Contradiction, as he finds the Persons disposed, with whom he hath to deal. In describing the Virtues and Vices of Mankind, it is convenient, upon every Article, to have some eminent Person in our Eye, from whence we copy our Description. I have strictly observed this Rule; and my Imagination this Minute represents before me a certain * Great Man famous for this Talent, to the constant Practice of which he owes his twenty Years Reputation of the most skilful Head in England, for the Management of nice Affairs. The Superiority of his Genius consists in nothing else but an inexhaustible Fund of Political Lyes, which he plentifully distributes every Minute he speaks, and by an unparalleled Generosity forgets, and consequently contradicts the next half Hour. He never yet considered whether any Proposition were True or False, but whether it were convenient for the present Minute or Company to affirm or deny it; so that if you think to refine upon him, by interpreting every Thing he says, as we do Dreams by the contrary, you are still to seek, and will find your self equally deceived, whether you believe or no: The only Remedy is to suppose that you have heard some inarticulate Sounds, without any Meaning at all. And besides, that will take off the Horror you might be apt to conceive at the Oaths wherewith he perpetually Tags both ends of every Proposition: Although at the same Time, I think, he cannot with any Justice be taxed for Perjury, when he invokes God and Christ; because he hath often fairly given publick Notice to the World, that he believes in neither.

SOME People may think that such an Accomplishment as this, can be of no great Use to the Owner or his Party, after it hath been often practised, and is become notorious; but they are widely mistaken: Few Lyes carry the Inventor's Mark; and the most prostitute Enemy to Truth may spread a thousand without being known for the Author. Besides, as the vilest Writer hath his Readers, so the greatest Lyar hath his Believers; and it often happens, that if a Lyre be believed only for an Hour, it hath done its Work, and there is no farther Occasion for it. Falshood flies, and Truth comes limping after it; so that when Men come to be undeceived, it is too late, the Jest is over, and the Tale has had its Effect: Like a Man who has thought of a good Repartee, when the Discourse is changed, or the Company parted: Or, like a Physician who hath found out an infallible Medicine after the Patient is dead.

---

* The late Earl of Wharton.

CONSIDERING that natural Disposition in many Men to Lye, and in Multitudes to Believe; I have been perplexed what to do with that Maxim, so frequent in every Bodies Mouth, That Truth will at last prevail. Here, has this Island of ours, for the greatest Part of twenty Years lain under the Influence of such Counsels and Persons, whose Principle and Interest it was to corrupt our Manners, blind our Understandings, drain our Wealth, and in Time destroy our Constitution both in Church and State; and we at last were brought to the very Brink of Ruin; yet by the Means of perpetual Misrepresentations, have never been able to distinguish between our Enemies and Friends. We have seen a great Part of the Nation's Money got into the Hands of those, who by their Birth, Education and Merit, could pretend no higher than to wear our Liveries. While others, who by their Credit, Quality and Fortune, were only able to give Reputation and Success to the Revolution, were not only laid aside, as dangerous and useless; but loaden with the Scandal of Jacobites, Men of Arbitrary Principles, and Pensioners to France; while Truth, who is said to lie in a Well, seemed now to be buried there under a heap of Stones. But I remember it was a usual Complaint among the Whigs, that the Bulk of Landed-Men was not in their Interests, which some of the Wisest looked on as an ill Omen; and we saw it was with the utmost Difficulty that they could preserve a Majority, while the Court and Ministry were on their Side; till they had learned those admirable Expedients for deciding Elections, and influencing distant Boroughs, by powerful Motives from the City. But all this was meer Force and Constraint, however upheld by most dextrous Artifice and Management; until the People began to apprehend their Properties, their Religion, and the Monarchy itself in Danger; then we saw them greedily laying hold on the first Occasion to interpose. But of this mighty Change in the Dispositions of the People, I shall discourse more at large in some following Paper; wherein I shall endeavour to undeceive or discover those deluded or deluding Persons, who hope or pretend, it is only a short Madness in the Vulgar, from which they may soon recover. Whereas, I believe, it will appear to be very different in its Causes, its Symptoms, and its Consequences; and prove a great Example to illustrate the Maxim I lately mentioned, That Truth (however sometimes late) will at last prevail.

---

No. 15. Thursday, November 16, 1710.

---

*... Medioq; ut limite curras,
Icare, ait, moneo: ne si demissior ibis,
Unda gravet pennas, si celsior, ignis adurat.*

IT must be avowed, that for some Years past, there have been few Things more wanted in England, than such a Paper as this ought to be; and such as I will endeavour to make it, as long as it shall be found of any Use, without entring into the Violences of either Party. Considering the many grievous Misrepresentations of Persons and Things, it is highly requisite, at this Juncture, that the People throughout the Kingdom, should, if possible, be set right in their Opinions by some impartial Hand; which hath never been yet attempted: Those who have hitherto undertaken it, being upon every Account the least qualified of all Human-kind for such a Work.

WE live here under a limited Monarchy, and under the Doctrine and Discipline of an excellent Church: We are unhappily divided into two Parties, both which pretend a mighty Zeal for our Religion and Government, only they disagree about the Means. The Evils we must fence against are, on one side Fanaticism and Infidelity in Religion; and Anarchy, under the Name of a Commonwealth, in Government: On the other Side, Popery, Slavery, and the Pretender from France. Now to inform and direct us in our Sentiments, upon these weighty Points; here are on one Side two stupid illiterate Scribblers, both of them Fanaticks by Profession; I mean the Review and Observator. On the other Side we have an open Nonjuror, whose Character and Person, as well as good Learning and Sense, discovered upon other Subjects, do indeed deserve Respect and Esteem; but his Rehearsal, and the rest of his Political Papers, are yet more pernicious than those of the former two. If the Generality of the People know not how to Talk or Think, until they have read their Lesson in the Papers of the Week; what a Misfortune is it that their Duty should be conveyed to them through such Vehicles as those? For let some Gentlemen think what they please; I cannot but suspect, that the two Worthies I first mentioned, have in a Degree done Mischief among us; the mock authoritative Manner of the one, and the insipid Mirth of the other, however insupportable to reasonable Ears, being of a Level with great Numbers among the lowest Part of Mankind. Neither was the Author of the Rehearsal, while he continued that Paper, less infectious to many Persons of better Figure, who perhaps were as well qualified, and much less prejudiced, to judge for themselves.

It was this Reason, that moved me to take the Matter out of those rugb, as well as those dirty Hands; to let the remote and uninstructed Part of the Nation see, that they have been misled on both Sides, by mad, ridiculous Extreams, at a wide Distance on each Side from the Truth; while the right Path is so broad and plain, as to be easily kept, if they were once put into it.

FURTHER: I had lately entered on a Resolution to take very little Notice of other Papers, unless it were such, where the Malice and Falshood had so great a Mixture of Wit and Spirit, as would make them dangerous; which in the present Circle of Scribblers, from twelve Pence to a Half-penny, I could easily foresee would not very frequently occur. But here again, I am forced to dispense with my Resolution, although it be only to tell my Reader, what Measures I am like to take on such Occasions for the Future. I was told that the Paper called the Observator, was twice filled last Week with Remarks upon a late Examiner. These I read with the first Opportunity, and to speak in the News-Writers Phrase, they gave me Occasion for many Speculations. I observed with singular Pleasure, the Nature of those Things, which the Owners of them, usually call Answers; and with what Dexterity this matchless Author had fallen into the whole Art and Cant of them. To transcribe here and there three or four detatched Lines of least Weight in a Discourse, and by a foolish Comment mistake every Syllable of the Meaning, is what I have known many of a superior Class, to this formidable Adversary, entitle an Answer. This is what he hath exactly done in about thrice as many Words as my whole Discourse; which is so mighty an Advantage over me, that I shall by no Means engage in so unequal a Combat; but as far as I can judge of my own Temper, entirely dismiss him for the Future; heartily wishing he had a Match exactly of his own Size to meddle with, who should only have the odds of Truth and Honesty; which as I take it, would be an effectual Way to silence him for ever. Upon this Occasion, I cannot forbear a short Story of a Fanatick Farmer, who lived in my Neighbourhood, and was so great a Disputant in Religion, that the Servants in all the Families thereabouts, reported, how he had confuted the Bishop and all his Clergy. I had then a Footman who was fond of reading the Bible; and I borrowed a Comment for him, which he studied so close, that in a Month or two I thought him a Match for the Farmer. They disputed at several Houses, with a Ring of Servants and other People always about them; where Ned explained his Texts so full and clear, to the Capacity of his Audience, and shewed the Insignificancy of his Adversary's Cant, to the meanest Understanding; that he got the whole Country of his Side, and the Farmer was cured of his Itch of Disputation for ever after.

THE worst of it is, That this Sort of outrageous Party-Writers I have above spoke of, are like a couple of Make-bates, who inflame small Quarrels by a thousand Stories, and by keeping Friends at Distance, hinder them from coming to a good Understanding, as they certainly would, if they were suffered to meet and debate between themselves. For, let any one examine a reasonable honest Man of either Side, upon those Opinions in Religion and Government, which both Parties daily buffet each other about; he shall hardly find one material Point in difference between them. I would be glad to ask a Question about two Great Men of the late Ministry, how they came to be Whigs? And by what figure of Speech, half a Dozen others, lately put into great Employments, can be called Tories? I doubt, whoever would suit the Definition to the Persons, must make it directly contrary to what we understood it at the Time of the Revolution.

---

IN order to remove these Misapprehensions among us, I believe it will be necessary upon Occasion, to detect the Malice and Falshood of some popular Maxims, which those Idiots scatter from the Press twice a Week, and draw an hundred absurd Consequences from them.

FOR Example: I have heard it often objected as a great Piece of Insolence in the Clergy and others, to say or hint that the Church was in Danger, when it was voted otherwise in Parliament some Years ago: And the Queen her self in her last Speech, did openly condemn all such Insinuations. Notwithstanding which, I did then, and do still believe, the Church hath, since that Vote, been in very imminent Danger; and I think I might then have said so, without the least Offence to her Majesty, or either of the two Houses. The Queen's Words, as near as I can remember, mentioned the Church being in Danger from her Administration; and whoever says or thinks That, deserves, in my Opinion, to be hanged for a Traitor. But, that the Church and State may be both in Danger under the best Princes that ever reigned, and without the least Guilt of theirs, is such a Truth, as a Man must be a great Stranger to History or common Sense, to doubt. The wisest Prince on Earth may be forced, by the Necessity of his Affairs, and the present Power of an unruly Faction, or deceived by the Craft of ill designing Men: One or two Ministers, most in his Confidence, may at first have good Intentions, but grow corrupted by Time, by Avarice, by Love, by Ambition, and have fairer Terms offered them, to gratify their Passions or Interests, from one Set of Men than another, until they are too far involved for a Retreat; and so be forced to take seven Spirits more wicked than themselves. This is a very possible Case; and will not the last State of such Men be worse than the first? That is to say, will not the Publick, which was safe at first, grow in Danger by such Proceedings as these? And shall a faithful Subject, who foresees and trembles at the Consequences, be called Disaffected, because he delivers his Opinion, although the Prince declares, as he justly may, that the Danger is not owing to his Administration? Or, shall the Prince himself be blamed, when in such a Juncture he puts his Affairs into other Hands, with the universal Applause of his People? As to the Vote against those who should affirm the Church was in Danger, I think it likewise referred to Danger from or under the Queen's Administration, (for I neither have it by me, nor can suddenly have recourse to it;) but if it were otherwise, I know not how it can refer to any Dangers but what were past, or at that Time present; or how it could affect the Future, unless the Senator: were all inspired, or at least that Majority which voted it. Neither do I see any Crime further than ill Manners, to differ in Opinion from a Majority of either or both Houses; and that ill Manners, I must confess I have been often guilty of for some Years past, although I hope I never shall again.

ANOTHER Topick of great Use to these weekly Inflamers, is the young Pretender in France, to whom their whole Party is in a high Measure indebted for all their Greatness; and whenever it lies in their Power, they may perhaps return their Acknowledgments, as out of their Zeal for frequent Revolutions, they were ready to do to his supposed Father: Which is a Piece of Secret History, that I hope will one Day see the Light; and I am sure it shall, if ever I am Master of it, without regarding whose Ears may tingle. But at present, the Word Pretender is a Term of Art in their Possession: A Secretary of State cannot desire leave to resign, but the Pretender is at bottom: The Queen cannot dissolve a Parliament, but it is a Plot to dethrone herself, and bring in the Pretender. Half a Score Stock-Jobbers are playing the Knave in Exchange-Alley, and there goes the Pretender with a Sponge. One would be apt to think they bawl out the Pretender so often, to take off the Terror; or tell so many Lies about him, to slacken our Caution, that when he is really coming, by their Connivance, we may not believe them; as the Boy served the Shepherds about the coming of the Wolf. Or perhaps they scare us with the Pretender, because they think he may be like some Diseases, that come with a Fright. Do they not believe, that the Queen's present Ministry love her Majesty, at least as well as some others loved the Church? And why is it not as great a Mark of Disaffection now to say the Queen is in Danger, as it was some Months ago to affirm the same of the Church? Suppose it be a false Opinion, that the Queen's Right is hereditary and indefeasible; yet how is it possible that those who hold and believe such a Doctrine, can be in the Pretender's Interest? His Title is weakened by every Argument that strengthens Hers. It is as plain as the Words of an Act of Parliament can make it, That her present Majesty is Heir to the Survivor of the late King and Queen her Sister. Is not that an Hereditary Right? What need we explain it any further? I have known an Article of Faith expounded in much looser and more general Terms; and that, by an Author whose Opinions are very much followed by a certain Party. Suppose we go further, and examine the Word Indefeasible, with which some writers of late have made themselves so merry: I confess it is hard to conceive, how any Law which the supream Power makes, may not by the same Power be repealed: So that I shall not determine, whether the Queen's Right be indefeasible or no. But this I will maintain; that whoever affirms it so, is not guilty of a Crime. For in that Settlement of the Crown after the Revolution, where her present Majesty is named in Remainder, there are (as near as I can remember) these remarkable Words, To which we bind ourselves, and our Posterity for ever. Lawyers may explain this, or call them Words of Form, as they please: And Reasoners may argue, that such an Obligation is against the very Nature of Government: But a plain Reader, who takes the Words in their natural Meaning, may be excused, in thinking a Right so confirmed, is indefeasible; and if there be an Absurdity in such an Opinion, he is not to answer for it.

P. S. When this Paper was going to the Press, the Printer brought me two more Observators, wholly taken up in my Examiner upon Lying, which I was at the Pains to read; and they are just such an Answer, as the two others I have mentioned. This is all I have to say on that Matter.

---

---

No. 16. Thursday, November 23.

---

Qui sunt boni cives? qui belli, qui domi de patriâ bene merentes, nisi qui patria beneficia meminerunt?

I WILL employ this present Paper upon a Subject which of late hath very much affected me, which I have considered with a good deal of Application, and madeseveralEnquiriesabout, among those Persons who I thought were best able to inform me; and if I deliver my Sentiments with some Freedom, I hope it will be forgiven, while I accompany it with that Tenderness which so nice a Point requires.

I SAID in a former Paper (Numb. 13.) that one specious Objection to the late Removals at Court, was the Fear of giving Uneasiness to a General, who hath been long successful abroad: And accordingly, the common Clamour of Tongues and Pens for some Months past, hath run against the Baseness, the Inconstancy and Ingratitude of the whole Kingdom to the Duke of Marlborough, in return of the most eminent Services that ever were performed by a Subject to his Country; not to be equalled in History. And then to be sure some bitter Stroak of Detraction against Alexander and Cæsar, who never did us the least Injury. Besides, the People who read Plutarch come upon us with Parallels drawn from the Greeks and Romans, who ungratefully dealt with I know not how many of their most deserving Generals: While the profounder Politicians, have seen Pamphlets, where Tacitus and Machiavel have been quoted to shew the Danger of too resplendent a Merit. If a Stranger should hear these furious Out-cries of Ingratitude against our General, without knowing the Particulars, he would be apt to enquire where was his Tomb, or whether he were allowed Christian Burial? Not doubting but we had put him to some ignominious Death. Or, hath he been tried for his Life, and very narrowly escaped? Hath he been accused of high Crimes and Misdemeanours? Has the Prince seized on his Estate, and left him to starve? Hath he been hooted at as he passed the Streets, by an ungrateful Rabble? Have neither Honours, Offices nor Grants, been conferred on him or his Family? Have not he and they been barbarously stript of them all? Have not he and his Forces been ill payed abroad?

And doth not the Prince, by a scanty, limited Commission, hinder him from pursuing his own Methods in the Conduct of the War? Hath he no Power at all of disposing Commissions as he pleaseth? Is he not severely used by the Ministry or Parliament, who yearly call him to a strict Account? Has the Senate ever thanked him for good Success; and have they not always publickly censured him for the least Miscarriage? Will the Accusers of the Nation join Issue upon any of these Particulars; or, tell us in what Point our damnable Sin of Ingratitude lies? Why, it is plain and clear; for while he is commanding abroad, the Queen dissolveth her Parliament, and changeth her Ministry at home: In which universal Calamity, no less than two Persons allied by Marriage to the General, have lost their Places. Whence came this wonderful Sympathy between the Civil and Military Powers? Will the Troops in Flanders refuse to fight, unless they can have their own Lord Keeper; their own Lord President of the Council; their own chief Governor of Ireland; and their own Parliament? In a Kingdom where the People are free, how came they to be so fond of having their Counsels under the Influence of their Army, or those that lead it? Who in all well-instituted States, had no Commerce with the Civil Power; further than to receive their Orders, and obey them without Reserve.

WHEN a General is not so Popular, either in his Army, or at home, as one might expect from a long Course of Success; it may perhaps be ascribed to his Wisdom, or perhaps to his Complexion. The Possession of some one Quality, or a Defect in some other, will extremely damp the Peoples Favour, as well as the Love of the Soldiers. Besides, this is not an Age to produce Favourites of the People, while we live under a Queen who engrosseth all our Love, and all our Veneration; and where, the only Way for a great General or Minister, to acquire any Degree of subordinate Affection from the Publick, must be by all Marks of the most entire Submission and Respect to her sacred Person and Commands; otherwise, no pretence of great Services, either in the Field or the Cabinet, will be able to skreen them from universal Hatred.

BUT the late Ministry was closely joined to the General, by Friendship, Interest, Alliance, Inclination and Opinion; which cannot be affirmed of the present; and the Ingratitude of the Nation lieth in the People's joining as one Man, to wish, that such a Ministry should be changed. Is it not at the same Time notorious to the whole Kingdom, that nothing but a tender Regard to the General, was able to preserve that Ministry so long, until neither God nor Man could suffer their Continuance? Yet in the highest Ferment of Things, we heard few or no Reflections upon this great Commander; but all seemed Unanimous in wishing he might still be at the Head of the Confederate Forces; only at the same Time, in Case he were resolved to resign, they chose rather to turn their Thoughts somewhere else, than throw up all in Despair. And this I cannot but add, in Defence of the People, with Regard to the Person we are speaking of; that in the high Station he hath been for many Years past, his real Defects (as nothing Human is without them) have in a detracting Age been very sparingly mentioned, either in Libels or Conversation; and all his Successes very freely and universally applauded.

THERE is an active and a passive Ingratitude: Applying both to this Occasion; We may say, the first is, when a Prince or People returns good Services with Cruelty or ill Usage: The other is, when good Services are not at all, or very meanly rewarded. We have already spoke of the former; let us therefore in the second Place, examine how the Services of our General have been rewarded; and whether upon that Article, either Prince or People have been guilty of Ingratitude?

THOSE are the most valuable Rewards which are given to us from the certain Knowledge of the Donor, that they fit our Temper best: I shall therefore say nothing of the Title of Duke, or the Garter, which the Queen bestowed the General in the beginning of her Reign: But I shall come to more substantial Instances, and mention nothing which hath not been given in the Face of the World. The Lands of Woodstock, may, I believe, be reckoned worth 40,000*l.* On the building of Blenheim Castle 200,000*l.* have been already expended, although it be not yet near finished. The Grant of 5000*l. per Annum*, on the Post Office, is richly worth 100,000*l.* His Principality in Germany may be computed at 30,000*l.* Pictures, Jewels, and other Gifts from Foreign Princes, 60,000*l.* The Grant at the Pall-Mall, the Rangership, &c. for want of more certain Knowledge, may be called 10,000*l.* His own, and his Dutchess's Employments at five Years Value, reckoning only the known and avowed Salaries, are very low rated at 100,000*l.* Here is a good deal above half a Million of Money; and I dare say, those who are loudest with the Clamour of Ingratitude, will readily own, that all this is but a Trifle, in Comparison of what is untold.

---

THE Reason of my stating this Account is only to convince the World, that we are not quite so ungrateful either as the Greeks or the Romans. And in order to adjust this Matter with all Fairness, I shall confine myself to the latter, who were much the more generous of the two. A Victorious General of Rome in the Height of that Empire, having entirely subdued his Enemies, was rewarded with the larger Triumph; and perhaps a Statue in the Forum; a Bull for a Sacrifice; an embroidered Garment to appear in; a Crown of Laurel; a Monumental Trophy with Inscriptions; sometimes five hundred or a thousand Copper Coins were struck on Occasion of the Victory; which, doing Honour to the General, we will place to his Account: And lastly, sometimes, although not very frequently, a Triumphal Arch. These are all the Rewards that I can call to Mind, which a victorious General received after his return from the most glorious Expedition; conquered some great Kingdom; brought the King himself, his Family and Nobles to adorn the Triumph in Chains; and made the Kingdom either a Roman Province, or at best, a poor depending State, in humble Alliance to that Empire. Now, of all these Rewards, I find but two which were of real Profit to the General: The Laurel Crown, made and sent him at the Charge of the Publick; and the embroidered Garment; but I cannot find whether this last were paid for by the Senate or the General: However, we will take the more favourable Opinion; and in all the rest, admit the whole Expence, as if it were ready Money in the General's Pocket. Now according to these Computations on both Sides, we will draw up two fair Accounts; the one of Roman Gratitude, and the other of British Ingratitude; and set them together in Ballance.

A Bill of ROMAN Gratitude.	A Bill of BRITISH Ingratitude.
Imprim. l s. d.	Imprim. l s. d.
For Frankincense } 4 10 0	Woodstock. 40000 0 0
and Earthen Pots } to burn it in	Blenheim. 200000 0 0
A Bull for Sacrifice 8 0 0	Post-Office } Grant. 100000 0 0
An embroidered } Garment 50 0 0	Mildenheim. 30000 0 0
A Crown of Laurel 0 0 2	Pictures, } Jewels, &c. 60000 0 0
A Statue 100 0 0	Pall Mall } Grant, &c. 10000 0 0
A Trophy 80 0 0	Employments. 100000 0 0
A thousand Copper } Medals, Value half- } pence a Piece 2 1 8
A Triumphal Arch 500 0 0	540000 0 0
A Triumphal Carr, } valued as a Modern } Coach 100 0 0
Casual Charges at } the Triumph. 150 0 0
	994 11 10

THIS is an Account of the visible Profits on both Sides; and if the Roman General had any private Perquisites, they may be easily discounted, and by more probable Computations; and differ yet more upon the Ballance; if we consider, that all the Gold and Silver for Safeguards and Contributions; and all valuable Prizes taken in the War, were openly exposed in the Triumph; and then lodged in the Capital for the Publick Service.

So that upon the Whole, we are not yet quite so bad at worst, as the Romans were at best. And I doubt, those who raise this hideous Cry of Ingratitude, may be mightily mistaken in the Consequences they propose from such Complaints. I remember a Saying of Seneca, Multos ingratos invenimus, plures facimus: We find many ungrateful Persons in the World, but we make more, by setting too high a Rate upon our Pretensions, and undervaluing the Rewards we receive. When unreasonable Bills are brought in, they ought to be taxed, or cut off in the Middle. Where there have been long Accounts between two Persons, I have known one of them perpetually making large Demands, and pressing for Payments; who when the Accounts were cast up on both Sides, was found to be Debtor for some Hundreds. I am thinking, if a Proclamation were issued out for every Man to send in his Bill of Merits, and the lowest Price he set them at, what a pretty Sum it would amount to, and how many such Islands as this must be Sold to pay them. I form my Judgment from the Practice of those who sometimes happen to pay themselves; and I dare affirm, would not be so unjust to take a Farthing more than they think is due to their Deserts. I will Instance only in one Article. A * Lady of my Acquaintance, appropriated twenty six Pounds a Year out of her own Allowance, for certain Uses, which her † Woman received, and was to pay to the Lady or her Order, as it was called for. But after eight Years, it appeared upon the strictest Calculation, that the Woman had paid but four Pounds a Year, and sunk two and twenty for her own Pocket: It is but supposing instead of twenty six Pounds, twenty six thousand; and by that you may judge what the Pretensions of Modern Merit are, where it happens to be its own Paymaster.

---

No. 17. Thursday November 30, 1710.

---

Quas res luxuriae in flagitiis, avaritia in rapinis, superbia in contumeliis efficere potuisset; eas omnes sese hoc uno Prætore per triennium pertulisse, aiebant.

WHEN I first undertook this Paper, I was resolved to concern my self only with Things, and not with Persons. Whether I have kept or broken this Resolution, I cannot recollect; and I will not be at the Pains to examine, but leave the Matter to those little Antagonists, who may want a Topick for Criticism. Thus much I have discovered; that it is in Writing, as in Building; where, after all our Schemes and Calculations, we are mightily deceived in our Accounts, and often forced to make Use of any Materials we can find, that the Work may be kept a going. Besides, to speak my Opinion, the Things I have Occasion to mention, are so closely linked to Persons, that nothing but Time (the Father of Oblivion) can separate them. Let me put a parallel Case: Suppose I should complain, that last Week my Coach was within an Inch of overturning, in a smooth, even Way, and drawn by very gentle Horses; to be sure, all my Friends would immediately lay the Fault upon John, because they knew, he then Presided in my Coach-Box. Again, Suppose I should discover some Uneasiness to find my self, I knew not how, over Head-and-Ears in Debt, although I were sure my Tenants paid their Rents very well, and that I never spent all my Income; they would certainly advise me to turn off Mr. * Oldfox my Receiver, and take another. If, as a Justice of Peace, I should tell a Friend that my Warrants and Mittimus's were never drawn up as I would have them; that I had the Misfortune to send an honest Man to Goal, and dismiss a Knave; he would bid me no longer trust † Charles and Harry, my two Clerks, whom he knew to be ignorant, wilful, assuming and ill-inclined Fellows. If I should add, That my Tenants made me very uneasy with their Squabbles and Broils among themselves; he would counsel me to Cashier || Will Bigamy, the Seneschal of my Mannor. And lastly, if my Neighbour and I happened to have a Misunderstanding about the Delivery of a Message, what could I do less than strip and discard the blundering or malicious Rascal who carried it?

* Supposed to be her late Majesty Queen Anne.

† The Duchess of Marlborough.

It is the same Thing in the Conduct of publick Affairs, where they have been managed with Rashness or Wilfulness, Corruption, Ignorance or Injustice; barely to relate the Facts, at least, while they are fresh in Memory, will as much reflect upon

---

* L. Godolphin.

† E. Sunderland, and Harry Boyle, Secretaries of State.

|| L. Chancellor Cowper.

the Persons concerned, as if we had told their Names at length.

I HAVE therefore since thought of another Expedient, frequently practised with great Safety and Success by satirical Writers: Which is, That of looking into History for some Character bearing a Resemblance to the Person we would describe; and with the absolute Power of altering, adding or suppressing what Circumstances we please, I conceived we must have very bad Luck, or very little Skill to fail. However, some Days ago in a Coffee-House, looking into one of the politick weekly Papers; I found the Writer had fallen into this Scheme; and I happened to light on that Part where he was describing a Person, who from small Beginnings grew (as I remember) to be Constable of France, and had a very haughty, imperious Wife. I took the Author for a Friend to our Faction, (for so with great Propriety of Speech they call the Queen and Ministry, almost the whole Clergy, and nine Parts in ten of the Kingdom) and I said to a Gentleman near me, that although I knew well enough what Persons the Author meant, yet there were several Particulars in the Husband's Character, which I could not reconcile. For that of the Lady was just and adequate enough; but it seems I mistook the whole Matter, and applied all I had read to a couple of Persons, who were not at that Time in the Writer's Thoughts.

Now to avoid such a Misfortune as this, I have been for some Time consulting Livy and Tacitus, to find out the Character of a Princeps Senatus, a Prætor Urbanus, a Quæstor Ærarius, a Cæsari ab Epistolis, and a Proconsul: But among the worst of them, I cannot discover One from whence to draw a Parallel, without doing Injury to a Roman Memory: So that I am compelled to have Recourse to Tully. But this Author relating Facts only as an Orator, I thought it would be best to observe his Method, and make an Extract from six Harangues of his against Verres, only still preserving the Form of an Oration. I remember a younger Brother of mine, who deceased about two Months ago, presented the World with a Speech of Alcibiades, against an Athenian Brewer: Now, I am told for certain, that in those Days there was no Ale in Athens; and therefore that Speech, or at least, a great Part of it, must needs be spurious. The Difference between me and my Brother is this; he makes Alcibiades say a great deal more than he really did; and I make Cicero say a great deal less. This * Verres, had been the Roman Governor of Sicily for three Years; and on return from his Government, the Sicilians entreated Cicero to impeach him in the Senate; which, he accordingly did, in several Orations: From whence I have faithfully Translated and Abstracted that which follows.

My Lords,

A PERNICIOUS Opinion hath for some Time prevailed, not only at Rome, but among our neighbouring Nations; that a Man who hath Money enough, although he be ever so guilty, cannot be condemned in this Place. But, however industriously this Opinion be spread, to cast an Odium on the Senate; we have brought before your Lordships Caius Verres, a Person, for his Life and Actions, already condemned by all Men; but as he hopes, and gives out, by the Influence of his Wealth, to be here absolved. In condemning this Man, you have an Opportunity of belying that general Scandal; of redeeming the Credit lost by former Judgments; and recovering the Love of the Roman People, as well as of our Neighbours. I have brought here a Man before you, my Lords, who is a Robber of the Publick Treasure; an Overturner of Law and Justice; and the Disgrace, as well as Destruction of the Sicilian Province: Of whom, if you shall determine with Equity and due Severity, your Authority will remain entire, and upon such an Establishment as it ought to be: But if his great Riches will be able to force their Way through that Religious Reverence and Truth, which become so awful an Assembly, I shall, however, obtain thus much, That the Defect will be laid where it ought; and that it shall not be objected, the Criminal was not produced, or that there wanted an Orator to accuse him. This Man, my Lords, hath publickly said, That those ought to be afraid of Accusations who have only robbed enough for their own Support and Maintenance; but that he hath plundered sufficient to bribe Numbers; and that nothing is so High or Holy which Money cannot corrupt. Take that Support from him, and he can have no other left. For, what * Earl of Wharton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

'Eloquence will be able to defend a Man, whose Life hath been 'tainted with so many scandalous Vices, and who hath been so 'long condemned by the universal Opinion of the World? To 'pass over the foul Stains and Ignominy of his Youth; his corrupt
'Management in all Employments he hath born; his Treachery
'and Irreligion; his Injustice and Oppression: He hath left of late
'such Monuments of his Villainies in Sicily; made such Havock
'and Confusion there, during his Government, that the Province
'cannot by any Means be restored to its former State, and hardly
'recover it self at all under many Years, and by a long Succession 'of good Governors. While this Man governed in that Island, the 'Sicilians had neither the Benefit of our Laws, nor their own, nor 'even of common Right. In Sicily, no Man now possessth more 'than what the Governor's Lust and Avarice have overlooked; or
'what he was forced to neglect out of meer Weariness and Satiety
'of Oppression. Every thing where he presided, was determined 'by his arbitrary Will; and the best Subjects he treated as Enemies.
'To recount his abominable Debaucheries, would offend any 'modest Ear, since so many could not preserve their Daughters
'and Wives from his Lust. I believe, there is no Man who ever 'heard his Name, that cannot relate his Enormities. We bring
'before you in Judgment, my Lords, a publick Robber, an Adulterer, * a DEFILER OF ALTARS, an Enemy of Religion, and of 'all that is Sacred; in Sicily he sold all Employments of Judicature,
'Magistracy, and Trust, Places in the Council, and the Priesthood
'it self, to the highest Bidder; and hath plundered that Island of 'forty Millions of Sesterces. And here I cannot but observe to 'your Lordships, in what manner Verres passed the Day: The 'Morning was spent in taking Bribes, and selling Employments;
'the rest of it in Drunkenness and Lust. His Discourse at Table
'was scandalously unbecoming the Dignity of his Station; Noise,
'Brutality, and Obsceneness. One Particular I cannot omit, that 'in the high Character of Governor of Sicily, upon a solemn Day,
'a Day set a-part for Publick Prayer for the Safety of the Common'wealth; he stole at Evening, in a Chair, to a married Woman of

* This Story of Lord Wharton, is true; who, with some other Wretches went into a Pulpit, and defiled it in the most filthy Manner.

'infamous Character, against all Decency and Prudence, as well
'as against all Laws both Human and Divine. Didst thou think,
'O Verres, the Government of Sicily was given thee with so large
'a Commission, only by the Power of That to break all the Barrs
'of Law, Modesty, and Duty, to suppose all Mens Fortunes thine,
'and leave no House free from thy Rapine, or Lust, &c.

THIS Extract, to deal ingenuously, hath cost me more Pains than I think it is worth, having only served to convince me, that modern Corruptions are not to be paralleled by ancient Examples, without having recourse to Poetry or Fable. For instance, I never read in Story of a Law enacted to take away the Force of all Laws whatsoever; by which a Man may safely commit upon the last of June, what he would infallibly be hanged for if he committed on the first of July; by which the greatest Criminals may escape, provided they continue long enough in Power to antiquate their Crimes; and by stifling them a while, can deceive the Legislature into an Amnesty, of which the Enactors do not at that Time foresee the Consequence. A cautious Merchant will be apt to suspect, when he finds a Man who has the Repute of a cunning Dealer, and with whom he hath old Accounts, urging for a general Release. When I reflect on this Proceeding, I am not surprised, that those who contrived a Parliamentary Sponge for their Crimes, are now afraid of a new Revolution Sponge for their Money: And if it were possible to contrive a Sponge that could only affect those who had need of the other, perhaps it would not be ill employed.

---

---

No. 18. Thursday, December 7.

---

*Quippe ubi fas versum atq; nefas: tot bella per orbem:
Tam multæ Scelerum facies* ——————

IAM often violently tempted to let the World freely know who the Author of this Paper is; to tell them my Name and Titles at Length; which would prevent abundance of inconsistent Criticisms I daily hear upon it. Those who are Enemies to the Notions and Opinions I would advance, are sometimes apt to quarrel with the Examiner as defective in Point of Wit, and sometimes of Truth. At other Times they are so generous and candid, to allow, it is written by a Club; and, that very great Hands have Fingers in it. As for those who only appear its Adversaries in Print, they give me but very little Pain: The Paper I hold lies at my mercy, and I can govern it as I please; therefore, when I begin to find the Wit too bright, the Learning too deep, and the Satyr too keen for me to deal with, (a very frequent Case no doubt, where a Man is constantly attacked by such shrewd Adversaries) I peaceably fold it up, or fling it aside, and read no more. It would be happy for me to have the same Power over People's Tongues, and not be forced to hear my own Work railed at and commended fifty Times a Day; affecting all the while a Countenance wholly unconcerned; and joining out of Policy or good Manners with the Judgment of both Parties: This, I confess, is too great a Hardship for so bashful and unexperienced a Writer.

BUT, alas, I lye under another Discouragement of much more Weight: I was very unfortunate in the choice of my Party when I set up to be a Writer: Where is the Merit, or what Opportunity to discover our Wit, our Courage, or our Learning, in drawing our Pens for the Defence of a Cause, which the Q U E N and both Houses of Parliament, and nine Parts in ten of the Kingdom, have so unanimously embraced? I am cruelly afraid, we Politick Authors must begin to lessen our Expences, and lie for the Future at the Mercy of our Printers. All hopes now are gone of writing our Selves into Places or Pensions. A certain starveling Author who worked under the late Administration, told me with a heavy Heart, above a Month ago, That he and some others of his Brethren, had secretly offered their Service dog-cheap to the present Ministry; but were all refused, and are now maintained by Contribution, like Jacobites or Fanaticks. I have been of late employed out of perfect Commiseration, in doing them good Offices: For, whereas some were of Opinion that these hungry Zealots should not be suffered any longer in their malapert Way to snarl at the present Course of publick Proceedings; and whereas, others proposed, that they should be limited to a certain Number, and permitted to write for their Masters, in the same Manner as Counsel are assigned for other Criminals; that is, to say all they can in Defence of their Client, but not reflect upon the Court: I humbly gave my Advice, that they should be suffered to write on, as they used to do; which I did purely out of Regard to their Persons: For I hoped it would keep them out of Harms-way, and prevent them from falling into evil Courses, which although of little Consequence to the Publick, would certainly be fatal to themselves. If I have room at the Bottom of this Paper, I will transcribe a Petition to the present Ministry, sent me by one of these Authors, in Behalf of himself and fourscore of his Brethren.

FOR my own Part, notwithstanding the little Encouragement to be hoped for at this Time from the Men in Power, I shall continue my Paper 'till either the World or my self grow weary of it: The latter is easily determined; and for the former, I shall not leave it to the Partiality of either Party, but to the infallible Judgment of my Printer. One principal End I designed by it, was to undeceive those well-meaning People, who have been drawn unaware into a wrong Sense of Things, either by the common Prejudices of Education and Company, the great personal Qualities of some Party-leaders, or the foul Misrepresentations that were constantly made of all who durst differ from them in the smallest Article. I have known such Men struck with the Thoughts of some late Changes, which, as they pretend to think, were made without any Reason visible to the World. In Answer to this, it is not sufficient to alledge, that a good and wise Prince may be allowed to change his Ministers without giving a Reason to his Subjects; because it is probable, that he will not make such a Change without very important Reasons; and a good Subject ought to suppose, that in such a Case there are such Reasons, although he be not apprised of them; otherwise, he must inwardly tax his Prince of Capriciousness, Inconstancy, or ill Design. Such Reasons indeed, may not be obvious to Persons prejudiced, or at great Distance, or short Thinkers; and therefore if they be no Secrets of State, nor any ill Consequences to be apprehended from their Publication; it is no uncommendable Work in any private Hand to lay them open for the Satisfaction of all Men. And, if what I have already said, or shall hereafter say of this Kind, be thought to reflect upon Persons, although none have been named, I know not how it can possibly be avoided. The Queen in her Speech mentions with great Concern, that the Navy and other Offices are burthened with heavy Debts; and wishes that the like may be prevented for the Time to come. And, if it be now possible to prevent the Continuance of an Evil that hath been so long growing upon us, and is arrived to such a Height; surely those Corruptions and Mismanagements must have been great which first introduced them, before our Taxes were eaten up by Annuities.

IF I were able to rip up, and discover in all their Colours only about eight or nine Thousand of the most scandalous Abuses, that have been committed in all Parts of publick Management for twenty Years past, by a certain Set of Men and their Instruments; I should reckon it some Service to my Country and to Posterity. But, to say the Truth, I should be glad the Authors Names were conveyed to future Times along with their Actions. For, although the present Age may understand well enough the little Hints we give, the Parallels we draw, and the Characters we describe; yet this will all be lost to the next. However, if these Papers, reduced into a more durable Form, should happen to live until our Grand-children be Men; I hope they may have Curiosity enough to consult Annals, and compare Dates, in order to find out what Names were then intrusted with the Conduct of Affairs, in the Consequence whereof, themselves will so deeply share; like a heavy Debt in a private Family, which often lies an Incumbrance upon an Estate for three Generations.

BUT leaving the Care of informing Posterity to better Pens, I shall with due Regard to Truth, Discretion, and the Safety of my Person from the Men of the new-fangled Moderation, continue to take all proper Opportunities of letting the misled Part of the People see how grossly they have been abused, and in what Particulars: I also shall endeavour to convince them, that the present Course we are in, is the most probable Means, with the Blessing of God, to extricate our selves out of all our Difficulties.

AMONG those who are pleased to write or talk against this Paper, I have observed a strange Manner of Reasoning, which I should be glad to hear them explain themselves upon. They make no Ceremony of exclaiming upon all Occasions against a Change of Ministry, in so critical and dangerous a Conjuncture. What shall we, who heartily approve and join in those Proceedings, say in Defence of them? We own the Juncture of Affairs to be as they describe: We are pushed for an Answer, and are forced at last freely to confess, that the Corruptions and Abuses in every Branch of the Administration, were so numerous and intollerable, that all Things must have ended in Ruin, without some speedy Reformation. This I have already asserted in a former Paper; and the Replies I have read or heard, have been in plain Terms to affirm the direct Contrary; and not only to defend and celebrate the late Persons and Proceedings, but to threaten me with Law and Vengeance, for casting Reflections on so many great and honourable Men, whose Birth, Virtues and Abilities; whose Morals and Religion, whose Love of their Country and its Constitution in Church and State, were so universally allowed; and all this set off with odious Comparisons reflecting on the present Choice. Is not this in plain and direct Terms to tell all the World, that the Queen hath in a most dangerous Crisis turned out a whole Set of the best Ministers that ever served a Prince, without any Manner of Reason, but her Royal Pleasure; and brought in others of a Character directly contrary? And how so vile an Opinion as this can consist with the least Pretence to Loyalty or good Manners, let the World determine.

I CONFESS my self so little a Refiner in the Politicks, as not to be able to discover what other Motive, besides Obedience to the QUEEN, a Sense of publick Danger, and a true Love of their Country, joined with invincible Courage, could spirit up those great Men, who have now under Her Majesty's Authority undertaken the Direction of Affairs. What can they expect but the utmost Efforts of Malice from a Set of enraged domestick Adversaries, perpetually watching over their Conduct, crossing all their Designs, and using every Art to foment Divisions among them, in order to join with the Weakest upon any Rupture? The Difficulties they must encounter are nine Times more and greater than ever; and the Prospects of Interest, after the Reapings and Gleanings of so many Years, nine Times less. Every Misfortune at Home or Abroad, although the necessary Consequence of former Counsels, will be imputed to them; and all the good Success given to the Merit of former Schemes. A Sharper hath held your Cards all the Evening, played Booty, and lost your Money; and when Things are almost desperate, you employ an honest Gentleman to retrieve your Losses.

---

I WOULD ask whether the QUEEN's Speech doth not contain her Intentions, in every Particular relating to the Publick, that a good Subject, a Briton and a Protestant, can possibly have at Heart? To carry on the War in all its Parts, particularly in Spain, with the utmost Vigour, in order to procure a safe and honourable Peace for Us and our Allies; to find some Ways of paying the Debts on the Navy; to support and encourage the Church of England; to preserve the British Constitution according to the Union; to maintain the Indulgence by Law allowed to scrupulous Consciences; and, to employ none but such as are for the Protestant Succession in the House of Hanover. It is known enough, that Speeches on these Occasions are ever digested by the Advice of those who are in the chief Confidence; and consequently, that these are the Sentiments of her Majesty's Ministers, as well as her own; and we see, the two Houses have unanimously agreed with her in every Article. When the least Counterpaces are made to any of these Resolutions, it will then be Time enough for our Malecontents to bawl out Papery, Persecution, Arbitrary Power, and the Pretender. In the mean while, it is a little hard to think, that this Island can hold but six Men of Honesty and Ability enough to serve their Prince and Country; or that our Safety should depend upon their Credit, any more than it would upon the Breath in their Nostrils. Why should not a Revolution in the Ministry be sometimes necessary, as well as a Revolution in the Crown? It is to be presumed, the former is at least as lawful in it self; and perhaps the Experiment not quite so dangerous. The Revolution of the Sun about the Earth was formerly thought a necessary Expedient to solve Appearances, although it left many Difficulties unanswered; until Philosophers contrived a better, which is that of the Earth's Revolution about the Sun. This is found upon Experience to save much Time and Labour, to correct many irregular Motions, and is better suited to the Respect due from a Planet to a fixed Star.

---

---

No. 19. Thursday, December 14, 1710.

---

*Sunt quibus in Satyra videar nimis acer, & ultra Legem tendere opus: sine nervis altera, quicquid
Composui, pars esse putat* — — —

WHEN the Printer came last Week for his Copy, he brought along with him a Bundle of those Papers, which, in the Phrase of Whig Coffee-Houses, have swinged off the Examiner; most of which I had never seen or heard of before. I remember some Time ago in one of the Tatlers, to have read a Letter, wherein several Reasons are assigned for the present Corruption and Degeneracy of our Taste; but I think the Writer hath omitted the principal One, which I take to be the Prejudice of Parties. Neither can I excuse either Side of this Infirmitiy: I have heard the arrantest Drivellers Pro and Con commended for their Shrewdness even by Men of tolerable Judgment; and the best Performances exploded as Nonsense and Stupidity. This indeed may partly be imputed to Policy and Prudence; but it is chiefly owing to that Blindness, which Prejudice and Passion cast over the Understanding: I mention this, because I think it properly within my Province in quality of Examiner. And having granted more than is usual for an Enemy to do, I must now take Leave to say, that so weak a Cause, and so ruined a Faction, were never provided with Pens more resembling their Condition, or less suited to their Occasions.

*Non tali auxilio, nec defensoribus istis
Tempus eget* — — —

THIS is the more to be wondered at, when we consider they have the full Liberty of the Press; that they have no other Way left to recover themselves; and that they want not Men of excellent Parts to set their Arguments in the best Light they will bear. Now, if two Men would argue on both Sides with Fairness, good Sense, and good Manners; it would be no ill Entertainment to the Town, and perhaps be the most effectual Means to reconcile us. But I am apt to think, that Men of a great Genius are hardly brought to prostitute their Pens in a very odious Cause; which, besides, is more properly undertaken by Noise and Impudence, by gross Railing and Scurrility, by Calumny and Lying, and by little trifling Cavils and Carpings in the wrong Place, which those Whiffers use for Arguments and Answers.

I WAS well enough pleased with a Story of one of these Answerers, who in a Paper last Week found many Faults with a late Calculation of mine. Being it seems more deep learned than his Fellows, he was resolved to begin his Answer with a Latin Verse, as well as other Folks: His Business was to look out for something against an Examiner that would pretend to tax Accounts; and turning over Virgil, he had the Luck to find these Words, Fugiant Examina taxos; so down they went, and out they would have come, if one of his unlucky Prompters had not hindered it.

I HERE declare once for all, that if these People will not be quiet, I shall take their Bread out of their Mouths, and answer the Examiner my self; which I protest I have never yet done, although I have been often charged with it; neither have those Answers been written or published with my Privity, as malicious People are pleased to give out; nor do I believe the common Whiggish Report, That the Authors are hired by the Ministry to give my Paper a Value.

BUT the Friends of this Paper have given me more Uneasiness with their Impatience, than its Enemies by their Answers. I heard my self censured last Week by some of the former, for promising to discover the Corruptions in the late Administration, but never performing any Thing. The latter, on the other Side, are thundering out their Anathema's against me for discovering so many. I am at a Loss how to decide between these Contraries, and therefore shall proceed after my own Way, as I have hitherto done; my Design being of more Importance than that of Writing only to gratify the Spleen of one Side, or provoke that of the Other, although it may occasionally have both Effects.

I SHALL therefore go on to relate some Facts, that, in my humble Opinion, were no Hindrance to the Change of the Ministry.

THE first I shall mention, was That of introducing certain new Phrases into the Court Style, which had been very seldom or never made Use of in former Times. They usually ran in the following Terms: Madam, I cannot serve you while such a One is in Employment. I desire humbly to resign my Commission, if Mr. . . . continues Secretary of State. I cannot answer that the City will lend Money, unless my L—d . . . . be President of the Council. I must beg leave to surrender, except . . . . has the Staff. I must not accept the Seals, unless . . . . comes into the other Office. This hath been the Language of late Years from Subjects to their Prince. Thus they stood upon Terms, and must have their own Conditions to ruin the Nation; nay, this dutiful Manner of Capitulating, had spread so far, that every under-strapper began at length to perk up and assume: He expected a Regiment; or, his Son must be a Major; or, his Brother a Collector; else he threatned to Vote according to his Conscience.

ANOTHER of their glorious Attempts, was the Clause intended in the Bill for the Encouragement of Learning; by taking off the Obligation upon Fellows of Colleges in both Universities to enter upon Holy Orders: The Design of which, as I have heard the Undertakers often confess, was to remove the Care of educating Youth out of the Hands of the Clergy, who are apt to infuse into their Pupils too great a Regard for the Church and the Monarchy. But there was a farther Secret in this Clause, which may best be discovered by the first Projectors, or at least the Garblers of it; and these are known to be Collins and Tindall, in Conjunction with a most pious Lawyer their Disciple.

WHAT shall we say to their prodigious Skill in Arithmetick, discovered so constantly in their Decision of Elections; where they were able to make out by the Rule of False, that Three were more than Three and Twenty, and Fifteen than Fifty? Nay, it was a Maxim which I never heard any of them dispute, that in determining Elections, they were not to consider where the Right lay, but which of the Candidates was likelier to be true to the Cause. This they used to illustrate by a very apt and decent Similitude, of gaming with a Sharper; if you cannot cheat as well as he, you are certainly undone.

ANOTHER Cast of their Politicks was that of endeavouring to impeach an innocent * Lady, for no Reason imaginable, but her faithful and diligent Service to the Queen, and the Favour her Majesty bore to her upon that Account, when others had acted contrary in so shameful a Manner. What else was the Crime? Had she treated her Royal Mistress with Insolence or Neglect? Had she enriched her self by a long Practice of Bribery, and obtaining exorbitant Grants? Had she engrossed her Majesty's Favours without admitting any Access but through her Means? Had she heaped Employments upon her self, her Family and Dependants? Had she an imperious, haughty Behaviour? Or, after all, was it a perfect Blunder and Mistake of one Person for another? I have heard of a Man who lay all Night on a rough Pavement; and in the Morning, wondering what it could possibly be that made him rest so ill, happened to see a Feather under him, and imputed the Uneasiness of his Lodging to That. I remember likewise the Story of a Giant in Rablaïs, who used to feed upon Wind-Mills, but was unfortunately choaked with a small lump of fresh Butter, before a warm Oven.

AND here I cannot but observe how very refined some People are in their Generosity and Gratitude. There is a certain great Person (I shall not say of what Sex) who for many Years past was the constant Mark and Butt, against which our present Malecontents used to discharge their Resentment: Upon whom they bestowed all the Terms of Scurrility, that Malice, Envy and Indignation could invent; whom they publickly accused of every Vice that can possess a human Heart: Pride, Covetousness, Ingratitude, Oppression, Treachery, Dissimulation, Violence and Fury, all in the highest Extreams: But of late they have changed their Language on a sudden; that Person is now the most faithful and just that ever served a Prince; that Person, originally differing from them in Principles, as far as East and West; but united in Practice, and falling together, they are now reconciled, and find twenty Resemblances between each other, which they could never discover before. Tanti est ut placeam tibi perire.

BUT to return: How could it be longer suffered in a free Nation, that all Avenues to Preferment should be shut up, except a very few, when one or two stood constant Centry, who docked all Favours they handed down; or spread a huge invisible Net between the Prince and Subject, through which nothing of Value could pass? And here I cannot but admire at one Consequence from this Management, which is of an extraordinary Nature: Generally speaking, Princes who have ill Ministers are apt to suffer in their Reputation, as well as in the Love of the People: But it was not so with the Queen. When the Sun is overcast by those Clouds he exhales from the Earth, we still acknowledge his Light and Influence, and at last find he can dispel and drive them down to the Horizon. The wisest Prince, by the Necessity of Affairs, the Misrepresentations of designing Men, or, the innocent Mistakes even of a good Predecessor; may find himself encompassed by a Crew of Courtiers, whom Time, Opportunity and Success, have miserably corrupted. And if he can save himself and his People from Ruin, under the worst Administration, what may not his Subjects hope for; when, with their universal Applause he changeth Hands, and maketh Use of the best?

---

* The Lady Masham.

ANOTHER great Objection with me against the late Party, was the cruel Tyranny they put upon Conscience, by a barbarous Inquisition, refusing to admit the least Toleration or Indulgence. They imposed a hundred Tests, but could never be prevailed with to dispense with, or take off the smallest, or even admit of occasional Conformity; but went on daily (as their Apostle Tindall expresseth it) narrowing their Terms of Communion; pronouncing nine Parts in ten of the Kingdom Hereticks, and shutting them out of the Pale of their Church. These very Men, who talk so much of a Comprehension in Religion among us, how came they to allow so little of it in Politicks, which is their Sole Religion? You shall hear them pretending to bewail the Animosities kept up between the Church of England and Dissenters, where the Differences in Opinion are so few and inconsiderable; yet these very Sons of Moderation were pleased to excommunicate every Man who disagreed with them in the smallest Article of their Political Creed; or, who refused to receive any new Article, how difficult soever to digest, which the Leaders imposed at Pleasure to serve their own Interest.

I WILL quit this Subject for the present, when I have told one Story.

"There was a great King in Scythia, whose Dominions were bounded to the North, by the poor, mountainous Territories of a petty Lord, who paid Homage as the King's Vassal. The Scythian Prime Minister being largely Bribed, indirectly obtained his Master's Consent to suffer this Lord to build Forts, and provide himself with Arms, under Pretence of preventing the Inroads of the Tartars. This little depending Sovereign, finding he was now in a Condition to be troublesome, began to insist upon Terms, and threatned upon every Occasion to unite with the Tartars: Upon which the Prime Minister, who began to be in Pain about his Head, proposed a Match betwixt his Master and the only Daughter of this Tributary Lord, which he had the good Luck to bring to pass; and from that Time valued himself as Author of a most glorious Union, which indeed was grown of absolute Necessity by his Corruption." This Passage, cited literally from an old History of Sarmatia, I thought fit to set down, on Purpose to perplex little smattering Remarkers, and put them upon the Hunt for an Application.

---

No. 20. Thursday, December 21, 1710.

---

— Pugnacem scirent sapiente minorem.

AM very much at a Loss how to proceed upon the Subject intended in this Paper, which a new Incident hath led me to engage in: The Subject I mean, is that of Soldiers and the Army; but being a Matter wholly out of my Trade, I shall handle it in as cautious a Manner as I am able.

It is certain, that the Art of War hath suffered great Changes, almost in every Age and Country of the World; however, there are some Maxims relating to it, that will be eternal Truths, and which every reasonable Man must allow.

In the early Times of Greece and Rome, the Armies of those States were composed of their Citizens, who took no Pay, because the Quarrel was their own; and therefore the War was usually decided in one Campaign; or, if it lasted longer, yet in Winter the Soldiers returned to their several Callings, and were not distinguished from the rest of the People. The Gothic Governments in Europe, although they were of Military Institution, yet observed almost the same Method. I shall Instance only in England. Those who held Lands in Capite of the King, were obliged to attend him in his Wars with a certain Number of Men, who all held Lands from them at easy Rents on that Condition. These fought without Pay; and when the Service was over, returned again to their Farms. It is recorded of William Rufus, that being absent in Normandy, and engaged in a War with his Brother, he ordered twenty thousand Men to be raised and sent over from hence to supply his Army; but having struck up a Peace before they were embarked, he gave them leave to disband, on Condition they would pay him ten Shillings a Man; which amounted to a mighty Sum in those Days.

CONSIDER a Kingdom as a great Family, whereof the Prince is the Father; and it will appear plainly, that Mercenary Troops are only Servants armed, either to awe the Children at home; or else to defend from Invaders, the Family who are otherwise employed, and chuse to contribute out of their Stock for paying their Defenders, rather than leave their Affairs to be neglected in their Absence. The Art of making Soldiery a Trade, and keeping Armies in Pay, seems in Europe to have had two Originals. The first was Usurpation, when popular Men destroyed the Liberties of their Country, and seized the Power into their own Hands; which they were forced to maintain by hiring Guards to bridle the People. Such were anciently the Tyrants in most of the small States of Greece; and such were those in several Parts of Italy, about three or four Centuries ago, as Machiavel informs us. The other Original of Mercenary Armies, seems to have risen from larger Kingdoms or Commonwealths, which had subdued Provinces at a Distance, and were forced to maintain Troops upon them, to prevent Insurrections from the Natives: Of this Sort were Macedon, Carthage, and Rome of old; Venice and Holland at this Day; as well as most Kingdoms of Europe. So that Mercenary Forces in a free State, whether Monarchy or Commonwealth, seem only necessary, either for preserving their Conquests (which in such Governments it is not prudent to extend too far) or else for maintaining a War at a Distance.

IN this last, which at present is our most important Case, there are certain Maxims that all wise Governments have observed.

THE first I shall mention is, That no private Man should have a Commission to be General for Life, let his Merit and Services be ever so great. Or, if a Prince be unadvisedly brought to offer such a Commission in one Hand, let him (to save Time and Blood) deliver up his Crown with the other. The Romans, in the Height and Perfection of their Government, usually sent out one of the new Consuls to be General against their most formidable Enemy, and recalled the old one, who often returned before the next Election; and according as he had Merit, was sent to command in some other Part; which, perhaps, was continued to him for a second, and sometimes a third Year. But if Paulus Aemilius, or Scipio himself, had presumed to move the Senate to continue their Commissions for Life, they certainly would have fallen a Sacrifice to the Jealousy of the People. Cæsar indeed (between whom and a certain General, some of late with much Discretion have made a Parallel) had his Command in Gaul continued to him for five Years, and was afterwards made perpetual Dictator; that is to say, General for Life, which gave him the Power and the Will of utterly destroying the Roman Liberty. But in his Time the Romans were very much degenerated; and great Corruptions had crept into their Morals and Discipline. However, we see there still were some Remains of a noble Spirit among them: For, when Cæsar sent to be chosen Consul, notwithstanding his Absence, they decreed he should come in Person, give up his Command, and petere more majorum.

It is not impossible but a General may desire such a Commission out of Inadvertency, at the Instigation of his Friends; or, perhaps of his Enemies; or, merely for the Benefit and Honour of it, without intending any such dreadful Consequences; and in that Case, a wise Prince or State may barely refuse it without shewing any Marks of their Displeasure. But the Request in its own Nature is highly Criminal, and ought to be entered so upon Record, to terrify Others in Time to come from venturing to make it.

ANOTHER Maxim to be observed by a free State engaged in War, is to keep the Military Power in absolute Subjection to the Civil, nor ever suffer the former to influence or interfere with the latter. A General and his Army are Servants, hired by the Civil Power to act as they are directed from thence, and with a Commission large or limited as the Administration shall think fit; for which they are largely paid in Profit and Honour. The whole System by which Armies are governed, is quite alien from the peaceful Institutions of States at home; and if the Rewards be so inviting as to tempt a Senator to take a Post in the Army, whilst he is there on his Duty, he ought to consider himself in no other Capacity. I know not any Sort of Men so apt as Soldiers are, to reprimand those who presume to interfere in what relates to their Trade. When they hear any of us in a Coffee House, wondering that such a Victory was not pursued; complaining that such a Town cost more Men and Money than it was worth to take it; or that such an Opportunity was lost, of fighting the Enemy; they presently reprove us, and often with Justice enough, for meddling in Matters out of our Sphere; and clearly convince us of our Mistakes in Terms of Art that none of us understand. Nor do we escape so; for they reflect with the utmost Contempt on our Ignorance, that we who sit at home in Ease and Security, never stirring from our Fire-sides, should pretend from Books, and general Reason, to argue upon Military Affairs; which after all, if we may judge from the share of Intellectuals in some who are said to excel that Way, is not so very profound or difficult a Science. But, if there be any Weight in what they offer, as perhaps there may be a great deal; surely these Gentlemen have a much weaker Pretence to concern themselves in Matters of the Cabinet, which are always either far above, or much beside their Capacities. Soldiers may as well pretend to prescribe Rules for Trade; to determine Points in Philosophy; to be Moderators in an Assembly of Divines; or direct in a Court of Justice; as to misplace their Talent in examining Affairs of State, especially in what relates to the Choice of Ministers, who are never so likely to be ill chosen as when approved by them. It would be endless to shew how pernicious all Steps of this Nature have been in many Parts and Ages of the World. I shall only produce two at present; one in Rome, and the other in England. The first is of Cæsar, when he came to the City with his Soldiers to settle the Ministry, there was an End of their Liberty for ever. The second was in the great Rebellion against King Charles the First. The King and both Houses were agreed upon the Terms of a Peace; but the Officers of the Army, (as Ludlow relates it) set a Guard upon the House of Commons, took a List of the Members, and kept all by Force out of the House, except those who were for bringing the King to a Tryal. Some Years after, when they erected a Military Government, and ruled the Island by Major-Generals, we received most admirable Instances of their Skill in Politicks. To say the Truth, such formidable Sticklers can have but two Reasons for desiring to interfere in the Administration; the first is that of Cæsar and Cromwell, of which, God forbid I should accuse or suspect any Body; since the second is pernicious enough, and that is, To preserve those in Power who are for perpetuating a War, rather than see others advanced, who, they are sure, will use all proper Means to promote a safe and honourable Peace.

THIRDLY, Since it is observed of Armies, that in the present Age they are brought to some Degree of Humanity, and a more regular Demeanour to each other, and to the World, than in former Times: It is certainly a good Maxim to endeavour preserving this Temper among them; without which, they would soon degenerate into Savages. To this End it would be prudent, among other Things, to forbid that detestable Custom of drinking to the Damnation or Confusion of any Person whatsoever.

SUCH desperate Acts, and the Opinions infused along with them, into Heads already inflamed by Youth and Wine, are enough to scatter Madness and Sedition through a whole Camp. So seldom upon their Knees to Pray, and so often to Curse! This is not properly Atheism, but a Sort of Anti-Religion prescribed by the Devil, and which an Atheist of common Sense would scorn as an Absurdity. I have heard it mentioned as a common Practice last Autumn, somewhere or other, to drink Damnation and Confusion (and this with Circumstances very aggravating and horrid) to the New Ministry, and to those who had any Hand in turning out the Old; that is to say, to those Persons whom her Majesty has thought fit to employ in her greatest Affairs; with something more than a Glance against the Queen herself. And if it be true, that these Orgyes were attended with certain doubtful Words, of standing by their General, who without Question abhorred them: Let any Man consider the Consequence of such Dispositions, if they should happen to spread. I could only wish, for the Honour of the Army, as well as of the Queen and Ministry, that a Remedy had been applied to the Disease, in the Place and Time where it grew. If Men of such Principles were able to propagate them in a Camp, and were sure of a General for Life, who had any Tincture of Ambition, we might soon bid farewell to Ministries and Parliaments, whether new or old.

I AM only sorry such an Accident hath happened towards the Close of a War, when it is chiefly the Interest of those Gentlemen who have Posts in the Army, to behave themselves in such a Manner as might encourage the Legislature to make some Provision for them, when there will be no further need of their Service. They are to consider themselves as Persons, by their Educations, unqualified for many other Stations of Life. Their Fortunes will not suffer them to retain to a Party after its Fall; nor have they Weight or Abilities to help towards its Resurrection. Their future Dependence is wholly upon the Prince and Parliament, to which they will never make their Way, by solemn Execrations of the Ministry; a Ministry of the Queen's own Election, and fully answering the Wishes of her People. This unhappy Step in some of their Brethren, may pass for an uncontrollable Argument, that Politicks are not their Business, or their Element. The Fortune of War hath raised several Persons up to swelling Titles, and great Commands over Numbers of Men, which they are too apt to transfer along with them into Civil Life, and appear in all Companies as if they were at the Head of their Regiments, with a Sort of Deportment that ought to have been dropt behind, in that short Passage to Harwich. It puts me in Mind of a Dialogue in Lucian, where Charon wafting one of their Predecessors over Styx, ordered him to strip off his Armour and fine Cloaths, yet still thought him too heavy; but, said he, put off likewise that Pride and Presumption; those high swelling Words, and that vain Glory; because they were of no Use on the other Side the Water. Thus, if all that Array of Military Grandeur were confined to the proper Scene, it would be much more for the Interest of the Owners, and less offensive to their Fellow Subjects.

---

No. 21. Thursday, December 28, 1710.

---

Nam & majorum instituta tueri sacris, cærementisq; retinendis, sapientis est.

— *Ruituraq; semper
Stat (mirum!) moles* —

WHOEVER is a true Lover of our Constitution, must needs be pleased to see what successful Endeavours are daily made to restore it in every Branch to its antient Form, from the languishing Condition it hath long lain in, and with such deadly Symptoms.

I HAVE already handled some Abuses during the late Management, and shall in convenient Time go on with the rest. Hitherto I have confined my self to those of the State; but with the good Leave of some who think it a Matter of small Moment, I shall now take Liberty to say something of the Church.

FOR several Years past, there hath not, I think, in Europe, been any Society of Men upon so unhappy a Foot, as the Clergy of England, or more hardly treated by those very Persons from whom they deserved much better Quarter, and in whose Power they chiefly had put it to use them so ill. I would not willingly misrepresent Facts; but I think it generally allowed by Enemies and Friends, that the bold and brave Defences made before the Revolution against those many Invasions of our Rights, proceeded principally from the Clergy; who are likewise known to have rejected all Advances made them to close with the Measures at that Time concerting; while the Dissenters, to gratify their Ambition and Revenge, fell into the basest Compliances with the Court; approved of all Proceedings by their numerous and fulsome Addresses; and took Employments and Commissions by Virtue of the dispensing Power, against the direct Laws of the Land. All this is so true, that if ever the Pretender come in, they will, next to those of his own Religion, have the fairest Claim and Pretensions to his Favour, from their Merit and eminent Services to his supposed Father, who without such Encouragement would probably never have been misled to go the Lengths he did. It should likewise be remembred to the everlasting Honour of the London Divines, that in those dangerous Times they Writ and Published the best Collection of Arguments against Popery, that ever appeared in the World. At the Revolution, the Body of the Clergy joined heartily in the common Cause (except a few, whose Sufferings perhaps have attoned for their Mistakes) like Men who are content to go about, for avoiding a Gulph or a Precipice, but come into the old strait Road again as soon as they can. But another Temper had now began to prevail. For, as in the Reign of King Charles the First, several well-meaning People were ready to join in reforming some Abuses; while others, who had deeper Designs, were still calling out for a thorow Reformation, which ended at last in the Ruin of the Kingdom; so, after the late King's coming to the Throne, there was a restless Cry from Men of the same Principles, for a thorow Revolution, which as some were carrying it on, must have ended in the Destruction of the Monarchy and Church.

WHAT a violent Humour hath run ever since against the Clergy, and from what Corner spread and fomented, is, I believe manifest to all Men. It looked like a set Quarrel against Christianity; and, if we call to mind several of the Leaders, it must in a great Measure have been actually so. Nothing was more common in Writing and Conversation, than to hear that Reverend Body charged in gross with what was utterly Inconsistent: Despised for their Poverty, hated for their Riches; reproached with Avarice, and taxed with Luxury; accused for promoting arbitrary Power, and resisting the Prerogative; censured for their Pride, and scorned for their Meanness of Spirit. The Representatives of the lower Clergy railed at for disputing the Power of the Bishops, by the known Abhorers of Episcopacy; and abused for doing nothing in the Convocations, by those very Men who helped to bind up their Hands. The Vice, the Folly, the Ignorance of every single Man, were laid upon the Character. Their Jurisdiction, Censures and Discipline trampled under Foot, yet mighty Complaints against their excessive Power. The Men of Wit employed to turn the Priesthood it self into Ridicule. In short, groaning every where under the Weight of Poverty, Oppression, Contempt and Obloquy. A fair Return for the Time and Money spent in their Education to fit them for the Service of the Altar; and a fair Encouragement for worthy Men to come into the Church. However, it may be some Comfort for Persons of that Holy Function, that their Divine Founder, as well as His Harbinger, met with the like Reception. John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say he hath a Devil; the Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, behold a Glutton and a Wine-bibber, &c.

IN this deplorable State of the Clergy, nothing but the Hand of Providence, working by its glorious Instrument, the QUEEN, could have been able to turn the Peoples Hearts so surprizingly in their Favour. This Princess, destined for the Safety of Europe, and a Blessing to her Subjects, began Her Reign with a noble Benefaction to the Church; and it was hoped, the Nation would have followed such an Example; which nothing could have prevented, but the false Politicks of a Set of Men, who form their Maxims upon those of every tottering Common-wealth, which is always struggling for Life, subsisting by Expedients, and often at the Mercy of every powerful Neighbour. These Men take it into their Imagination, that Trade can never flourish unless the Country becomes a common Receptacle for all Nations, Religions, and Languages; a System only proper for small popular States, but altogether unworthy; and below the Dignity of an Imperial Crown; which with us is best upheld by a Monarch in Possession of his just Prerogative, a Senate of Nobles and of Commons, and a Clergy established in its due Rights with a suitable Maintenance by Law. But these Men come with the Spirit of Shop-keepers to frame Rules for the Administration of Kingdoms; or, as if they thought the whole Art of Government consisted in the Importation of Nutmegs, and the Curing of Herrings. Such an Island as ours can afford enough to support the Majesty of a Crown, the Honour of a Nobility, and the Dignity of a Magistracy: We can encourage Arts and Sciences, maintain our Bishops and Clergy; and suffer our Gentry to live in a decent hospitable Manner; yet still there will remain Hands sufficient for Trade and Manufactures, which do always indeed deserve the best Encouragement, but not to a Degree of sending every living Soul into the Warehouse or the Workhouse.

THIS Pedantry of Republican Politicks hath done infinite Mischief among us: To this we owe those noble Schemes of treating Christianity as a System of Speculative Opinions, which no Man should be bound to believe; of making the Being and the Worship of God, a Creature of the State. In Consequence of these, that the Teachers of Religion ought to hold their Maintenance at Pleasure, or live by the Alms and charitable C<sup>ollect</sup>ion of the People; and be equally encouraged of all Opinions: That, they should be prescribed what to teach, by those who are to learn from them; and upon Default, have a Staff and a Pair of Shoes left at their Door; with many other Projects of equal Piety, Wisdom, and Good Nature.

BUT, God be thanked, they and their Schemes are vanished, and their Places shall know them no more. When I think of that Inundation of Atheism, Infidelity, Prophaneness, and Lasciviousness which were like to overwhelm us; from what Mouths and Hearts it first proceeded; and how the People joined with the QUEEN's Endeavours to divert this Flood; I cannot but reflect on that remarkable Passage in the Revelations, where the Serpent with SEVEN Heads cast out of his Mouth Water after the Woman like a Flood, that he might cause Her to be carried away of the Flood: But the EARTH helped the Woman, and the Earth opened her Mouth, and swallowed up the Flood which the Dragon had cast out of his Mouth. For, the QUEEN having changed her Ministry suitable to her own Wisdom, and the Wishes of her Subjects, and having called a Free Parliament; at the same Time summoned the Convocation, by Her Royal Writ, as in all Times had been accustomed: And soon after their Meeting, sent a most gracious Letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to be communicated to the Bishops and Clergy of his Province; taking Notice of the loose and profane Principles which had been openly scattered and propagated among her Subjects: That the Consultations of the Clergy were particularly requisite to repress and prevent such daring Attempts, for which her Subjects, from all Parts of the Kingdom have shewn their just Abhorrence. She hopes, the Endeavours of the Clergy, in this Respect, will not be unsuccessful; and for Her Part, is ready to give them all fit Encouragement, to proceed in the Dispatch of such Business as properly belongs to them; and to grant them Powers requisite to carry on so good a Work. In Conclusion, earnestly recommending to them, to avoid Disputes; and determining to do all that in her lies to compose and extinguish them.

It is to be hoped, that this last Part of Her Majesty's Letter, will be the first she will please to execute; for, it seems, this very Letter created the first Dispute. The Fact whereof was thus related: The Upper House having formed an Address to the Q U E E N, before they received Her Majesty's Letter, sent both Address and Letter together, to the Lower House, with a Message, excusing their not mentioning the Letter in the Address, because this was formed before the other was received. The Lower House returned them, with a Desire, That an Address might be formed, with due Regard and Acknowledgments for the Letter. After some Difficulties, the same Address was sent down again with a Clause inserted, making some short mention of the said Letter. This the Lower House did not think sufficient, and sent it back again with the same Request: Whereupon the Archbishop, after a short Consultation with some of his Brethren, immediately adjourned the Convocation for a Month; and no Address at all was sent to the Q U E E N.

I UNDERSTAND not Ecclesiastical Affairs well enough to comment upon this Matter; but it seems to me, that all Methods of doing Service to the Church and Kingdom, by Means of a Convocation, may be at any Time eluded, if there be no Remedy against such an Incident. And, if this Proceeding be agreeable to the Institution, spiritual Assemblies must needs be strangely contrived, very different from any Lay Senate yet known in the World. Surely from the Nature of such a Synod, it must be a very unhappy Circumstance, when the Majority of the Bishops draws one way, and that of the Lower Clergy another. The latter, I think, are not at this Time suspected for any Principles bordering upon those professed by Enemies to Episcopacy; and if they happen to differ from the greater Part of the present Set of Bishops, I doubt it will call some Things to mind, that may turn the Scale of general Favour on the inferior Clergies Side; who with a profound Duty to Her Majesty, are perfectly pleased with the present Turn of Affairs. Besides, curious People will be apt to enquire into the Dates of some Promotions; to call to mind what Designs were then upon the Anvil; and from thence make malicious Deductions. Perhaps they will observe the Manner of Voting on the Bishops Bench, and compare it with what shall pass in the Upper House of Convocation. There is, however, one Comfort, that under the present Dispositions of the Kingdom, a dislike to the Proceedings of any of their Lordships, even to the Number of a Majority, will be purely Personal, and not turned to the Disadvantage of the Order. And for my Part, as I am a true Lover of the Church, I had rather find the Inclinations of the People favourable to Episcopacy in general, than see a Majority of Prelates cryed up by those who are known Enemies to the Character. Nor, indeed, hath any Thing given me more Offence for several Years past, than to observe how some of that Bench have been caressed by certain Persons; and others of them openly celebrated by the infamous Pens of Atheists, Republicans, and Fanaticks.

TIME and Mortality can only remedy these Inconveniences in the Church, which are not to be cured, like those in the State, by a Change of Ministry. If we may guess the Temper of a Convocation, from the Choice of a Prolocutor, as it is usual to do that of a House of Commons by the Speaker; we may expect great Things from that Reverend Body, who have done themselves much Reputation, by pitching upon a Gentleman of so much Piety, Wit, and Learning, for that Office; and one who is so thoroughly versed in those Parts of Knowledge which are proper for it. I am sorry that the three Latin Speeches, delivered upon presenting the Prolocutor, were not made publick; they might perhaps have given us some Light into the Dispositions of each House: And besides, one of them is said to be so peculiar in the Style and Matter, as might have made up in Entertainment, what it wanted in Instruction.

---

---

No. 22. Thursday, January 4, 1710.

---

Nulle sunt occultiores insidia, quam eae que latent in simulatione officii, aut in aliquo necessitudinis nomine.

TH E following Answer is written in the true Style, and with the usual Candour of such Pieces; which I have imitated to the best of my Skill; and doubt not but the Reader will be extreamly satisfied with it.

*The EXAMINER Cross-examined: Or,
A full Answer to the last EXAMINER.*

IF I durst be so bold with this Author, I would gladly ask him a familiar Question; Pray, Sir, Who made you an Examiner? He talks in one of his insipid Papers, of eight or nine thousand Corruptions, while We were at the Head of Affairs; yet, in all this Time he hath hardly produced fifty: Parturunt montes, &c. — Hor. But I shall confine my self at present, to his last Paper. He tells us, The Queen began her Reign with a noble Benefaction to the Church. Here's Priestcraft with a Witness; this is the constant Language of your High-Flyers, to call those who are hired to teach the Religion of the Magistrate, by the Name of the Church. But this is not all; for in the very next Line he says, It was hoped the Nation would have followed this Example. You see the Faction begins already to speak out: This is an open Demand for the Abby-Lands; this furious Zealot would have us Priest-ridden again, like our Popish Ancestors: But, it is to be hoped the Government will take timely Care to suppress such audacious Attempts; else we have spent so much Blood and Treasure to very little Purpose, in maintaining Religion and Revolution. But what can we expect from a Man, who at one Blow endeavours to ruin our Trade? A Country, says he, may flourish (these are his own Words) without being the common Receptacle for all Nations, Religions, and Languages. What! We must immediately banish or murder the Palatines; forbid all Foreign Merchants, not only the Exchange, but the Kingdom; persecute the Dissenters with Fire and Faggot; and make it High Treason to speak any other Tongue but English. In another Place he talks of a Serpent with seven Heads, which is a manifest Corruption of the Text; for the Words seven Heads are not mentioned in that Verse. However, we know what Serpent he would mean; a Serpent with fourteen Legs; or, indeed, no Serpent at all, but seven great Men who were the best Ministers, the truest Protestants, and the most disinterested Patriots that ever served a Prince. But nothing is so inconsistent as this Writer; I know not whether to call him a Whig or a Tory, a Protestant or a Papist: He finds fault with Convocations; says, they are Assemblies strangely contrived; and yet lays the Fault upon Us, that we bound their Hands: I wish we could have bound their Tongues too; but as fast as their Hands were bound, they could make a Shift to hold their Pens, and have their Share in the Guilt of ruining the hopefulllest Party and Ministry that ever prescribed to a Crown. This captious Gentleman is angry to see a Majority of Prelates cried up by those who are Enemies to the Character; now I always thought, that the Concessions of Enemies were more to a Man's Advantage than the Praise of his Friends. Time and Mortality, he says, can only remedy these Inconveniences in the Church. That is, in other Words, When certain Bishops are dead, we shall have others of our own Stamp. Not so fast: You are not yet so sure of your Game. We have already got one comfortable Loss in Spain, although by a General of our own. For Joy of which, our Junta had a merry Meeting at the House of their great Proselyte, on the very Day we received the happy News. One or two more such Blows would, perhaps, set us right again; and then we can employ Mortality as well as others. He concludes with wishing, that three Letters, spoke when the Prolocutor was presented, were made publick. I suppose he would be content with One, and that is more than we shall humour him to grant. However, I hope he will allow it possible to have Grace, without either Eloquence or Latin; which is all I shall say to his malicious Innuendo.

HAVING thus, I hope, given a full, satisfactory Answer to the Examiner's last Paper; I shall now go on to a more important Affair; which is, to prove, by several undeniable Instances, that the late Ministry, and their Abettors, were true Friends to the Church. It is yet, I confess, a Secret to the Clergy, wherein this Friendship did consist. For Information therefore of that Reverend Body, that they may never forget their Benefactors, as well as of all others who may be equally ignorant; I have determined to display our Merits to the World upon that weighty Article. And I could wish, that what I am to say were to be written in Brass, for an eternal Memorial; the rather, because for the future, the Church must endeavour to stand unsupported by those Patrons, who expired in doing it their last good Office, and will never rise to preserve it any more.

LET us therefore produce the pious Endeavours of these Church-Defenders, who were its Patrons by their Power and Authority, as well as Ornaments of it by their Exemplary Lives.

First, S<sup>t</sup>. Paul tells us, There must be Heresies in the Church, that the Truth may be manifest; and therefore by due Course of reasoning, the more Heresies there are, the more manifest will the Truth be made. This being maturely considered by these Lovers of the Church, they endeavoured to propagate as many Heresies as they could, that the Light of Truth might shine the clearer.

Secondly, To shew their Zeal for the Church's Defence, they took the Care of it intirely out of the Hands of God Almighty (because that was a foreign Jurisdiction) and made it their own Creature, depending altogether upon them; and issued out their Orders to Tindal, and others, to give publick Notice of it.

Thirdly, BECAUSE Charity is the most celebrated of all Christian Virtues, therefore they extended theirs beyond all Bounds; and instead of shutting the Church against Dissenters, were ready to open it to all Comers, and break down its Walls, rather than that any should want room to enter. The Strength of a State, we know, consisteth in the Number of People, how different soever in their Callings; and why should not the Strength of a Church consist in the same, how different soever in their Creeds? For that Reason, they charitably attempted to abolish the Test, which tyed up so many Hands from getting Employments, in order to protect the Church.

I KNOW very well that this Attempt is objected to us as a Crime, by several malignant Tories; and denied as a Slander by many unthinking People among our selves. The latter are apt in their Defence to ask such Questions as these; Was your Test re- pealed? Had we not a Majority? Might we not have done it if we pleased? To which the others answer, You did what you could; you prepared the Way, but you found a fatal Impediment from that Quarter, whence the Sanction of the Law must come; and therefore to save your Credit, you condemned a Paper to be burnt which your selves had brought in. But alas! The Miscarriage of that noble Project for the Safety of the Church, had another Original; the Knowledge whereof depends upon a Piece of secret History that I shall now lay open.

THESE Church Protectors had directed a Presbyterian Preacher to draw up a Bill for repealing the Test: It was accordingly done with great Art; and in the Preamble, several Expressions of Civility to the established Church; and when it came to the Qualifications of all those who were to enter on any Office, the Compiler had taken special Care to make them large enough for all Christians whatsoever, by transcribing the very Words (only formed into an Oath) which Quakers are obliged to profess by a former Act of Parliament; as I shall here set them down. I A. B. profess Faith in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ his eternal Son, the true God; and in the Holy Spirit, one God blessed for ever more; and do acknowledge the holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by divine Inspiration. This Bill was carried to the chief Leaders for their Approbation, with these terrible Words turned into an Oath: What should they do? Those few among them who fancied they believed in God, were sure they did not believe in Christ, or the Holy Spirit, or one Syllable of the Bible; and they were as sure that every Body knew their Opinion in those Matters, which indeed they had been always too sincere to Disguise; how therefore could they take such an Oath as that, without ruining their Reputation with Tindal, Toland, Coward, Collins, Clendon, and all the Tribe of Free-Thinkers; and so give a Scandal to weak Unbelievers. Upon this nice Point of Honour and Conscience the Matter was hushed, the Project for repealing the Test let fall, and the Sacrament left as the smaller Evil of the two.

Fourthly, These Pillars of the Church, because the Harvest was great, and the Labourers few, and because they would ease the Bishops from that grievous Trouble of laying on Hands; were willing to allow that Power to all men whatsoever, to prevent that terrible Consequence of unchurching those, who thought a Hand from under a Cloak, as effectual as from Lawn-Sleeves. And indeed, what could more contribute to the Advancement of true Religion, than a Bill of General Naturalization for Priesthood?

Fifthly, IN order to fix Religion in the Minds of Men, because Truth never appears so fair as when confronted with Falshood; they directed Books to be Published, that denied the Being of a God, the Divinity of the Second and Third Person, the Truth of all Revelation, and the Immortality of the Soul. To this we owe that great Sense of Religion, that Respect and Kindness to the Clergy, and that true Love of Virtue so manifest of late Years among the Youth of our Nation. Nor could any Thing be more Discreet, than to leave the Merits of each Cause to such wise impartial Judges, who might otherwise fall under the Slavery of believing by Education and Prejudice.

Sixthly, BECAUSE nothing so much distracts the Thoughts, as too great Variety of Subjects; therefore they had kindly prepared a Bill, to prescribe the Clergy what Subjects they should Preach upon, and in what Manner, that they might be at no Loss; and this, no doubt, was a proper Work for such Hands, so thoroughly versed in the Theory and Practice of all Christian Duties.

Seventhly, To save Trouble and Expence to the Clergy, they contrived that Convocations should meet as seldom as possible; and when they were suffered to assemble, would never allow them to meddle with any Business; because they said, the Office of a Clergyman was enough to take up the whole Man. For the same Reason they were very desirous to excuse the Bishops from sitting in Parliament, that they might be at more Leisure to stay at Home and look after the Clergy.

I SHALL mention at present but one more Instance of their pious Zeal for the Church. They had somewhere heard the Maxim, that Sanguis Martyrum est Semen Ecclesie; therefore, in order to sow this Seed, they began with Impeaching a Clergyman: And that it might be a true Martyrdom in every Circumstance, they proceeded as much as possible against common Law; which the long-Robe Part of the Managers knew was in a hundred Instances directly contrary to all their Positions, and were sufficiently warned of it before-hand; but their Love of the Church prevailed. Neither was this Impeachment an Affair taken up on a sudden. For, a certain great Person, (whose Character hath been lately Published by some stupid and lying Writer) who very much distinguished himself by his Zeal in forwarding this Impeachment, had several Years ago endeavoured to persuade the late King to give way to just such another Attempt. He told his Majesty, there was a certain Clergyman preached very dangerous Sermons, and that the only Way to put a Stop to such Insolence, was to Impeach him in Parliament. The King enquired the Character of the Man; O Sir, said my Lord, the most violent, hot, positive Fellow in England; so extreamly wilful, that I believe he would be heartily glad to be a Martyr. The King answered, Is it so? Then I am resolved to disappoint him; and would never hear more of the Matter; by which that hopeful Project unhappily miscarried.

I HAVE hitherto confined my self to those Endeavours for the good of the Church, which were common to all the Leaders and Principal Men of Our Party; but if my Paper were not drawing towards an End, I could produce several Instances of particular Persons, who by their exemplary Lives and Actions have confirmed the Character so justly due to the whole Body. I shall at present mention only two, and illustrate the Merits of each by a Matter of Fact.

THAT worthy Patriot and true Lover of the Church, whom a late Examiner is supposed to reflect on under the Name of Verres, felt a pious Impulse to be a Benefactor to the Cathedral of Gloucester; but how to do it in the most decent, generous Manner, was the Question. At last he thought of an Expedient: One Morning or Night he stole into the Church, mounted upon the Altar, and there did that which in cleanly Phrase is called disburthening of Nature: He was discovered, prosecuted, and condemned to pay a thousand Pounds; which Sum was all employed to support the Church, as no doubt, the Benefactor meant it.

THERE is another Person whom the same Writer is thought to point at under the Name of Will Bigamy. This Gentleman, knowing that Marriage Fees were a considerable Perquisite to the Clergy, found out a Way of improving them Cent. per Cent. for the good of the Church. His Invention was to marry a second Wife while the first was alive; convincing her of the Lawfulness by such Arguments, as he did not doubt would make others follow the same Example: These he had drawn up in Writing with Intention to publish for the general Good; and it is hoped he may now have Leisure to finish them.

---

---

No. 23. Thursday 11, 1710.

---

Bellum ita suscipiatur, ut nihil aliud nisi Pax quæsita videatur.

I AM satisfied, that no reasonable Man of either Party, can justly be offended at any Thing I said in one of my Papers relating to the Army: From the Maxims I there laid down, perhaps many Persons may conclude, that I had a mind the World should think, there had been Occasion given by some late Abuses among Men of that Calling; and they conclude right. For my Intention is, that my Hints may be understood, and my Quotations and Allegories applied; and I am in some Pain to think that in the Orcades on one Side, and the Western Coasts of Ireland on the other, the Examiner may want a Key in several Parts, which I wish I could furnish them with. As for the French King, I am under no concern at all; I hear he hath left off reading my Papers, and by what he hath found in them, dislikes our Proceedings more than ever; and intends either to make great Additions to his Armies, or propose new Terms for a Peace: So false is that which is commonly reported, of his mighty Satisfaction in our Change of Ministry: And I think it clear that his late Letter of Thanks to the Tories of Great-Britain, must either have been extorted from him against his Judgment; or was a Cast of his Politicks to set the People against the present Ministry; wherein it hath wonderfully succeeded.

BUT, although I have never heard, or never regarded any Objections made against that Paper, which mentions the Army; yet I intended this as a Sort of Apology for it. And first, I declare, (because we live in a mistaking World) that in hinting at some Proceedings, wherein a few Persons are said to be concerned, I did not intend to charge them upon the Body of the Army. I have too much detested that barbarous Injustice among the Writers of a late Party, to be ever guilty of it my self; I mean the accusing Societies for the Crimes of a few. On the other Side, I must take Leave to believe, that Armies are no more exempt from Corruptions than other Numbers of Men. The Maxims proposed were occasionally introduced by the Report of certain Facts, which I am bound to believe is true, because I am sure, considering what hath passed, it would be a Crime to think otherwise. All Posts in the Army; all Employments at Court, and many others, are (or ought to be) given and resumed at the meer Pleasure of the Prince; yet when I see a great Officer broke, a Change made in the Court, or the Ministry, and this under the most just and gracious Princess that ever reigned; I must naturally conclude it is done upon prudent Considerations, and for some great Demerit in the Sufferers. But then, is not the Punishment sufficient? Is it Generous or Charitable to trample on the Unfortunate, and expose their Faults to the World in the strongest Colours? And would it not suit better with Magnanimity as well as common good Nature, to leave them at quiet to their own Thoughts and Repentance? Yes, without Question, provided it could be so contrived, that their very Names, as well as Actions, might be forgotten for ever: Such an Act of Oblivion would be for the Honour of our Nation, and beget a better Opinion of us with Posterity; and then I might have spared the World and my self the Trouble of Examining. But, at present, there is a cruel Dilemma in the Case: The Friends and Abettors of the late Ministry are every Day publishing their Praises to the World, and casting Reflections upon the present Persons in Power. This is so barefaced an Aspersion upon the Queen, that I know not how any good Subject can with Patience endure it, although he were ever so indifferent with Regard to the Opinions in Dispute. Shall they who have lost all Power and Love of the People, be allowed to scatter their Poison; and shall not those, who are, at least, of the strongest Side, be suffered to bring an Antidote? And how can we undeceive the deluded Remainder, but by letting them see, that those discarded Statesmen were justly laid aside; and producing as many Instances to prove it as we can? Not from any personal Hatred to them, but in Justification to the best of Queens. The many Scurrilities I have heard and read against this poor Paper of mine, are in such a Strain, that considering the present State of Affairs, they look like a Jest. They usually run after the following Manner: What? Shall this insolent Writer presume to censure the late Ministry, the ablest, the most faithful, and truest Lovers of their Country, and its Constitution, that ever served a Prince? Shall he reflect on the best House of Commons that ever sate within those Walls? Hath not the Queen changed both for a Ministry and Parliament of Jacobites and High-flyers, who are selling us to France, and bringing over the Pretender? This is the very Sum and Force of all their Reasonings, and this their Method of complaining against the Examiner. In Them it is humble and loyal to reflect upon the Queen, and the Ministry, and Parliament she hath chosen with the universal Applause of her People: In Us it is insolent to defend her Majesty and her Choice; or to answer their Objections, by shewing the Reasons why those Changes were necessary.

THE same Style hath been used in the late Case concerning some Gentlemen in the Army: Such a Clamour was raised by a Set of Men, who had the Boldness to tax the Administration with Cruelty and Injustice, that I thought it necessary to interfere a little, by shewing the ill Consequences that might arise from some Proceedings, although without Application to particular Persons. And what do they offer in Answer? Nothing but a few poor Common-places against Calumny and Informers; which might have been full as just and seasonable in a Plot against the Sacred Person of the Queen.

BUT, by the Way; why are these idle People so indiscreet to name those two Words, which afford Occasion of laying open to the World such an infamous Scene of Subornation and Perjury, as well as Calumny and Informing, as I believe is without Example: When a whole Cabal attempted an Action, wherein a * condemned Criminal refused to join with them for the Reward of his Life? Not that I disapprove their Sagacity, who could foretel so long before, by what Hand they should one Day fall; and therefore thought any Means justifiable by which they might prevent it.

BUT waving this at present; it must be owned in Justice to the

---

* Greg.

Army, that those Violences did not proceed so far among them as some have believed; nor ought the Madness of a Few to be laid at their Doors. For the rest, I am so far from denying the due Praises to those victorious Troops, who did their Part in procuring so many Victories for the Allies; that I could wish every Officer and private Soldier had their full Share of Honour in proportion to their Deserts; being thus far of the Athenian's Mind, who when it was proposed that the Statue of Miltiades should be set up alone in some publick Place of the City; said, they would agree to it, whenever he conquered alone, but not before. Neither do I at all blame the Officers of the Army, for preferring in their Hearts the late Ministry before the present; or, if wishing alone could be of any Use, to wish their Continuance; because then they might be secure of the Wars Continuance too: Whereas, since Affairs have been put into other Hands, they may perhaps lie under some Apprehensions of a Peace; which no Army, especially in a Course of Success, was ever inclined to; and which all wise States have in such a Juncture, chiefly endeavoured. This is a Point wherein the Civil and Military Politicks have always disagreed. And for that Reason, I affirmed it necessary in all free Governments, that the latter should be absolutely in Subjection to the former; otherwise, one of these two Inconveniences must arise; either to be perpetually in War, or to turn the Civil Institution into a Military.

I AM ready to allow all that hath been said of the Valour and Experience of our Troops, who have fully contributed their Part to the great Successes abroad; nor is it their Fault, that those important Victories had no better Consequences at home, although it may be their Advantage. War is their Trade and Business: To improve and cultivate the Advantages of Success, is an Affair of the Cabinet; and the Neglect of this, whether proceeding from Weakness or Corruption, according to the usual Uncertainty of Wars, may be of the most fatal Consequence to a Nation. For, pray let me represent our Condition in such a Light, as I believe both Parties will allow, although perhaps not the Consequences I shall deduce from it. We have been for above nine Years blest with a QUEEN, who, besides all Virtues that can enter into the Composition of a private Person, possesseth every regal Quality that can contribute to make a People happy: Of great Wisdom, yet ready to receive the Advice of her Counsellors: Of much Discernment in chusing proper Instruments, when she follows her own Judgment; and only capable of being deceived by that excess of Goodness, which makes her judge of others by herself. Frugal in her Management, in Order to contribute to the Publick, which in Proportion she doth, and that voluntarily, beyond any of her Subjects; but from her own Nature, generous and charitable to all who want or deserve; and in order to exercise those Virtues, denying herself all Entertainments of Expence, which many others enjoy. Then, if we look abroad, at least in Flanders, our Arms have been crowned with perpetual Success in Battles and Sieges; not to mention several fortunate Actions in Spain. These Facts being thus stated, which none can deny; it is natural to ask, how we have improved such Advantages, and to what Account they have turned? I shall Use no discouraging Terms. When a Patient grows daily worse by the tampering of Mountebanks, there is nothing left but to call in the best Physicians before the Case grows desperate: But I would ask whether France, or any other Kingdom, would have made so little Use of such prodigious Opportunities; the Fruits whereof could never have fallen to the Ground, without the extreamest Degree of Folly and Corruption; and where those have lain, let the World judge: Instead of aiming at Peace, while we had the Advantage of the War, which hath been the perpetual Maxim of all wise States; it hath been reckoned Factious and Malignant even to express our Wishes for it; and such a Condition imposed, as was never offered to any Prince who had an Inch of Ground to dispute; Qua enim est conditio pacis; in qua ei cum quo pacem facias, nihil concedi potest?

It is not obvious to conceive what could move Men who sate at Home, and were called to consult upon the Good of the Kingdom, to be so utterly averse from putting an End to a long expensive War, which the victorious, as well as conquered Side, were heartily weary of. Few, or none of them were Men of the Sword; they had no Share in the Honour; they had made large Fortunes, and were at the Head of all Affairs. But, they well knew by what Tenure they held their Power; that the Queen saw through their Designs; that they had entirely lost the Hearts of the Clergy; that the Landed Men were against them; that they were detested by the Body of the People; and that nothing bore them up but their Credit with the Bank and other Stocks, which would be neither formidable nor necessary when the War was at an End. For these Reasons they resolved to disappoint all Overtures of a Peace, until they and their Party should be so deeply rooted as to make it impossible to shake them. To this End they began to precipitate Matters so fast, as in a little Time must have ruined the Constitution, if the Crown had not interposed, and rather ventured the accidental Effects of their Malice, than such dreadful Consequences of their Power. And indeed, if the former Danger had been greater than some hoped or feared, I see no Difficulty in the Choice; which was the same with his, who said, be had rather be devoured by Wolves than by Rats. I therefore still insist that we cannot wonder at, or find Fault with the Army, for concurring with a Ministry who was for prolonging the War. The Inclination is natural in them all; pardonable in those who have not yet made their Fortunes, and as lawful in the rest, as Love of Power or Love of Money can make it. But, as natural, as pardonable, and as lawful as this Inclination is, when it is not under Check of the Civil Power, or when a corrupt Ministry joins in giving it too great a Scope; the Consequence can be nothing less than infallible Ruin and Slavery to a State.

AFTER I had finished this Paper, the Printer sent me two small Pamphlets, called, The Management of the War, written with some Plausibility, much Artifice, and Abundance of Misrepresentation, as well as direct Falshoods in Point of Fact. These I have thought worth Examining, which I shall accordingly do when I find an Opportunity.

Parva momenta in spem metumq; impellunt animos.

HOPES are natural to most Men, especially to sanguine Complexions; and, among the various Changes that happen in the Course of publick Affairs, they are seldom without some Grounds: Even in desperate Cases, where it is impossible they should have any Foundation, they are often affected to keep a Countenance, and make an Enemy think we have some Resource which they know nothing of. This appears to have been for several Months past the Condition of those People, whom I am forced for want of other Phrases, to call the Ruined Party. They have taken up since their Fall, some real and some pretended Hopes. When the Earl of Sunderland was discarded, they hoped Her Majesty would proceed no farther in the Change of Her Ministry; and had the Insolence to misrepresent Her Words to Foreign States. They hoped no Body durst advise the Dissolution of the Parliament: When this was done, and further Alterations made at Court, they hoped and endeavoured to ruin the Credit of the Nation. They likewise hoped that we should have some terrible Loss Abroad, which would force us to unravel all, and begin again upon their Bottom. But, of all their Hopes, whether real or assumed, there is none more extraordinary than that which they now would seem to place their whole Confidence in: That this great Turn of Affairs was only occasioned by a short Madness of the People, from which they will recover in a little Time, when their Eyes are open, and they grow cool and sober enough to consider the Truth of Things, and how much they have been deceived. It is not improbable, that some few of the deepest sighted among these Reasoners, are well enough convinced how vain all such Hopes must be: But for the rest, the wisest of them seem to have been very ill Judges of the People's Dispositions, the Want of which Knowledge was a principal Occasion to hasten their Ruin: For surely had they suspected which Way the popular Current inclined, they never would have run against it by that Impeachment. I therefore conclude, they generally are so blind, as to imagine some Comfort from this fantastical Opinion, that the People of England are at present distracted, but will shortly come to their Senses again.

FOR the Service therefore of our Adversaries, and Friends, I shall briefly Examine this Point, by shewing what are the Causes and Symptoms of a People's Madness; and how it differs from their natural Bent and Inclination.

It is Machiavil's Observation, that the People, when left to their own Judgment, do seldom mistake their true Interests; and indeed they naturally love the Constitution they are born under; never desiring to change but under great Oppressions. However, they are to be deceived by several Means. It hath often happened in Greece, and sometimes in Rome, that those very Men who have contributed to shake off a former Tyranny, have, instead of restoring the old Constitution, deluded the People into a worse and more ignominious Slavery. Besides, all great Changes have the same Effect upon Commonwealths that Thunder hath upon Liquors; making the Dregs fly up to the Top: The lowest Plebeians rise to the Head of Affairs, and there preserve themselves by representing the Nobles and other Friends to the old Government, as Enemies to the Publick. The encouraging of new Mysteries and new Deities, with the Pretences of further Purity in Religion, hath likewise been a frequent Topick to mislead the People. And, not to mention more, the promoting false Reports of Dangers from Abroad, hath often served to prevent them from fencing against real Dangers at Home. By these and the like Arts, in Conjunction with a great Depravity of Manners, and a weak or corrupt Administration, the Madness of the People hath risen to such a Height, as to break in Pieces the whole Frame of the best instituted Governments. But however, such great Frenzies being artificially raised, are a perfect Force and Constraint upon human Nature; and under a wise steady Prince, will certainly decline of themselves; settling like the Sea after a Storm; and then the true Bent and Genius of the People will appear. Ancient and Modern Story are full of Instances to illustrate what I say. In our own Island we had a great Example of a long Madness in the People, kept up by a thousand Artifices like intoxicating Medicines, until the Constitution was destroyed; yet the Malignity being spent, and the Humour exhausted that served to foment it; before the Usurpers could fix upon a new Scheme, the People suddenly recovered, and peaceably restored the old Constitution.

FROM what I have offered, it will be easy to decide, whether this late Change in the Dispositions of the People were a new Madness, or a Recovery from an old One. Neither do I see how it can be proved that such a Change had in any Circumstance the least Symptoms of Madness, whether my Description of it be right or no. It is agreed, that the truest Way of judging the Dispositions of the People in the Choice of their Representatives, is by computing the County Elections; and in these it is manifest, that five in six are entirely for the present Measures; although the Court was so far from interposing its Credit, that there was no Change in the Admiralty, nor above one or two in the Lieutenancy; nor any other Methods used to influence Elections. The free unextorted Addresses sent some Time before from every Part of the Kingdom, plainly shewed what Sort of Bent the People had taken, and from what Motives. The Election of Members for this great City, carried contrary to all Conjecture against the united Interest of those two great Bodies, the Bank and East-India Company, was another convincing Argument. Besides, the Whigs themselves have always confessed, that the Bulk of Landed Men in England was generally of Tories. So that this Change must be allowed to be according to the natural Genius and Disposition of the People; whether it were just and reasonable in it self or no.

123 6140

NOTWITHSTANDING all which, you shall frequently hear the Partisans of the late Men in Power, gravely and decisively pronounce, that the present Ministry cannot possibly stand. Now, they who affirm this, if they believe themselves, must ground their Opinion upon the Iniquity of the last being so far established, and deeply rooted, that no Endeavours of honest Men, will be able to restore Things to their former State. Or else these Reasoners have been so misled by twenty Years Mismanagement, that they have forgot our Constitution, and talk as if our Monarchy and Revolution began together. But, the Body of the People is wiser; and by the Choice they have made, shew they do understand our Constitution, and would bring it back to the old Form; which if the new Ministers take care to maintain, they will and ought to stand; otherwise they may fall like their Predecessors. But I think, we may easily foresee what a Parliament freely chosen, without Threatning or Corruption, is likely to do, when no Man shall be in any Danger to lose his Place by the Freedom of his Voice.

BUT, who are those Advancers of this Opinion, that the present Ministry cannot hold? It must be either such as are afraid to be called to an Account, in case it should hold; or those who keep Offices, from which others, better Qualified, were removed; and may reasonably apprehend to be turned out, for worthier Men to come into their Places; since perhaps it will be necessary to make some Changes, that the publick Business of the Nation may go on: Or lastly, Stock-jobbers, who industriously spread such Reports, that Actions may fall, and their Friends buy to Advantage.

Yet these Hopes, thus freely expressed, as they are more sincere, so they are more supportable, than when they appear under the Disguise and Pretence of Fears. Some of these Gentlemen are employed to shake their Heads in proper Companies; to doubt where all This will end; to be in mighty Pain for the Nation; to shew how impossible it is, that the Publick Credit can be supported: To pray that all may do well in whatever Hands; but very much to doubt that the Pretender is at the Bottom. I know not any Thing so nearly resembling this Behaviour, as what I have often seen among the Friends of a Sick Man, whose Interest it is that he should die: The Physicians protest they sell no Danger; the Symptoms are good, the Medicines answer Expectation; yet still they are not to be Comforted; they whisper, he is a gone Man; it is not possible he should hold out; he hath perfect Death in his Face; they never liked this Doctor: At last the Patient recovers, and their Joy is as false as their Grief.

I BELIEVE there is no Man so Sanguine, who did not apprehend some ill Consequences from the late Change, although not in any Proportion to the good Ones: But it is manifest, the Former have proved much fewer and lighter than were expected, either at Home or Abroad, by the Fears of our Friends, or the Hopes of our Enemies. Those Remedies that stir the Humours in a diseased Body, are at first more painful than the Malady it self; yet certain Death is the Consequence of deferring them too long. Actions have fallen, and the Loans are said to come in slowly. But beside, that something of this must have been, whether there had been any Change or no; beside, that the Surprise of every Change, for the better as well as the worse, is apt to affect Credit for a while; there is a further Reason, which is plain and scandalous. When the late Party was at the Helm; those who were called the Tories, never put their Resentments in Ballance with the Safety of the Nation; but chearfully contributed to the Common Cause. Now the Scene is changed, the fallen Party seems to act from very different Motives: They have given the Word about; they will keep their Money and be passive; and in this Point stand upon the same Foot with Papists and Nonjurors. What would have become of the Publick, if the present great Majority had acted thus, during the late Administration? Had acted thus, before the others were Masters of that Wealth they have squeezed out of the Landed Men, and with the Strength of that, would now hold the Kingdom at Defiance.

THUS much I have thought fit to say, without pointing Reflections upon any particular Person; which I have hitherto but sparingly done, and that only towards those whose Characters are too profligate, that the Managing of them should be of any Consequence: Besides, as it is a Talent I am not naturally fond of, so, in the Subjects I treat, it is generally needless. If I display the Effects of Avarice and Ambition, of Bribery and Corruption, of gross Immorality and Irreligion; those who are the least conversant in Things, will easily know where to apply them. Not that I lay any Weight upon the Objections of such who charge me with this Proceeding: It is notorious enough that the Writers of the other Side were the first Aggressors. Not to mention their scurrilous Libels many Years ago, directly levelled at particular Persons; how many Papers do now come out every Week, full of rude Invectives against the present Ministry, with the first and last Letters of their Names to prevent Mistakes? It is good sometimes to let these People see, that we neither want Spirit nor Materials to retaliate; and therefore in this Point alone I shall follow their Example, whenever I find my self sufficiently provoked; only with one Addition, that whatever Charges I bring, either general or particular, shall be religiously true, either upon avowed Facts which none can deny, or such as I can prove from my own Knowledge.

BEING resolved publickly to confess any Mistakes I have been guilty of; I do here humbly desire the Readers Pardon for one of mighty Importance, about a Fact in one of my Papers, said to be done in the Cathedral of Gloucester. A whole Hydra of Errors in two Words: For as I am since informed, it was neither in the Cathedral, nor City, nor County of Gloucester, but some other Church of that Diocess. If I had ever met any other Objection of Equal Weight, although from the meanest Hands, I should certainly have answered it.

---

No. 25. Thursday, January 25, 1710.

---

Διαλεξάμενοι τινὰ ἡσυχῆ, τὸ μὲν συμπαν ἐπὶ τε τῇ δυνατείᾳ καὶ καλὰ τῶν ἔχθρῶν συνάμοσαν.

Summissa quedam voce collocuti sunt; quorum summa erat de dominatione sibi confirmanda, ac inimicis delendis conjuratio.

NOT many Days ago I observed a Knot of discontented Gentlemen cursing the Tories to Hell for their Uncharitableness, in affirming, that if the late Ministry had continued to this Time, we should have had neither Church nor Monarchy left. They are usually so candid as to call that the Opinion of a Party, which they hear in a Coffee-house, or over a Bottle from some warm young People, whom it is odds but they have provoked to say more than they believed, by some Positions as absurd and ridiculous of their own. And so it proved in this very Instance: For, asking one of these Gentlemen, what it was that provoked those he had been disputing with, to advance such a Paradox? He assured me in a very calm Manner, it was nothing in the World, but that himself and some others of the Company had made it appear, that the Design of the present Parliament and Ministry, was to bring in Popery, Arbitrary Power, and the Pretender: Which I take to be an Opinion fifty Times more improbable, as well as more uncharitable, than what is charged upon the Whigs: Because I defy our Adversaries to produce one single Reason for suspecting such Designs in the Persons now at the Helm; whereas I can upon Demand produce twenty to shew, that some late Men had strong Views towards a Commonwealth, and the Alteration of the Church.

---

IT is natural indeed, when a Storm is over, that hath only un-tiled our Houses, and blown down some of our Chimnies; to consider what further Mischiefs might have ensued, if it had lasted longer. However, in the present Case, I am not of the Opinion above-mentioned; I believe the Church and State might have lasted somewhat longer, although the late Enemies to both had done their worst: I can hardly conceive how Things would have been so soon ripe for a new Revolution. I am convinced, that if they had offered to make such large and sudden Strides, it must have come to Blows; and, according to the Computation we have now Reason to think a right One, I can partly guess what would have been the Issue. Besides we are sure, the Queen would have interposed before they came to Extremities; and as little as they regarded the Regal Authority, would have been a Check in their Career.

BUT instead of this Question; What would have been the Consequence if the late Ministry had continued? I will propose another, which will be more useful for us to consider; and that is, What we may reasonably expect They will do, if ever they come into Power again? This, we know, is the Design and Endeavour of all those Scribbles which daily fly about in their Favour; of all the false, insolent, and scandalous Libels against the present Administration; and of all those Engines set at work to sink the Actions, and blow up the publick Credit. As for those who shew their Inclinations by writing, there is one Consideration, which I wonder doth not sometimes affect them: For, how can they forbear having a good Opinion of the Gentleness and Innocence of those, who permit them to employ their Pens as they do? It puts me in mind of an insolent pragmatical Orator somewhere in Greece, who railing with great Freedom at the chief Men in the State; was answered by one who had been very instrumental in recovering the Liberty of the City; That he thanked the Gods, they had now arrived to the Condition he always wished them; when every Man in that City might securely say what he pleased. I wish these Gentlemen would however compare the Liberty they take, with what their Masters used to give: How many Messengers and Warrants would have gone out against any who durst have opened their Lips, or drawn their Pens, against the Persons and Proceedings of their Junta's and Cabals? How would their weekly Writers have been calling out for Prosecution and Punishment? We remember when a poor Nick-name, borrowed from an old Play of Ben. Johnson, and mentioned in a Sermon without any particular Application; was made use of as a Motive to spur on an Impeachment. But after all, it must be confess, they had Reasons to be thus severe, which their Successors have not: Their Faults would never endure the Light; and to have exposed them sooner, would have raised the Kingdom against the Actors, before the proper Time.

BUT, to come to the Subject I have now undertaken; which is to Examine what the Consequences would be, upon Supposition that the Whigs were now restored to their Power. I already imagine the present free Parliament dissolved, and another of a different Epithet met, by the Force of Money and Management. I read, immediately a Dozen or two stinging Votes against the Proceedings of the late Ministry. * The Bill now to be repealed would then be re-enacted, and the Birth-right of an Englishman reduced again to the Value of Twelve-pence. But, to give the Reader a stronger Imagination of such a Scene, let me represent the Designs of some Men, lately endeavoured and projected; in the Form of a Paper of Votes.

Ordered, That a Bill be brought in for repealing the Sacramental Test.

A Petition of Tindal, Collins, Clendon, Coward, Toland, in Behalf of themselves and many Hundreds of their Disciples, some of which are Members of this Honourable House, desiring, that Leave be given to bring in a Bill for qualifying Atheists, Deists and Socinians, to serve their Country in any Employment, Ecclesiastical, Civil, or Military.

Ordered, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill according to the Prayer of the said Petition, and that Mr. Lechmere do prepare and bring it in.

Ordered, That a Bill be brought in for removing the Education of Youth out of the Hands of the Clergy.

---

* A Bill for a general Naturalization.

Another, To forbid the Clergy preaching certain Duties in Religion, especially Obedience to Princes.

Another, to take away the Jurisdiction of Bishops.

Another, for constituting a General for Life; with Instructions to the Committee, that Care may be taken to make the War last as long as the Life of the said General.

A Bill of Attainder against James Duke of Ormonde; John Duke of Buckingham; Lawrence Earl of Rochester; Sir Simon Harcourt, Knight; Robert Harley, Henry St. John, Esqrs. Abigail Masham, and others, for High Treason against the Junta.

Resolved, That Sarah Duchess of Marlborough, hath been a most dutiful, just, and grateful Servant to her Majesty.

Resolved, That to advise the Dissolution of a Whig Parliament, or the Removal of a Whig Ministry, was in order to bring in Popery and the Pretender; and that the said Advice was High Treason.

Resolved, That by the Original Contract the Government of this Realm is by a Junta, and a King or Queen; but the Administration solely in the Junta.

Ordered, That it be a standing Order of this House, that the Merit of Elections be not determined by the Number of Voices, or Right of Electors; but by Weight; and that one Whig shall weigh down ten Tories.

A Motion being made, and the Question being put, that when a Whig is detected of manifest Bribery, and his Competitor being a Tory, hath Ten to One a Majority, there shall be a new Election; it passed in the Negative.

Resolved, That for a King or Queen of this Realm, to Read or Examine a Paper brought them to be signed by a Junta Minister, is Arbitrary and Illegal; and a Violation of the Liberties of the People.

THESE and the like Reformations would, in all Probability, be the First-fruits of the Whigs Resurrection; and what Structures such able Artists might in a short Time build upon such Foundations, I leave others to conjecture. All Hopes of a Peace cut off; the Nation industriously involved in further Debts, to a Degree, that none would dare undertake the Management of Affairs, but those whose Interest lay in ruining the Constitution. I do not see how the wisest Prince, under such Necessities, could be able to extricate himself. Then, as to the Church; the Bishops would by Degrees be dismissed, first from the Parliament, next from their Revenues, and at last from their Office; and the Clergy, instead of their idle Claim of Independancy on the State, would be forced to depend for their daily Bread on every Individual. But, what System of future Government was designed; whether it were already digested, or would have been left for Time and Incidents to mature; I shall not now Examine. Only upon this Occasion, I cannot help reflecting on a Fact, which it is probable, the Reader knows as well as my self. There was a Picture drawn some Time ago, representing five Persons as large as the Life, sitting in Council together like a Pentarchy. A void Space was left for a Sixth, which was to have been the Queen, to whom they intended that Honour: But her Majesty having since fallen under their Displeasure, they have made a shift to crowd in two better Friends in Her Place, which makes it a compleat Heptarchy. This Piece is now in the Country, reserved until better Times; and hangs in a Hall, among the Pictures of Cromwell, Bradshaw, Ireton, and some other Predecessors.

I MUST now desire Leave to say something to a Gentleman, who hath been pleased to publish a Discourse against a Paper of mine relating to the Convocation. He promiseth to set me right, without any undue Reflections or undecent Language. I suppose he means in Comparison with others, who pretend to answer the Examiner: So far he is right; but if he thinks he hath behaved himself as becomes a candid Antagonist, I believe he is mistaken. He says, in his Title-Page, my Representations are unfair, and my Reflections unjust. And his Conclusion is yet more severe, where he doubts I and my Friends are enraged against the Dutch, because they preserved us from Popery and Arbitrary Power at the Revolution; and since that Time, from being over-run by the exorbitant Power of France, and becoming a Prey to the Pretender. Because this Author seems in general to write with an honest meaning, I would seriously put him the Question, whether he thinks, I and my Friends are for Popery, Arbitrary Power, France and the Pretender? I omit other Instances of smaller Moment, which however do not suit in my Opinion with due Reflection or decent Language. The Fact relating to the Convocation, came from a good Hand, and I do not find this Author differs from me in any material Circumstance about it. My Reflections were no more than what might be obvious to any other Gentleman, who had heard of their late Proceedings. If the Notion be right which this Author gives us of a Lower House of Convocation; it is a very Melancholy one, and to me seems utterly inconsistent with that of a Body of Men whom he owns to have a Negative; and therefore, since a great Majority of the Clergy differs from him in several Points, he advances, I shall rather chuse to be of their Opinion than his. I fancy, when the whole Synod met in one House, as this Writer affirms, they were upon a better Foot with their Bishops; and therefore, whether this Treatment so extreamly de haut en bas, since their Exclusion, be suitable to primitive Custom or Primitive Humility towards Brethren, is not my Business to enquire. One may allow the Divine or Apostolick Right of Episcopacy, and their great Superiority over Presbyters; and yet dispute the Methods of exercising the latter, which being of Human Institution, are subject to Encroachments and Usurpations. I know, every Clergyman in a Diocess hath a good Deal of Dependance upon his Bishop, and owes him Canonical Obedience: But, I was apt to think, that when the whole Representative of the Clergy met in a Synod, they were considered in another Light; at least since they were allowed to have a Negative. If I am mistaken, I desire to be excused, as talking out of my Trade: Only there is one Thing wherein I entirely differ from this Author: Since in the Disputes about Privileges one Side must recede; where so very few Privileges remain, it is a hundred to one odds, that the Encroachments are not on the Inferior Clergy's Side; and no Man can blame them for insisting on the small Number that is left. There is one Fact wherein I must take Occasion to set this Author right; that the * Person who first moved the QUEEN to remit the First-fruits and Tents to the Clergy, was an eminent Instrument in the late Turn of Affairs; and as I am told, hath lately prevailed to have the same Favour granted for the Clergy of Ireland †.

But I must beg Leave to inform this Author, that my Paper

* Earl of Oxford, Lord Treasurer.

† This was done by the Author's Sollicitation.

is not intended for the Management of Controversy; which would be of very little Import to most Readers; and only mispend Time, that I would gladly employ to better Purposes. For, where it is a Man's Business to entertain a whole Room full; it is unmannerly to apply himself to a particular Person, and turn his Back upon the rest of the Company.

---

---

No. 26. Thursday, February 1, 1710.

---

Ea autem est gloria, laus recte factorum, magnorumq; in Rem publicam meritorum: Quae cum optimi cujusque, tum etiam multitudinis testimonio comprobatur.

I AM thinking, what a mighty Advantage it is to be entertained as a Writer to a ruined Cause. I remember a Fanatick Preacher, who was inclined to come into the Church, and take Orders; but upon mature Thoughts was diverted from that Design, when he considered that the Collections of the Godly were a much heartier and readier Penny, than he could get by wrangling for Tythes. He certainly had Reason; and the two Cases are Parallel. If you write in Defence of a fallen Party, you are maintained by Contribution as a necessary Person; you have little more to do than to carp and cavil at those who hold the Pen on the other Side; you are sure to be celebrated and caressed by all your Party to a Man. You may affirm and deny what you please, without Truth or Probability, since it is but Loss of Time to contradict you. Commiseration is often on your Side; and you have a Pretence to be thought honest and disinterested, for adhering to Friends in Distress. After which, if your Friends ever happen to turn up again, you have a strong Fund of Merit towards making your Fortune. Then, you never fail to be well furnished with Materials; every one bringing in his Quota; and Falshood being naturally more plentiful than Truth. Not to mention the wonderful Delight of libelling Men in Power, and hugging yourself in a Corner with mighty Satisfaction for what you have done.

---

IT is quite otherwise with Us, who engage as Volunteers in the Service of a flourishing Ministry, in full Credit with the QUEEN, and beloved by the People; because they have no sinister Ends or dangerous Designs; but pursue with Stedfastness and Resolution the true Interests of both. Upon which Account they little want or desire our Assistance; and we may write until the World is weary of reading, without having our Pretences allowed either to a Place or a Pension: Besides, we are refused the common Benefit of the Party, to have our Works cried up of Course; the Readers of our own Side being as ungentle and hard to please, as if we writ against them; and our Papers never make their Way in the World, but barely in Proportion to their Merit. The Design of Their Labours who write on the conquered Side, is likewise of greater Importance than Ours: They are like Cordials for dying Men, which must be repeated; whereas ours are, in the Scripture-Phrase, but Meat for Babes: At least, all I can pretend, is to undeceive the Ignorant, and those at Distance; but their Task is to keep up the sinking Spirits of a whole Party.

AFTER such Reflections, I cannot be angry with those Gentlemen for perpetually writing against me: It furnishes them largely with Topicks; and is besides, their proper Business: Neither is it Affection, or altogether Scorn, that I do not Reply. But as Things are, we both act suitable to our several Provinces: Mine is, by laying open some Corruptions in the late Management, to set those who are ignorant, right in their Opinions of Persons and Things: It is theirs to cover with Fig-Leaves all the Faults of their Friends, as well as they can: When I have produced my Facts, and offered my Arguments, I have nothing farther to advance; it is their Office to deny and disprove; and then let the World decide. If I were as They, my chief Endeavour should certainly be to batter down the Examiner; therefore I cannot but approve their Design. Besides, they have indeed another Reason for barking incessantly at this Paper: They have in their Prints openly taxed a most ingenious Person as Author of it; one who is in great and very deserved Reputation with the World, both on Account of his Poetical Works, and his Talents for publick Business. They were wise enough to consider, what a Sanction it would give their Performances, to fall under the Animadversion of such a Pen; and have therefore used all the Forms of Provocation commonly practised by little obscure Pedants, who are fond of distinguishing themselves by the Fame of an Adversary. So nice a Taste have these judicious Criticks, in pretending to discover an Author by his Style and Manner of Thinking: Not to mention the Justice and Candor of exhausting all the stale Topicks of Scurrility in reviling a Paper, and then flinging at a Venture the whole Load upon one who is entirely innocent; and whose greatest Fault, perhaps, is too much Gentleness towards a Party, from whose Leaders he hath received quite contrary Treatment.

THE Concern I have for the Ease and Reputation of so deserving a Gentleman, hath at length forced me, much against my Interest and Inclination, to let these angry People know who is not the Author of the Examiner. For, I observed, the Opinion began to spread; and I chose rather to sacrifice the Honour I received by it, than let injudicious People entitle him to a Performance, that perhaps he might have Reason to be ashamed of: Still faithfully promising, never to disturb those worthy Advocates; but suffer them in quiet to roar on at the Examiner, if they or their Party find any Ease in it; as Physicians say there is, to People in Torment, such as Men in the Gout, or Women in Labour.

HOWEVER, I must acknowledge my self indebted to them for one Hint, which I shall now pursue, although in a different Manner. Since the Fall of the late Ministry, I have seen many Papers filled with their Encomiums; I conceive, in Imitation of those who write the Lives of famous Men, where, after their Deaths, immediately follow their Characters. When I saw the poor Virtues thus dealt at Random, I thought the Disposers had flung their Names, like Valentines into a Hat, to be drawn as Fortune pleased, by the Junta and their Friends. There Crassus drew Liberality and Gratitude; Fulvia, Humility and Gentleness; Clodius, Piety and Justice; Gracchus, Loyalty to his Prince; Cinna, Love of his Country and Constitution; and so of the rest. Or, to quit this Allegory, I have often seen of late, the whole Set of discarded Statesmen, celebrated by their judicious Hirelings, for those very Qualities which their Admirers owned they chiefly wanted. Did these Heroes put off and lock up their Virtues when they came into Employment, and have they now resumed them since their Dismissions? If they wore them, I am sure it was under their Greatness, and without ever once convincing the World of their Visibility or Influence.

BUT, why should not the present Ministry find a Pen to praise them as well as the last? This is what I shall now undertake, and it may be more impartial in me, from whom they have deserved so little. I have, without being called, served them half a Year in Quality of Champion; and by help of the Queen, and a Majority of nine in ten of the Kingdom, have been able to protect them against a routed Cabal of hated Politicians, with a dozen of Scribblers at their Head: Yet so far have they been from rewarding me suitable to my Deserts, that to this Day they never so much as sent to the Printer to enquire who I was; although I have known a Time and Ministry, where a Person of half my Merit and Consideration would have had fifty Promises; and in the mean Time a Pension settled on him, whereof the first Quarter should be honestly paid. Therefore, my Resentments shall so far prevail, that in praising those who are now at the Head of Affairs, I shall at the same Time take Notice of their Defects.

WAS any Man more eminent in his Profession than the present Lord Keeper, or more distinguished by his Eloquence and great Abilities in the House of Commons? And, will not his Enemies allow him to be fully equal to the great Station he now adorns? But then it must be granted, that he is wholly ignorant in the Speculative as well as practical Part of Poligamy: He knows not how to metamorphose a sober Man into a Lunatick: He is no Free-thinker in Religion, nor hath Courage to be Patron of an Atheistical Book, while he is Guardian of the Queen's Conscience. Although, after all, to speak my private Opinion, I cannot think these such mighty Objections to his Character, as some would pretend.

THE Person who now * Presides at the Council, is descended from a Great and Honourable Father, not from the Dogs of the People; he was at the Head of the Treasury for some Years, and rather chose to enrich his Prince than himself. In the Height of Favour and Credit, he sacrificed the greatest Employment in the Kingdom to his Conscience and Honour: He hath been always firm in his Loyalty and Religion, zealous for supporting the Prerogative of the Crown, and preserving the Liberties of the People. But then, his best Friends must own that he is neither Deist nor Socinian: He hath never conversed with Toland, to open and enlarge his Thoughts, and dispel the Prejudices of Education; nor was he ever able to arrive at that Perfection of Gallantry, to ruin and imprison the Husband, in order to keep the Wife without Disturbance.

---

* Lawrence Hyde, Earl of Rochester.

THE present Lord Steward hath been always distinguished for his Wit and Knowledge; is of consummate Wisdom and Experience in Affairs; hath continued constant to the true Interest of the Nation, which he espoused from the Beginning; and is every Way qualified to support the Dignity of his Office: But in Point of Oratory, must give Place to his Predecessor.

THE Duke of Shrewsbury was highly instrumental in bringing about the Revolution, in which Service he freely exposed his Life and Fortune. He hath ever been the Favourite of the Nation, being possessed of many amiable Qualities; but in the Agreeableness and Fragrancy of his Person, and the Profoundness of his Politicks, must be allowed to fall very short of ——

MR. Harley had the Honour of being chosen Speaker successively to three Parliaments; he was the first of late Years, who ventured to restore the forgotten Custom of treating his PRINCE with Duty and Respect. Easy and disengaged in private Conversation, with such a Weight of Affairs upon his Shoulders; of great Learning, and as great a Favourer and Protector of it; intrepid by Nature, as well as by the Consciousness of his own Integrity; and a Despiser of Money; pursuing the true Interest of his PRINCE and Country against all Obstacles. Sagacious to view into the remotest Consequences of Things, by which all Difficulties fly before him. A firm Friend, and a placable Enemy, sacrificing his justest Resentments, not only to publick Good, but to common Intercession and Acknowledgement. Yet with all these Virtues it must be granted, there is some Mixture of Human Infirmity: His greatest Admirers must confess his Skill at Cards and Dice to be very low and superficial: In Horse-Racing he is utterly ignorant: Then, to save a few Millions to the Publick, he never regards how many worthy Citizens he hinders from making up their Plumb. And surely there is one Thing never to be forgiven him; that he delights to have his Table filled with Black-Coats, whom he useth as if they were Gentlemen.

My Lord Dartmouth is a Man of Letters, full of good Sense, good Nature and Honour, of strict Virtue and Regularity in his Life; but labours under one great Defect, that he treats his Clerks with more Civility and good Manners, than others in his Station, have done the QUEEN.

OMMITTING some others, I will close this Character of the present Ministry, with that of Mr. St. John, who, from his Youth applying those admirable Talents of Nature, and Improvements of Art to publick Business, grew eminent in Court and Parliament; at an Age when the Generality of Mankind is employed in Trifles and Folly. It is to be lamented, that he hath not yet procured himself a busy, important Countenance, nor learned that profound Part of Wisdom, to be difficult of Access. Besides, he hath clearly mistaken the true Use of Books, which he has thumbed and spoiled with Reading, when he ought to have multiplied them on his Shelves: Not like a great Man of my Acquaintance, who knew a Book by the Back, better than a Friend by the Face, although he had never conversed with the former, and often with the latter.

---

No. 27. Thursday, February 8, 1710.

---

Caput est in omni procuratione negotii & muneris publici, ut avaritia pellatur etiam minima suspicio.

THERE is no Vice which Mankind carries to such wild Extreams as that of Avarice: Those two which seem to rival it in this Point, are Lust and Ambition: But, the former is checkt by Difficulties and Diseases; destroys itself by its own Pursuits, and usually declines with old Age: And the latter, requiring Courage, Conduct, and Fortune in a high Degree, and meeting with a thousand Dangers and Oppositions, succeeds too seldom in an Age to fall under common Observation. Or, is Avarice perhaps the same Passion with Ambition, only placed in more ignoble and dastardly Minds; by which the Object is changed from Power to Money? Or, it may be, that one Man pursues Power in order to Wealth; and another Wealth, in order to Power; which last is the safer Way, although longer about; and, suiting with every Period, as well as Condition of Life, is more generally followed.

HOWEVER it be, the Extreams of this Passion are certainly more frequent than of any other; and often to a Degree so absurd and ridiculous, that if it were not for their Frequency, they could hardly obtain Belief. The Stage, which carries other Follies and Vices beyond Nature and Probability, falls very short in the Representations of Avarice; nor are there any Extravagances in this Kind described by ancient or modern Comedies, which are not outdone by an hundred Instances, commonly told, among our selves.

I AM ready to conclude from hence, that a Vice which keeps so firm a Hold upon human Nature, and governs it with so unlimited a Tyranny; since it cannot be wholly eradicated, ought at least to be confined to particular Objects; to Thrift and Penury, to private Fraud and Extortion, and never suffered to prey upon the Publick; and should certainly be rejected as the most unqualifying Circumstance for any Employment, where Bribery and Corruption can possibly enter.

IF the Mischiefs of this Vice, in a publick Station, were confined to enriching only those particular Persons employed; the Evil would be more supportable: But it is usually quite otherwise. When a Steward defrauds his Lord, he must connive at the rest of the Servants, while they are following the same Practice in their several Spheres; so that in some Families you may observe a Subordination of Knaves in a Link downwards to the very Helper in the Stables, all cheating by Concert, and with Impunity. And, even if this were all, perhaps the Master could bear it without being undone; but it so happens, that for every Shilling the Servant gets by his Iniquity, the Master loseth twenty; the Perquisites of Servants being but small Compositions for suffering Shop-keepers to bring in what Bills they please. It is exactly the same Thing in a State: An avaricious Man in Office is in Confederacy with the whole Clan of his District or Dependance, which in modern Terms of Art is called, To Live, and let Live; and yet their Gains are the smallest Part of the Publick's Loss. Give a Guinea to a knavish Land-Waiter, and he shall connive at the Merchant for cheating the QUEEN of an Hundred. A Brewer gives a Bribe to have the Priviledge of selling Drink to the Navy; but the Fraud is a hundred Times greater than the Bribe; and the Publick is at the whole Loss.

MORALISTS make two kinds of Avarice; That of Cataline, alieni appetens, sui profusus; and the other more generally understood by that Name; which is, the endless Desire of Hoarding: But I take the former to be more dangerous in a State, because it mingles well with Ambition, which I think the latter cannot; for, although the same Breast may be capable of admitting both, it is not able to cultivate them; and where the Love of heaping Wealth prevails, there is not, in my Opinion, much to be apprehended from Ambition. The Disgrace of that sordid Vice is sooner apt to spread than any other; and is always attended with the Hatred and Scorn of the People: So that whenever those two Passions happen to meet in the same Subject; it is not unlikely, that Providence hath placed Avarice to be a Check upon Ambition; and I have Reason to think, some great Ministers of State have been of my Opinion.

THE Divine Authority of Holy Writ, the Precepts of Philosophers, the Lashes and Ridicule of Satirical Poets, have been all employed in exploding this insatiable Thirst of Money; and all equally controlled by the daily Practice of Mankind. Nothing new remains to be said upon the Occasion; and if there did, I must remember my Character, that [I am an Examiner only, and not a Reformer.]

HOWEVER, in those Cases where the Frailities of particular Men do nearly affect the publick Welfare, such as a Prime Minister of State, or a great General of an Army; methinks there should be some Expedient contrived, to let them know impartially what is the World's Opinion in the Point: Encompassed with a Crowd of depending Flatterers, they are many Degrees blinder to their own Faults than the common Infirmities of Human Nature can plead in their Excuse; Advice dares not be offered, or is wholly lost, or returned with Hatred: And whatever appears in Publick against their prevailing Vice, goes for nothing; being either not applied, or passing only for Libel and Slander, proceeding from the Malice and Envy of a Party.

I HAVE sometimes thought, that if I had lived at Rome in the Time of the first Triumvirate, I should have been tempted to write a Letter, as from an unknown Hand, to those three great Men, who had then usurped the Sovereign Power; wherein I would freely and sincerely tell each of them that Fault which I conceived was most odious, and of worst Consequence to the Commonwealth: That, to Crassus, should have been sent to him after his Conquests in Mesopotamia, and in the following Terms.

To MARCUS CRASSUS, Health:

*I*F you apply as you ought, what I now write, you will be more obliged to me than to all the World, hardly excepting your Parents, or your Country. I intend to tell you, without Disguise or Prejudice, the Opinion which the World hath entertained of you. And, to let you see I write this without any Sort of ill Will, you shall first hear the Sentiments they have to your Advantage. No Man disputes the Gracefulness of your Person; you are allowed to have a good and clear Understanding, cultivated by the Knowledge of Men and Manners, although not by Literature. You are no ill Orator in the Senate; you are said to excel in the Art of bridling and subduing your Anger, and stifling or concealing your Resentments; you have been a most successful General, of long Experience, great Conduct, and much Personal Courage; you have gained many important Victories for the Commonwealth, and forced the strongest Towns in Mesopotamia to surrender; for which, frequent Supplications have been decreed by the Senate. Yet with all these Qualities, and this Merit, give me Leave to say, you are neither beloved by the Patricians or Plebeians at home, nor by the Officers or private Soldiers of your own Army abroad. And, do you know CRASSUS, that this is owing to a Fault, of which you may cure yourself by one Minute's Reflection? What shall I say? You are the richest Person in the Commonwealth; you have no Male Child, your Daughters are all married to wealthy Patricians; you are far in the Decline of Life; and yet you are deeply stained with that odious and ignoble Vice of Covetousness. It is affirmed, that you descend even to the meanest and most scandalous Degrees of it; and while you possess so many Million; while you are acquiring so many more, you are solicitous how to save a single Sesterce, of which a hundred ignominious Instances are produced, and in all Mens Mouths. I will only mention that Passage of the * Buskins, which after abundance of Persuasion, you would hardly suffer to be cut from your Legs, when they were so wet and cold, that to have kept them on, would have endangered your Life.

Instead of using the common Arguments to dissuade you from this Weakness, I will endeavour to convince you, that you are really guilty of it; and leave the Cure to your own good Sense. For, perhaps, you are not yet persuaded that this is your Crime; you have probably never yet been reproached for it to your Face; and what you are now told, comes from one unknown, and it may be from an Enemy. You will allow your self indeed to be prudent in the Management of your Fortune; you are not a Prodigal, like Clodius or Cataline, but surely that deserves not the Name of Avarice. I will inform you how to be convinced. Disguise your Person; go among the common People in Rome; introduce Discourses about your self; inquire your own Character; do the same in your Camp, walk about it in the Evening, hearken at every Tent; and, if you do not hear every Mouth Censuring, Lamenting, Cursing this Vice in you, and even you for this Vice; conclude your self innocent. If you be not yet persuaded; send for Atticus, Servius Sulpicius, Cato, or Brutus; they are all your Friends; conjure them to tell you ingenuously which is your great Fault, and which they would chiefly wish you to correct; if they do not agree in their Verdict, in the Name of all the Gods, you are acquitted.

When your Adversaries reflect how far you are gone in this Vice, they are tempted to talk as if we owed our Successes, not to your Courage or Conduct, but to those Veteran Troops you command; who are able to conquer under any General, with so many brave and experienced Officers to lead them. Besides, we know the Consequences your Avarice hath often occasioned. The Soldier hath been starving for Bread, surrounded with Plenty, and in an Enemies Country, but all under Safeguards and Contributions; which, if you had sometimes pleased to have exchanged for Provisions, might at the Expence of a few Talents in a Campaign, have so endeared you to the Army, that they would have desired you to lead them to the utmost Limits of Asia. But you rather chose to confine your Conquests within the fruitful Country of Mesopotamia, where Plenty of Money might be raised. How far that fatal Greediness of Gold may have influenced you, in breaking off the Treaty with the old Parthian King Orodes, you best can tell; your Enemies charge you with it; your Friends offer nothing material in your Defence; and all agree, there is nothing so pernicious, which the Extremes of Avarice may not be able to inspire.

---

* Wet Stockings.

The Moment you quit this Vice, you will be a truly Great Man; and still there will Imperfections enough remain to convince us, you are not a God. Farewel.

PERHAPS a Letter of this Nature sent to so reasonable a Man as Crassus, might have put him upon Examining into himself, and correcting that little sordid Appetite, so utterly inconsistent with all Pretences to a Hero. A Youth in the Heat of Blood may plead with some Show of Reason, that he is not able to subdue his Lusts: An ambitious Man may use the same Arguments for his love of Power, or perhaps other Arguments to justify it. But, Excess of Avarice hath neither of these Pleas to offer; it is not to be justified, and cannot pretend Temptation for Excuse: Whence can the Temptation come? Reason disclaims it altogether; and it cannot be said to lodge in the Blood, or the Animal Spirits. So that I conclude, No Man of true Valour and true Understanding, upon whom this Vice hath stolen unawares, when he is convinced he is guilty, will suffer it to remain in his Breast an Hour.

---

No. 28. Thursday, February 15, 1710.

---

---

Inultus ut tu riseris Cotyttia?

---

An Answer to the Letter to the EXAMINER.

SIR,

London, Feb. 15, 1710-11.

ALTHOUGH I have wanted Leisure to acknowledge the Honour of a Letter you were pleased to write to me about six Months ago; yet I have been very careful in obeying some of your Commands; and am going on as fast as I can with the rest. I wish you had thought fit to have conveyed them to me by a more private Hand than that of the Printing-House: For, although I was pleased with a Pattern of Style and Spirit which I proposed to imitate; yet I was sorry the World should be a Witness how far I fell short in both.

I AM afraid you did not consider what an abundance of Work you have cut out for me; neither am I at all comforted by the Promise you are so kind to make, that when I have performed my Task, Dolben shall blush in his Grave among the Dead, Walpole among the Living, and even Volpone shall feel some Remorse. How the Gentleman in his Grave, may have kept his Countenance, I cannot inform you, having no Acquaintance at all with the Sexton: But for the other two, I take leave to assure you, there have not yet appeared the least Signs of Blushing or Remorse in either, although some very good Opportunities have offered, if they had thought fit to accept them: So that with your Permission, I had rather engage to continue this Work until they be in their Graves too; which I am sure, will happen much sooner than the other.

You desire I would collect some of those Indignities offered last Year to her Majesty. I am ready to oblige you; and have got a pretty tolerable Collection by me, which I am in doubt whether to publish by it self in a large Volume in Folio, or scatter them here and there occasionally in my Papers. Although indeed, I am sometimes thinking to stifle them altogether; because such a History will be apt to give Foreigners a monstrous Opinion of our Country. But, since it is your absolute Opinion, that the World should be informed; I will, with the first Occasion, pick out a few choice Instances, and let them take their Chance in the ensuing Papers. I have also in my Cabinet certain Quires of Paper filled with Facts of Corruption, Mismanagement, Cowardice, Treachery, Avarice, Ambition, and the like; with an Alphabetical Table, to save Trouble. And, perhaps, you will not wonder at the Care I take to be so well provided, when you consider the vast Expence I am at: I feed Weekly, two or three Wit-starved Writers, who have no other visible Support; besides several others, who live upon my Offals. In short, I am like a Nurse who suckles Twins at one Time, and hath besides, one or two Whelps constantly to draw her Breasts.

I MUST needs confess, (and it is with Grief I speak it) that I have been the innocent Cause of a great Circulation of Dulness: At the same Time, I have often wondered how it hath come to pass, that these industrious People, after poring so constantly upon the Examiner, a Paper writ with plain Sense, and in a tolerable Style; have made so little Improvement. I am sure it would have fallen out quite otherwise with me: For, by what I have seen of their Performances (and I am credibly informed they are all of a Piece) if I had perused them until now, I should have been fit for little but to make an Advocate in the same Cause.

YOU, Sir, perhaps will wonder, as most others do, what End these angry Folks propose, in writing perpetually against the Examiner: It is not to beget a better Opinion of the late Ministry, or with any Hope to convince the World that I am in the Wrong in any one Fact I relate; they know all that to be lost Labour; and yet their Design is important enough: They would fain provoke me by all Sort of Methods, within the Length of their Capacity, to answer their Papers; which would render mine wholly useless to the Publick: For, if it once came to Rejoinder and Reply, we should be all upon a Level; and then their Work would be done.

THERE is one * Gentleman indeed, who hath written three small Pamphlets upon the Management of the War, and the Treaty of Peace: These I had intended to have bestowed a Paper in Examining; and could easily have made it appear, that whatever he says of Truth, relates nothing at all to the Evils we complain of, or controuls one Syllable of what I have ever advanced. No Body, that I know of, did ever dispute the Duke of Marlborough's Courage, Conduct, or Success; they have been always unquestionable, and will continue to be so, in spight of the Malice of his Enemies, or, which is yet more, the Weakness of his Advocates. The Nation only wished to see him taken out of ill Hands, and put into better. But, what is all this to the Conduct of the late Ministry, the shameful Mismanagements in Spain, or the wrong Steps in the Treaty of Peace; the Secret of which will not bear the Light, and is consequently by this Author very poorly defended? These, and many other Things, I would have shewn; but upon second Thoughts determined to have done it in a Discourse by it self, rather than take up room here, and break into the Design of this Paper, from whence I have resolved to banish Controversy as much as possible. But, the Postscript to his third Pamphlet was enough to disgust me from having any Dealings at all with such a Writer; unless that Part was left to some Footman he had picked up among the Boys who follow the Camp, whose Character it would suit much better than that of the supposed Author. At least, the foul Language, the idle impotent Menace, and the gross perverting of an innocent Expression in the fourth Examiner, joined to that Respect I shall ever have for the Function of a Divine, would incline me to believe so. But when he turns off his Footman, and disclaims that Postscript, I will tear it out, and see how far the rest deserves to be considered.

---

* Dr. Hare, now a Bishop.

BUT, Sir, I labour under a much greater Difficulty, upon which I should be glad to hear your Advice. I am worried on one Side by the Whigs for being too severe; and by the Tories on the other for being too gentle. I have formerly hinted a Complaint of this; but having lately received two peculiar Letters, among many others; I thought nothing could better represent my Condition, or the Opinion which the warm Men of both Sides have of my Conduct, than to send you a Transcript of each. The former is exactly in these Words.

To the EXAMINER.

Mr. Examiner,

BY your continual reflecting upon the Conduct of the late Ministry, and by your Encomiums on the present, it is as clear as the Sun at Noon-Day, that you are a Jesuit or Non-juror, employed by the Friends of the Pretender, to endeavour to introduce Popery and Slavery, and Arbitrary Power, and to infringe the sacred Act for Toleration of Dissenters. Now, Sir, since 'the most ingenious Authors who write Weekly against you, are 'not able to teach you better Manners, I would have you to know, that those Great and excellent Men, as low as you think them at present, do not want Friends that will take the first proper Occasion to cut your Throat, as all such Enemies to Moderation ought to be served. It is well you have cleared another Person from being Author of your cursed Libels; although D--mme, perhaps after all, that may be a Bamboozle too. However, I hope we shall soon Ferrit you out. Therefore, I advise you as a Friend, to let fall your Pen, and retire betimes; for our Patience is now at an End. It is enough to lose our Power and Employments, without setting the whole Nation against us. Consider three Years is the Life of a Party; and D--mme, every Dog hath his Day, and it will be our Turn next; therefore take Warning, and learn to sleep in a whole Skin, or whenever we are uppermost, by G-d you shall find no Mercy.

The other Letter was in the following Terms.

To the EXAMINER.

SIR,

I AM a Country Member, and constantly send a Dozen of your Papers down to my Electors. I have read them all, but I confess, not with the Satisfaction I expected. It is plain you know a great deal more than you write; why will you not let us have it all out? We are told, that the Q U E N hath been a long Time treated with Insolence by those she hath most obliged; Pray, 'Sir, let us have a few good Stories upon that Head. We have been cheated of several Millions; why will not you set a Mark on the Knaves who are guilty, and shew us what Ways they took to rob the Publick at such a Rate? Inform us how we came to be disappointed of Peace about two Years ago: In short, turn the whole Mystery of Iniquity inside out, that every Body may have a View of it. But above all, explain to us, what was at the Bottom of that same Impeachment: I am sure I never liked it; for, at that very Time a Dissenting Preacher in our Neighbourhood, came often to see our Parson; it could be for no Good, for he would walk about the Barns and Stables, and desire to look into the Church, as who should say, These will shortly be mine; and

'we all believed he was then contriving some Alterations against
'he got into Possession: And I shall never forget, that a Whig
'Justice offered me then very high for my Bishop's Lease. I must 'be so bold to tell you, Sir, that you are too favourable: I am sure,
'there was no living in Quiet for us while they were in the Saddle.
'I was turned out of the Commission, and called a Jacobite, al'though it cost me a thousand Pound in joining with the Prince 'of Orange at the Revolution. The Discoveries I would have you 'make, are of some Facts for which they ought to be hanged;
'not that I value their Heads, but I would see them exposed,
'which may be done upon the Owners Shoulders, as well as upon
'a Pole, &c.

THESE, Sir, are the Sentiments of a whole Party on one Side, and of considerable Numbers on the other: However, taking the Medium between these Extreams, I think to go on as I have hitherto done, although I am sensible my Paper would be more popular, if I did not lean too much to the favourable Side. For, nothing delights the People more than to see their Oppressors humbled, and all their Actions painted with proper Colours, set out in open View. Exactos Tyrannos densum humeris bibit aure vulgus.

BUT as for the Whigs, I am in some doubt, whether this mighty Concern they shew for the Honour of the late Ministry, may not be affected; at least whether their Masters will thank them for their Zeal in such a Cause. It is, I think, a known Story of a Gentleman who fought another for calling him Son of a Whore; but his Mother desired her Son to make no more Quarrels upon that Subject, because it was true. For pray, Sir, doth it not look like a Jest, that such a pernicious Crew, after draining our Wealth, and discovering the most destructive Designs against our Church and State; instead of thanking Fortune that they are got off safe in their Persons and Plunder, should hire these Bullies of the Pen to defend their Reputations? I remember, I thought it the hardest Case in the World, when a poor Acquaintance of mine, having fallen among Sharpers, where he lost all his Money, and then complaining he was cheated; got a good Beating into the Bargain, for offering to affront Gentlemen. I believe, the only Reason why these Purloiners of the Publick cause such a Clutter to be made about their Reputations, is to prevent Inquisitions that might tend towards making them refund: Like those Women they call Shop-Lifters, who when they are challenged for their Thefts, appear to be mighty angry and affronted, for Fear of being searched.

I WILL dismiss you, Sir, when I have taken notice of one Particular. Perhaps you may have observed in the tolerated factious Papers of the Week, that the Earl of Rochester is frequently reflected on for having been Ecclesiastical Commissioner and Lord Treasurer in the Reign of the late King James. The Fact is true; and it will not be denied to his immortal Honour, that because he could not comply with the Measures then taking, he resigned both those Employments; of which the latter was immediately supplied by a Commission, composed of two Popish Lords and the present Earl of Godolphin.

---

No. 29. Thursday, February 22, 1710.

---

Laus summa in fortunæ bonis, non extulisse se in Potestate, non fuisse insolentem in pecuniâ, non se prætulisse aliis propter abundantiam fortuna.

AM conscious to my self, that I write this Paper with no other Intention but that of doing good: I never received Injury from the late Ministry; nor Advantage from the present, farther than in common with every good Subject. There were among the former one or two, who must be allowed to have possessed very valuable Qualities; but proceeding by a System of Politicks, which our Constitution could not suffer; and discovering a Contempt of all Religion, especially of that which hath been so happily established among us ever since the Reformation; they seem to have been justly suspected of no very good Inclinations to either.

IT is possible, that a Man may speculatively prefer the Constitution of another Country, or an Utopia of his own, before that of the Nation where he is born and lives; yet from considering the Dangers of Innovation, the Corruptions of Mankind, and the frequent Impossibility of reducing Idea's to Practice, he may join heartily in preserving the present Order of Things, and be a true Friend to the Government already settled. So in Religion; a Man may perhaps have little or none of it at Heart; yet if he conceal his Opinions, if he endeavour to make no Proselytes, advance no impious Tenets in Writing or Discourse: If, according to the common Atheistical Notion, he believes Religion to be only a Contrivance of Politicians for keeping the Vulgar in Awe; and that the present Model is better adjusted than any other to so useful an End: Although the Condition of such a Man as to his own future State be very deplorable; yet Providence, which often works Good out of Evil, can make even such a Man an Instrument for contributing towards the Preservation of the Church.

ON the other side; I take a State to be truly in danger, both as to its Religion and Government, when a Set of Ambitious Politicians, bred up in a Hatred to the Constitution, and a Contempt for all Religion, are forced upon exerting these Qualities in order to keep or encrease their Power, by widening their Bottom, and taking in (like Mahomet) some Principles from every Party, that is any way discontented at the present Faith and Settlement; which was manifestly our Case. Upon this Occasion, I remember to have asked some considerable Whigs, whether it did not bring a Disreputation upon their Body, to have the whole Herd of Presbyterians, Independants, Atheists, Anabaptists, Deists, Quakers and Socinians, openly and universally Listed under their Banners? They answered, That all this was absolutely necessary, in order to make a Ballance against the Tories; and all little enough: For indeed, it was as much as they could possibly do, although assisted with the absolute Power of disposing every Employment; while the Bulk of English Gentry kept firm to their old Principles in Church and State.

BUT, notwithstanding whatever I have hitherto said, I am informed, several among the Whigs continue still so refractory, that they will hardly allow the Heads of their Party to have entertained any Designs of ruining the Constitution; or that they would have endeavoured it, if they had continued in Power. I beg their Pardon if I have discovered a Secret; but who could imagine they ever intended it should be One, after those Overt-Acts with which they thought fit to conclude their Farce? But perhaps they now find it convenient to deny vigorously; that the Question may remain; Why was the old Ministry changed? Which they urge on without ceasing, as if no Occasion in the least had been given; but that all were owing to the Insinuations of crafty Men, practising upon the Weakness of an easy Prince. I shall therefore offer, among a hundred, one Reason for this Change, which I think would justify any Monarch who ever reigned, for the like Proceeding.

It is notorious enough, how highly Princes have been blamed in the Histories of all Countries, particularly of our own, upon the Account of their Minions; who have been ever justly odious to the People, for their Insolence and Avarice, and engrossing the Favour of their Masters. Whoever hath been the least conversant in the English Story, cannot but have heard of Gaveston, the Spencers, and some others; who by the Excess and Abuse of their Power, cost the Princes they served, or rather governed, their Crowns and Lives. However, in the Case of Minions, it must at least be acknowledged, that the Prince is pleased and happy, although his Subjects be aggrieved; and he has the Plea of Friendship to excuse him; which is a Disposition of generous Minds. Besides, a wise Minion, altho' he be haughty to others, is humble and insinuating to his Master; and cultivates his Favour by Obedience and Respect. But, Our Misfortune hath been a great deal worse: We have suffered for some Years under the Oppression, the Avarice, and Insolence of those, for whom the QUEEN had neither Esteem nor Friendship; who rather seemed to snatch their own Dues, than receive the Favour of their Sovereign; and were so far from returning Respect, that they forgot common good Manners. They imposed on their Prince, by urging the Necessity of Affairs of their own creating: They first raised Difficulties, and then offered them as Arguments to keep themselves in Power. They united themselves against Nature and Principle, to a Party they had always abhorred, and which was now content to come in upon any Terms, leaving Them and their Creatures in full Possession of the Court. Then they urged the formidable Strength of that Party, and the Dangers which must follow by disobliging it. So that it seems, almost a Miracle, how a Prince, thus Besieged on all Sides, could alone have Courage and Prudence enough to extricate Herself.

AND indeed there is a Point of History relating to this Matter, which well deserveth to be considered. When Her Majesty came to the Crown, she took into Favour and Employment several Persons who were esteemed the best Friends of the old Constitution; among whom none were reckoned further gone in the High Church Principles (as they are usually called) than two or three, who had at that Time most Credit; and ever since, untill within these few Months, possessed all Power at Court. So that the first Umbrage given to the Whigs, and the Pretences for clamouring against France and the Pretender, were derived from Them. And I believe nothing appeared then more unlikely, than that such different Opinions should ever incorporate; that Party having upon former Occasions treated those very Persons with Enmity enough. But some Lords then about Court, and in the QUEEN's good Graces, not able to endure those growing Impositions upon the Prince and People, presumed to interpose; and were consequently soon removed and disgraced: However, when a most exorbitant Grant was proposed, antecedent to any visible Merit; it miscarried in Parliament, for want of being Seconded by those who had most Credit in the House; and, who having always opposed the like Excesses in a former Reign, thought it their Duty to do so still; to shew the World, that the Dislike was not against Persons but Things. But this was to cross the Oligarchy in the tenderest Point; a Point which outweighed all Considerations of Duty and Gratitude to their Prince, or Regard to the Constitution: And therefore, after having in several private Meetings concerted Measures with their old Enemies, and granted as well as received Conditions; they began to change their Style and their Countenance, and to put it as a Maxim in the Mouths of their Emissaries; That England must be saved by Whigs. This unnatural League was afterwards cultivated by another Incident; I mean the Act of Security,

Letter to the Examiner. and the Consequences of it, which every Body knows; when (to use the Words of my Correspondent) the Sovereign Authority was parcelled out among the Faction, and made the Purchase of Indemnity for an offending Minister: Thus, the Union of the two Kingdoms improved That between the Ministry and the Junta, which was afterwards cemented by their mutual Danger in that Storm they so narrowly escaped about three Years ago; but however was not quite perfected till Prince George's Death; and then they went lovingly on together, both satisfied with their several Shares, at full Liberty to gratifie their predominant Inclinations; the first, their Avarice and Ambition; the other, their Models of Innovation in Church and State.

THEREFORE, whoever thinks fit to revive that baffled Question, Why was the late Ministry changed? may receive the following Answer: That it was become necessary by the Insolence and Avarice of some about the QUEEN, who, in order to perpetuate their Tyranny, had made a monstrous Alliance with those who profess Principles destructive to our Religion and Government: If this will not suffice; let him make an Abstract of all the Abuses I have mentioned in my former Papers, and view them together; after which, if he still remain unsatisfied, let him suspend his Opinion a few Weeks longer. Although after all, I think the Question as trifling as that of the Papists, when they ask us, Where was our Religion before Luther? And indeed, the Ministry was changed for the same Reason that Religion was reformed; because a thousand Corruptions had crept into the Discipline and Doctrine of the State, by the Pride, the Avarice, the Fraud, and the Ambition of those who administered to us in Secular Affairs.

I HEARD my self censured the other Day in a Coffee-House, for seeming to glance in the Letter to Crassus, against a great Man, who is still in Employment, and likely to continue so. What if I had really intended that such an Application should be given it? I cannot perceive how I could be justly blamed for so gentle a Reprof. If I saw a handsome young Fellow going to a Ball at Court with a great Smut upon his Face; could he take it ill in me to point out the Place, and desire him with abundance of good Words to pull out his Handkerchief and wipe it off; or bring him to a Glass, where he might plainly see it with his own Eyes? Doth any Man think I shall suffer my Pen to inveigh against Vices, only because they are charged upon Persons who are no longer in Power? Every Body knows, that certain Vices are more or less pernicious, according to the Stations of those who possess them. For Example, Lewdness and Intemperance are not of so bad Consequences in a Town-Rake as in a Divine. Cowardice in a Lawyer is more supportable than in an Officer of the Army. If I should find Fault with an Admiral because he wanted Politeness; or an Alderman for not understanding Greek; That, indeed would be to go out of my way for an Occasion of Quarrelling: But excessive Avarice in a General, is, I think, the greatest Defect he can be liable to, next to those of Courage and Conduct, and may be attended with the most ruinous Consequences, as it was in Crassus; who to that Vice alone owed the Destruction of himself and his Army. It is the same Thing in praising Mens Excellencies; which are more or less valuable, as the Person you commend hath occasion to employ them. A Man may perhaps mean Honestly; yet if he be not able to Spell, he shall never have my Vote to be a Secretary: Another may have Wit and Learning in a Post where Honesty, with plain common Sense, are of much more Use: You may praise a Soldier for his Skill at Chess, because it is said to be a Military Game, and the Emblem of drawing up an Army; but this to a Treasurer would be no more a Compliment, than if you called him a Gamester or a Jockey.

P. S. I received a Letter relating to Mr. Greenshields, the Person who sent it may know, that I will say something to it in the next Paper.

---

No. 30. Thursday, March 1, 1710.

---

Quae enim domus tam Stabilis, que tam firma civitas est, que non oditis atque discidiis funditus possit everti?

IF we examine what Societies of Men are in closest Union among themselves; we shall find them either to be those who are engaged in some evil Design, or who labour under one common Misfortune: Thus the Troops of Banditti in several Countries abroad; the Knots of Highwaymen in our own Nation; the several Tribes of Sharpers, Thieves and Pick-pockets, with many others, are so firmly knit together, that nothing is more difficult than to break or dissolve their several Gangs. So likewise, those who are Fellow-Sufferers under any Misfortune, whether it be in Reality or Opinion, are usually contracted into a very strict Union; as we may observe in the Papists throughout this Kingdom, under those real Difficulties which are justly put on them; and in the several Schisms of Presbyterians, and other Sects, under that grievous Persecution of the modern kind, called Want of Power. And the Reason why such Confederacies are kept so sacred and inviolable, is very plain; because in each of those Cases I have mentioned, the whole Body is moved by one common Spirit, in pursuit of one general End, and the Interest of Individuals is not crossed by each other, or by the whole.

Now both these Motives are joined to unite the High-flying Whigs at present: They have been always engaged in an evil Design, and of late they are faster riveted by that terrible Calamity, the Loss of Power. So that whatever Designs a mischievous Crew of dark Confederates may possibly entertain, who will stop at no Means to compass them, may be justly apprehended from these.

On the other side, those who wish well to the Publick, and would gladly contribute to its Service, are apt to differ in their Opinions about the Methods of promoting it; and when their Party flourishes, are sometimes envious at those in Power; ready to over-value their own Merit, and be impatient untill it be rewarded by the Measure they have prescribed for themselves. There is a further Topick of Contention, which a Ruling Party is apt to fall into, in Relation to Retrospections, and Enquiry into past Miscarriages; wherein some are thought too warm and zealous; others too cool and remiss; while in the mean time these Divisions are industriously fomented by the discarded Faction; which, although it be an old Practice, hath been much improved in the Schools of the Jesuits; who when they despaired of perverting this Nation to Papery, by Arguments or Plots against the State, sent their Emissaries to subdivide us into Schisms. And this Expedient is now with great Propriety taken up by our Men of incensed Moderation; because they suppose themselves able to attack the strongest of our Subdivisions, and so subdue us one after another. Nothing better resembles this Proceeding, than that famous Combat between the Horatii and Curiatii; where two of the former being killed, the third who remained entire and untouched, was able to kill his three wounded Adversaries, after he had divided them by a Stratagem. I well know with how tender a Hand all this should be touched; yet, at the same time, I think it my Duty to warn the Friends, as well as expose the Enemies, of the Publick Weal; and to begin preaching up Union upon the first Suspicion that any Steps are made to disturb it.

BUT the two chief Subjects of Discontent, which, upon most great Changes, in the Management of publick Affairs, are apt to breed Differences among those who are in Possession, are what I have just now mentioned; a Desire of punishing the Corruptions of former Managers; and the rewarding Merit, among those who have been any Way instrumental or consenting to the Change. The first of these is a Point so nice, that I shall purposely wave it. But the latter I take to fall properly within my District: By Merit I here understand that Value which every Man puts upon his own Deservings from the Publick. And, I believe, there could not be a more difficult Employment found out, than that of Pay-Master-General to this Sort of Merit; or a more noisy, crowded Place, than a Court of Judicature, erected to settle and adjust every Man's Claim upon that Article. I imagine, if this had fallen into the Fancy of the ancient Poets, they would have drest it up after their Manner into an agreeable Fiction; and given us a Genealogy and Description of Merit, perhaps not very different from that which follows.

A Poetical Genealogy and Description of MERIT.

THAT, true Merit, was the Son of Virtue and Honour; but that there was likewise a spurious Child who usurped the Name, and whose Parents were Vanity and Impudence. That, at a Distance there was a great Resemblance between them, and they were often mistaken for each other. That, the Bastard Issue had a loud shrill Voice, which was perpetually employed in Cravings and Complaints; while the other never spoke louder than a Whisper; and was often so bashful that he could not speak at all. That, in great Assemblies, the false Merit would step before the true, and stand just in his Way; was constantly at Court, or great Mens Leves, or whispering in some Minister's Ear. That, the more you fed him, the more hungry and importunate he grew. That, he often passed for the true Son of Virtue and Honour; and the Genuine for an Impostor. That, he was born distorted and a Dwarf, but by Force of Art appeared of a handsome Shape, and taller than the usual Size; and that none but those who were wise and good, as well as vigilant, could discover his Littleness or Deformity. That, the true Merit had been often forced to the Indignity of applying to the false, for his Credit with those in Power, and to keep himself from Starving. That, the false Merit filled the Anti-chambers with a Crew of his Dependants and Creatures, such as Projectors, Schematists, Occasional Converts to a Party, prostitute Flatterers, starveling Writers, Buffoons, shallow Politicians, empty Orators, and the like; who all owned him for their Patron, and grew discontented if they were not immediately fed.

THIS Metaphorical Description of false Merit, is, I doubt, calculated for most Countries in Christendom; and as to our own, I believe it may be said, with a sufficient Reserve of Charity, that we are fully able to reward every Man among us according to his real Deservings. And, I think I may add, without Suspicion of Flattery, that never any Prince had a Ministry with a better Judgment to distinguish between false and real Merit, than that which is now at the Helm; or whose Inclination as well as Interest it is to encourage the latter. And it ought to be observed, that those great and excellent Persons we see at the Head of Affairs, are of the QUEEN's own Personal voluntary Choice; not forced upon Her by any insolent, overgrown Favourite, or by the pretended Necessity of complying with an unruly Faction.

YET these are the Persons whom those Scandals to the Press, in their Daily Pamphlets and Papers, openly revile at so ignominious a Rate, as I believe was never tolerated before under any Government. For, surely no lawful Power derived from a Prince, should be so far affronted, as to leave those who are in Authority exposed to every scurrilous Libeller. Because, in this Point, I make a mighty Difference between those who are In, and those who are Out of Power; not upon any Regard to their Persons, but the Stations they are placed in by the Sovereign. And, if my Distinction be right, I think I might appeal to any Man, whether if a Stranger were to read the Invectives which are daily published against the present Ministry; and the outrageous Fury of the Authors against me for censuring the Last; he would not conclude the Whigs to be at this Time in full Possession of Power and Favour, and the Tories entirely at Mercy? But all this now ceases to be a Wonder, since the QUEEN Her self is no longer spared; witness the Libel published some Days ago under the Title of A Letter to Sir Jacob Banks, where the Reflections upon Her Sacred Majesty are much more plain and direct, than ever the Examiner thought fit to publish against the most obnoxious Persons in a Ministry, discarded for endeavouring the Ruin of their Prince and Country. Cæsar indeed threatned to hang the Pirates for presuming to disturb him while he was their Prisoner aboard their Ship: But it was Cæsar who did so, and he did it to a Crew of Publick Robbers; and it became the Greatness of his Spirit; for he lived to execute what he had threatned. Had They been in his Power, and sent such a Message, it could be imputed to nothing but the Extreams of Impudence, Folly, or Madness.

I HAD a Letter last Week relating to Mr. Greenshields, an Episcopal Clergyman of Scotland; and the Writer seems to be a Gentleman of that Part of Britain. I remember formerly to have read a printed Account of Mr. Greenshields's Case, who hath been prosecuted and silenced for no other Reason beside reading Divine Service, after the Manner of the Church of England, to his own Congregation, which desired it; although, as the Gentleman who writes to me says, there is no Law in Scotland against those Meetings; and he adds, that the Sentence pronounced against Mr. Greenshields will soon be affirmed, if some Care be not taken to prevent it. I am altogether uninformed in the Particulars of this Case; and besides, to treat it justly, would not come within the Compass of my Paper; therefore I could wish the Gentleman would undertake it in a Discourse by it self; and I should be glad he would inform the Publick in one Fact; Whether the Episcopal Assemblies are freely allowed in Scotland? It is notorious that abundance of their Clergy fled from thence some Years ago into England and Ireland, as from a Persecution; but it was alledged by their Enemies, that they refused to take the Oaths to the Government, which however none of them scrupled when they came among us. It is somewhat extraordinary to see our Whigs and Fanatics keep such a Stir about the Sacred Act of Toleration, while their Brethren will not allow a Connivance in so near a Neighbourhood; especially if what the Gentleman insists on in his Letter be true, that nine Parts in ten of the Nobility and Gentry, and two in three of the Commons, be Episcopal; of which one Argument he offers, is the present Choice of their Representatives in both Houses, although opposed to the utmost by the Preachings, Threatnings, and Anathema's of the Kirk. Such Usage to a Majority may, as he thinks, be of dangerous Consequence; and I entirely agree with him. If these be the Principles of the High-Kirk, God preserve at least the Southern Parts from their Tyranny!

---

No. 31. Thursday, March 8, 1710.

---

—Garrit aniles
Ex re fabellas.

I HAD last Week sent me by an unknown Hand a Passage out of Plato, with some Hints how to apply it. That Author puts a Fable into the Mouth of Aristophanes, with an Account of the Original of Love. That, Mankind was at first created with four Arms and Legs, and all other Parts double to what they are now; 'till Jupiter, as a Punishment for his Sins, cleft him in two with a Thunderbolt; since which Time we are always looking for our other Half; and this is the Cause of Love. But Jupiter threatened, that if they did not mend their Manners, he would give them t'other Slit, and leave them to hop about in the Shape of Figures in Basso Relievo. The Effect of this last Threatning, my Correspondent imagines is now come to pass; and, that as the first splitting was the Original of Love, by inclining us to search out for our t'other Half, so the second was the Cause of Hatred, by prompting us to fly from our other Side, and dividing the same Body into two, give each Slice the Name of a Party.

I APPROVE of the Fable and Application, with this Refinement upon it. For, Parties do not only split a Nation, but every Individual among them, leaving each but half their Strength, and Wit, and Honesty, and good Nature; but one Eye and Ear, for their Sight and Hearing, and equally lopping the rest of the Senses: Where Parties are pretty equal in a State, no Man can perceive one bad Quality in his own, or good one in his Adversaries. Besides, Party being a dry disagreeable Subject, it renders Conversation insipid and sower, and confines Invention. I speak not here of the Leaders, but the insignificant Brood of Followers in a Party, who have been the Instruments of mixing it in every Condition, and Circumstance of Life. As the Zealots among the Jews bound the Law about their Foreheads and Wrists, and Hems of their Garments; so the Women among us have got the distinguishing Marks of Party in their Muffs, their Fans, and their Furbelows. The Whig Ladies put on their Patches in a different Manner from the Tories. They have made Schisms in the Play-House, and each have their particular Sides at the Opera: And when a Man changeth his Party, he must infallibly count upon the Loss of his Mistress. I asked a Gentleman t'other Day, how he liked such a Lady? but he would not give me his Opinion, 'till I had answered him whether she were a Whig or Tory. Mr. * * * * since he is known to visit the present Ministry, and lay some Time under a Suspicion of writing the Examiner, is no longer a Man of Wit; his very Poems have contracted a Stupidity many Years after they were printed.

HAVING lately ventured upon a Metaphorical Genealogy of Merit, I thought it would be proper to add another of Party, or rather of Faction (to avoid Mistake) not telling the Reader, whether it be my own or a Quotation, 'till I know how it is approved: But whether I read or dreamt it, the Fable is as follows.

LIBERTY, the Daughter of Oppression, after having brought forth several fair Children, as Riches, Arts, Learning, Trade, and many others; was at last delivered of her youngest Daughter, called FACTION; whom Juno, doing the Office of Midwife, distorted in its Birth, out of Envy to the Mother; from whence it derived its Peevishness and Sickly Constitution. However, as it is often the Nature of Parents to grow most fond of their youngest and disagreeablest Children, so it happened with Liberty, who doated on this Daughter to such a Degree, that by her good Will she would never suffer the Girl to be out of her Sight. As Miss Faction grew up, she became so termagant and froward, that there was no enduring her any longer in Heaven. Jupiter gave her warning to be gone; and her Mother, rather than forsake her, took the whole Family down to Earth. She landed at first in Greece, was expelled by degrees through all the Cities by her Daughter's ill Conduct; she fled afterwards to Italy, and being banished thence, took Shelter among the Goths, with whom she passed into most Parts of Europe; but being driven out every where, she began to lose Esteem; and her Daughter's Faults were imputed to her self: So that at this Time she hath hardly a Place in the World to retire to. One would wonder what strange Qualities this Daughter must possess, sufficient to blast the Influence of so divine a Mother, and the rest of her Children: She always affected to keep mean and scandalous Company; valuing no Body, but just as they agreed with her in every capricious Opinion she thought fit to take up; and rigorously exacting Compliance, although she changed her Sentiments ever so often. Her great Employment was to breed Discord among Friends and Relations; and make up monstrous Alliances between those whose Dispositions least resembled each other. Whoever offered to contradict her, although in the most insignificant Trifle, she would be sure to distinguish by some ignominious Appellation, and allow them to have neither Honour, Wit, Beauty, Learning, Honesty or common Sense. She intruded into all Companies at the most unseasonable Times; mixt at Balls, Assemblies, and other Parties of Pleasure; haunted every Coffee-house and Bookseller's Shop; and by her perpetual Talking filled all Places with Disturbance and Confusion. She buzzed about the Merchant in the Exchange, the Divine in his Pulpit, and the Shopkeeper behind his Counter. Above all, she frequented Publick Assemblies, where she sate in the Shape of an obscene, ominous Bird, ready to prompt her Friends as they spoke.

If I understand this Fable of FACTION right, it ought to be applied to those who set themselves up against the true Interest and Constitution of their Country; which I wish the Undertakers for the late Ministry would please to take Notice of; or tell us by what Figure of Speech they pretend to call so great and unforced a Majority, with the Q U E E N at the Head, by the Name of the Faction: Which is not unlike the Phrase of the Nonjurors, who dignifying one or two deprived Bishops, and half a score Clergymen of the same Stamp, with the Title of the Church of England; exclude all the rest as Schismaticks; or like the Presbyterians, laying the same Accusation, with equal Justice, against the Established Religion.

AND here it may be worth inquiring what are the true Characteristicks of a Faction; or how it is to be distinguished from that great Body of the People who are Friends to the Constitution? The Heads of a Faction, are usually a Set of Upstarts, or Men ruined in their Fortunes, whom some great Change in a Government, did at first, out of their Obscurity, produce upon the Stage. They associate themselves with those who dislike the old Establishment, Religious and Civil. They are full of new Schemes in Politicks and Divinity; they have an incurable Hatred against the old Nobility, and strengthen their Party by Dependents raised from the lowest of the People; they have several Ways of working themselves into Power; but they are sure to be called when a corrupt Administration wants to be supported, against those who are endeavoring at a Reformation; and they firmly observe that celebrated Maxim of preserving Power by the same Arts it is attained. They act with the Spirit of those who believe their Time is but short; and their first Care is to heap up immense Riches at the Publick Expence; in which they have two Ends, beside that common one of insatiable Avarice; which are to make themselves necessary, and to keep the common Wealth in Dependance: Thus they hope to compass their Design, which is, instead of fitting their Principles to the Constitution, to alter and adjust the Constitution to their own pernicious Principles.

It is easy determining by this Test, to which Side the Name of Faction most properly belongs. But however I will give them any System of Lawful or Regal Government, from William the Conqueror to this present Time, to try whether they can tally it with their late Models; excepting only that of Cromwell, whom perhaps they will reckon for a Monarch.

If the present Ministry, and so great a Majority in the Parliament and Kingdom, be only a Faction; it must appear by some Actions which answer the Idea we usually conceive from that Word. Have they abused the Prerogative of the Prince, or invaded the Rights and Liberties of the Subject? Have they offered at any dangerous Innovations in Church or State? Have they broached any Doctrines of Heresy, Rebellion or Tyranny? Have any of them treated their Sovereign with Insolence, engrossed and sold all Her Favours, or deceived Her by base, gross Mis-representations of Her most faithful Servants? These are the Arts of a Faction; and whoever hath practised them, they and their Followers must take up with the Name.

It is usually reckoned a Whig Principle to appeal to the People; but that is only when they have been so wise as to poison their Understandings before-hand: Will they now stand to this Appeal, and be determined by their Vox Populi, to which Side their Title of Faction belongs? And that the People are now left to the natural Freedom of their Understanding and Choice, I believe our Adversaries will hardly deny. They will now refuse this Appeal, and it is reasonable they should; and I will further add, that if our People resembled the old Grecians, there might be Danger in such a Tryal. A pragmatical Orator told a great Man at Athens, that whenever the People were in their Rage, they would certainly tear him to Pieces; yes, says the other, and they will do the same to you, whenever they are in their Wits. But, God be thanked, our Populace is more merciful in their Nature, and at present under better Direction; and the Orators among us have attempted to confound both Prerogative and Law, in their Sovereign's Presence, and before the highest Court of Judicature, without any Hazard to their Persons.

---

---

No. 32. Thursday, March 15, 1710.

---

*Non est ea medicina, cum sanæ parti corporis scalpellum adbibetur, atque integræ; carnificina est ista, & crudelitas. Hi medentur
Reipublicæ qui exsecant pestem aliquam, tanquam struam Civitatis.*

AM diverted from the general Subject of my Discourses, to reflect upon an Event of a very extraordinary and surprizing Nature: A great Minister, in high Confidence with the QUEEN, under whose Management the Weight of Affairs at present is in a great Measure supposed to lie; sitting in Council, in a Royal Palace, with a Dozen of the Chief Officers of State, is stabbed at the very Board, in the Execution of his Office, by the Hand of a French Papist, then under Examination for High Treason. The Assassin redoubles his Blow, to make sure Work; and concluding the * Chancellor was dispatched, goes on with the same Rage to murder a Principal Secretary of State: And that whole Noble Assembly are forced to rise, and draw their Swords in their own Defence, as if a wild Beast had been let loose among them.

THIS Fact hath some Circumstances of Aggravation not to be paralleled by any of the like kind we meet with in History. Cæsar's Murder being performed in the Senate, comes nearest to the Case; but that was an Affair concerted by great Numbers of the chief Senators, who were likewise the Actors in it, and not the Work of a vile, single Ruffian. Harry the Third of France was stabbed by an Enthusiastick Frier, whom he suffered to approach his Person, while those who attended him stood at some Distance. His Successor met the same Fate in a Coach, where neither he nor his Nobles, in such a Confinement, were able to defend themselves. In our own Country we have, I think, but one Instance of this Sort, which hath made any Noise; I mean that of Felton, about fourscore Years ago: But he took the Opportunity to stab the Duke of Buckingham in passing through a dark Lobby, from one Room to another: The Blow was neither seen nor heard; and the Murderer might have escaped, if his own Concern and Horror, as it is usual in such Cases, had not betrayed him. Besides, that Act of Felton will admit of some Extenuation from the Motives he is said to have had: But this Attempt of Guisard seems to have outdone them all in every heightning Circumstance, except the Difference of Persons between a King and a great Minister: For I give no Allowance at all to the Difference of Success (which however is yet uncertain and depending) nor think it the least Alleviation to the Crime, whatever it may be to the Punishment.

---

* Mr. HARLEY, then Chancellor of the Exchequer.

I AM sensible, it is ill arguing from Particulars to Generals; and that we ought not to charge upon a Nation the Crimes of a few desperate Villains it is so unfortunate to produce: Yet, at the same time it must be avowed, that the French have for these last Centuries been somewhat too liberal of their Daggers upon the Persons of their greatest Men; such as the Admiral de Coligny, the Dukes of Guise, Father and Son, and the two Kings I last mentioned. I have sometimes wondered how a People, whose Genius seems wholly turned to singing, and dancing, and prating; to Vanity and Impertinence; who lay so much Weight upon Modes and Gestures; whose Essentialities are generally so very superficial; who are usually so serious upon Trifles, and so trifling upon what is serious; have been capable of committing such solid Villainies; more suitable to the Gravity of a Spaniard, or Silence and Thoughtfulness of an Italian: Unless it be, that in a Nation naturally so full of themselves, and of so restless Imaginations; when any of them happen to be of a morose and gloomy Constitution, that Huddle of confused Thoughts, for want of evaporating, usually terminates in Rage or Despair. D'Avila observes, that Jacques Clement was a Sort of Buffoon, whom the rest of the Friars used to make Sport with: But at last, giving his Folly a serious Turn, it ended in Enthusiasm, and qualified him for that desperate Act of murdering his King.

BUT, in the Marquis de Guiscard there seems to have been a Complication of Ingredients for such an Attempt: He had committed several Enormities in France; was extremely prodigal and vicious; of a dark melancholy Complexion, and cloudy Countenance, such as in vulgar Physiognomy is called an Ill Look. For the rest, his Talents were very mean, having a sort of inferior Cunning, but very small Abilities; so that a great Man of the late Ministry, by whom he was invited over, and with much Discretion raised at first Step from a profligate Popish Priest to a Lieutenant-General and Colonel of a Regiment of Horse, was forced at last to drop him for Shame.

HAD such an Accident happened under that Ministry, and to so considerable a Member of it; they would have immediately charged it upon the whole Body of those they are pleased to call the Faction. This would have been stilyed a High-Church Principle; the Clergy would have been accused as Promoters and Abettors of the Fact; Committees would have been sent to promise the Criminal his Life, provided they might have Liberty to direct and dictate his Confession; and a Black List would have been printed of all those who had been ever seen in the Murderer's Company. But, the present Men in Power hate and despise all such detestable Arts, which they might now turn upon their Adversaries with much more Plausibility, than ever these did their Honourable Negotiations with Greg.

AND here it may be worth observing how unanimous a Concurrence there is between some Persons once in high Power, and a French Papist; both agreeing in the great End of taking away Mr. Harley's Life, although differing in their Methods: The first proceeding by Subornation, the other by Violence; wherein Guiscard seems to have the Advantage, as aiming no further than his Life; while the others designed to destroy at once both That and his Reputation. The Malice of both against this Gentleman seems to have risen from the same Cause; his discovering Designs against the Government. It was Mr. Harley who detected the Treasonable Correspondence of Greg, and secured him betimes; when a certain Great Man who shall be nameless, had, out of the Depth of his Politicks, sent him a Caution to make his Escape; which would certainly have fixed the Appearance of Guilt upon Mr. Harley: But when that was prevented, they would have enticed the condemned Criminal with Promise of a Pardon, to write and Sign an Accusation against the Secretary. But to use Greg's own Expression, His Death was nothing near so ignominious, as would have been such a Life that must be saved by prostituting his Conscience. The same Gentleman lies now stabbed by his other Enemy, a Popish Spy, whose Treason he hath discovered. God preserve the rest of Her Majesty's Ministers from such Protestants, and from such Papists!

I SHALL take Occasion to hint at some Particularities in this surprizing Fact, for the Sake of those at distance, or who may not be thoroughly informed. The Murderer confessed in Newgate, that his chief Design was against Mr. Secretary St. John, who happened to change Seats with Mr. Harley, for more Convenience of examining the Criminal: And being asked what provoked him to stab the Chancellor? He said, that not being able to come at the Secretary, as he intended, it was some Satisfaction to murder the Person whom he thought Mr. St. John loved best.

AND here, if Mr. Harley hath still any Enemies left, whom his Blood spilt in the Publick Service cannot reconcile; I hope they will at least admire his Magnanimity, which is a Quality esteemed even in an Enemy: And, I think there are few greater Instances of it to be found in Story. After the Wound was given, he was observed neither to change his Countenance, nor discover any Concern or Disorder in his Speech: He rose up, and walked along the Room while he was able, with the greatest Tranquility, during the Midst of the Confusion. When the Surgeon came, he took him aside, and desired he would inform him freely whether the Wound were mortal; because in that Case, he said, he had some Affairs to settle, relating to his Family. The Blade of the Penknife, broken by the Violence of the Blow against a Rib, within a Quarter of an Inch of the Handle, was dropt out (I know not whether from the Wound, or his Clothes) as the Surgeon was going to dress him; he ordered it to be taken up, and wiping it himself, gave it some body to keep, saying, he thought it now properly belonged to him. He shewed no Sort of Resentment, or spoke one violent Word against Guisard; but appeared all the while the least concerned of any in the Company. A State of Mind, which in such an Exigency, nothing but Innocence can give; and is truly worthy of a Christian Philosopher.

IF there be really so great a Difference in Principle between the High-flying Whigs, and the Friends of France; I cannot but repeat the Question, how come they to join in the Destruction of the same Man? Can his Death be possibly for the Interest of Both? or have they Both the same Quarrel against Him, that he is perpetually discovering and preventing the treacherous Designs of our Enemies? However it be, this great Minister may now say with St. Paul, that he hath been in Perils by his own Countrymen, and in Perils by Strangers.

In the Midst of so melancholy a Subject, I cannot but Congratulate with our own Country, that such a Savage Monster as the Marquis de Guiscard, is none of her Production; A Wretch perhaps more detestable in his own Nature, than even this barbarous Act hath been yet able to represent Him to the World. For, there are good Reasons to believe, from several Circumstances, that he had Intentions of a deeper Dye, than those he happened to execute; I mean such as every good Subject must tremble to think on. He hath of late been frequently seen going up the Back-stairs at Court, and walking alone in an outer Room adjoining to Her Majesty's Bedchamber. He hath often and earnestly pressed for sometime to have Access to the QUEEN, even since his Correspondence with France; and he hath now given such a Proof of his Disposition, as leaves it easy to guess what was before in his Thoughts, and what he was capable of attempting.

It is humbly to be hoped that the Legislature will interpose on so extraordinary an Occasion as this, and direct a Punishment some way proportionable to so execrable a Crime.

*Et quicunque tuum violavit vulnera corpus,
Morte luat merita—*

---

No. 33. Thursday, March 22, 1710.

---

De Libertate retinenda, qua certe nihil est dulcius tibi assentior.

THE Apologies of the ancient Fathers are reckoned to have been the most useful Parts of their Writings, and to have done greatest Service to the Christian Religion; because they removed those Misrepresentations which had done it most Injury. The Methods these Writers took, was openly and freely to discover every Point of their Faith; to detect the Falshood of their Accusers; and to charge nothing upon their Adversaries but what they were sure to make good. This Example hath been ill followed of later Times: The Papists since the Reformation using all Arts to palliate the Absurdities of their Tenets, and loading the Reformers with a thousand Calumnies; the Consequence of which hath been only a more various, wide, and inveterate Separation. It is the same Thing in Civil Schisms: A Whig forms an Image of a Tory, just after the Thing he most abhors; and that Image serveth to represent the whole Body.

---

I AM not sensible of any material Difference there is between those who call themselves the Old Whigs, and a great Majority of the present Tories; at least by all I could ever find, from examining several Persons of each Denomination. But it must be confessed, that the present Body of Whigs, as they now constitute that Party, is a very odd Mixture of Mankind; being forced to enlarge their Bottom, by taking in every Heterodox Professor either in Religion or Government, whose Opinions they were obliged to encourage for fear of lessening their Number; while the Bulk of the Landed-Men and People were entirely of the old Sentiments. However, they still pretended a due Regard to the Monarchy and the Church, even at the Time when they were making the largest Steps towards the Ruin of both: But not being able to wipe off the many Accusations laid to their Charge, they endeavoured by throwing of Scandal, to make the Tories appear blacker than themselves; that so the People might join with them, as the smaller Evil of the two.

BUT, among all the Reproaches which the Whigs have flung upon their Adversaries, there is none hath done them more Service than that of Passive Obedience, as they represent it, with the Consequences of Non-Resistance, Arbitrary Power, Indefeasible Right, Tyranny, Popery, and what not? There is no Accusation which hath passed with more Plausibility than this; nor any that is supported with less Justice. In order therefore to undeceive those who have been misled by false Representations, I thought it would be no improper Undertaking to set this Matter in a fair Light, which, I think, hath not yet been done. A Whig asks, whether you hold Passive Obedience? You affirm it: He then immediately cries out, you are a Jacobite, a Friend of France and the Pretender; because he makes you answerable for the Definition he hath formed of that Term, however different it be from what you understand. I will therefore give two Descriptions of Passive Obedience; the first, as it is falsely charged by the Whigs; the other, as it is really professed by the Tories, at least by nineteen in twenty of all I ever conversed with.

Passive Obedience as charged by the WHIGS.

THE Doctrine of Passive Obedience is to believe, that a King, even in a limited Monarchy holding his Power only from God, is only answerable to him. That, such a King is above all Law; that the cruellest Tyrant must be submitted to in all Things; and if his Commands be ever so unlawful, you must neither fly nor resist, nor use any other Weapons than Prayers and Tears. Although he should force your Wife or Daughter, murder your Children before your Face, or cut off five hundred Heads in a Morning for his Diversion; you are still to wish him a long prosperous Reign, and to be patient under all his Cruelties, with the same Resignation as under a Plague or a famine; because, to resist him would be to resist God in the Person of his Vicegerent. If a King of England should go through the Streets of London, in order to murder every Man he met, Passive Obedience commands them to submit. All Laws made to limit him signify nothing, although passed by his own Consent, if he think fit to break them. God will indeed call him to a severe Account; but the whole People, united to a Man, cannot presume to hold his Hands, or offer him the least Active Disobedience. The People were certainly created for him, and not he for the People. His next Heir, although worse than what I have described, although a Fool or a Madman, hath a Divine indefeasible Right to succeed him, which no Law can disannul; nay, although he should kill his Father upon the Throne, he is immediately King to all Intentions and Purposes; the Possession of the Crown wiping off all Stains. But, whosoever sits on the Throne without this Title, although never so peaceably, and by Consent of former Kings and Parliaments, is an Usurper, while there is any where in the World another Person who hath a nearer Hereditary Right; and the whole Kingdom lies under mortal Sin until that Heir be restored; because he hath a Divine Title, which no Human Law can defeat.

THIS and a great deal more hath, in a thousand Papers and Pamphlets been laid to that Doctrine of Passive Obedience, which the Whigs are pleased to charge upon us. This is what they perpetually are instilling into the People to believe, as the undoubted Principle by which the present Ministry, and a great Majority in Parliament, do at this Time proceed. This is what they accuse the Clergy of delivering from the Pulpits, and of preaching up as a Doctrine absolutely necessary to Salvation. And whoever affirms in general, that Passive Obedience is due to the Supream Power, he is presently loaden by our candid Adversaries with such Consequences as these. Let us therefore see what this Doctrine is, when stript of such Misrepresentations; by describing it as really taught and practised by the Tories; and then it will appear what Grounds our Adversaries have to accuse us upon this Article.

Passive Obedience, as professed and practised by the TORIES.

THEY think that in every Government, whether Monarchy or Republick, there is placed a supream, absolute, unlimited Power, to which Passive Obedience is due. That, wherever is entrusted the Power of making Laws, that Power is without all Bounds; can repeal or enact at Pleasure whatever Laws it thinks fit; and justly demands Universal Obedience and Non-resistance. That, among us, as every Body knows, this Power is lodged in the King or Queen, together with the Lords and Commons of the Kingdom; and therefore all Decrees whatsoever, made by that Power, are to be actively or passively obeyed: That, the Administration or Executive Part of this Power is in England solely intrusted with the Prince; who, in administering those Laws, ought to be no more resisted than the Legislative Power it self. But, they do not conceive the same absolute Passive Obedience to be due to a limited Prince's Commands, when they are directly contrary to the Laws he hath consented to, and sworn to maintain. The Crown may be sued as well as a private Person; and if an arbitrary King of England should send his Officers to seize my Lands or Goods against Law; I can lawfully resist them. The Ministers by whom he acts are liable to Prosecution and Impeachment, although his own Person be Sacred. But, if he interpose his Royal Authority to support their Insolence, I see no Remedy, until it grows a general Grievance, or until the Body of the People have Reason to apprehend it will be so; after which it becomes a Case of Necessity; and then I suppose, a free People may assert their own Rights, yet without any Violation to the Person or lawful Power of the Prince. But, although the Tories allow all this, and did justify it by the Share they had in the Revolution; yet they see no Reason for entring upon so ungrateful a Subject, or raising Controversies upon it, as if we were in daily Apprehensions of Tyranny, under the Reign of so excellent a Princess, and while we have so many Laws of late Years made to limit the Prerogative. As to the Succession; the Tories think an Hereditary Right to be the best in its own Nature, and most agreeable to our old Constitution; yet at the same Time they allow it to be defeasible by Act of Parliament; and so is Magna Charta too, if the Legislature think fit; which is a Truth so manifest, that no Man who understands the Nature of Government, can be in doubt concerning it.

THESE I take to be the Sentiments of a great Majority among the Tories, with Respect to Passive Obedience: And if the Whigs insist, from the Writings or common Talk of warm and ignorant Men, to form a Judgment of the whole Body, according to the first Account I have here given; I will engage to produce as many of their Side, who are utterly against Passive Obedience even to the Legislature; who will assert the last Resort of Power to be in the People, against those whom they have chosen and trusted as their Representatives, with the Prince at the Head; and who will put wild improbable Cases to shew the Reasonableness and Necessity of resisting the Legislative Power, in such imaginary Junctures. Than which however, nothing can be more idle; for I dare undertake in any System of Government, either Speculative or Practick, that was ever yet in the World, from Plato's Republick to Harrington's Oceana, to put such Difficulties as cannot be answered.

ALL the other Calumnies raised by the Whigs may be as easily wiped off: And I have Charity to wish they could as fully answer the just Accusations we have against them. Dodwell, Hickes, and Lesley, are gravely quoted, to prove that the Tories design to bring in the Pretender; and if I should quote them to prove that the same Thing is intended by the Whigs, it would be full as reasonable; since I am sure they have at least as much to do with Nonjurors as we. But, our Objections against the Whigs are built upon their constant Practice for many Years, whereof I have produced a hundred Instances, against any single one of which no Answer hath yet been attempted, although I have been curious enough to look into all the Papers I could meet with that are writ against the Examiner; such a Task, as I hope, no Man thinks I would undergo for any other End, but that of finding an Opportunity to own and rectify my Mistakes; as I would be ready to do upon Call of the meanest Adversary. Upon which Occasion, I shall take Leave to add a few Words.

I FLATTERED my self last Thursday, from the Nature of my Subject, and the inoffensive Manner I handled it, that I should have one Week's Respite from those merciless Pens, whose Severity will some Time break my Heart: But I am deceived, and find them more violent than ever. They charge me with two Lies, and a Blunder. The first Lie is a Truth, that Guisard was invited over: But it is of no Consequence: I do not tax it as a Fault; such Sort of Men have often been serviceable: I only blamed the Indiscretion of raising a profligate Abbot, at the first Step, to a Lieutenant General and Colonel of a Regiment of Horse, without staying some reasonable Time, as is usual in such Cases, until he had given some Proofs of his Fidelity, as well as of that Interest and Credit he pretended to have in his Country: But, that is said to be another Lie, for he was a Papist, and could not have a Regiment. However this other Lie is a Truth too; for a Regiment he had, and paid by us, to his Agent Monsieur Le Bar, for his Use. The third is a Blunder, that I say Guisard's Design was against Mr. Secretary St. John; and yet my Reasonings upon it, are, as if it were personal against Mr. Harley. But I say no such Thing, and my Reasonings are just; I relate only what Guisard said in Newgate, because it was a Particularity the Reader might be curious to know (and accordingly it lies in a Paragraph by it self, after my Reflections) but I never meant to be answerable for what Guisard said, or thought it of Weight enough for me to draw Conclusions from thence, when I had the Address of both Houses to direct me better: Where it is expressly said, That Mr. Harley's Fidelity to her Majesty, and Zeal for her Service, have drawn upon him the Hatred of all the Abettors of Popery and Faction. This is what I believe, and what I shall stick to.

BUT alas, these are not the Passages which have raised so much Fury against me. One or two Mistakes in Facts of no Importance, or a single Blunder, would not have provoked them; they are not so tender of my Reputation as a Writer. All their Outrage is occasioned by those Passages in that Paper, which they do not in the least pretend to answer; and with the utmost Reluctancy are forced to mention. They take abundance of Pains to clear Guisard from a Design against Mr. Harley's Life; but offer not one Argument to clear their other Friends, who in the Business of Greg, were equally guilty of the same Design against the same Person; whose Tongues were very Swords, and whose Pen-knives were Axes.

---

---

No. 34. Thursday, March 29. 1711.

---

— Sunt hic etiam sua pramia laudi;
Sunt lachrymae rerum, & mentem mortalia tangunt.

IBEGIN to be heartily weary of my Employment as Examiner; which I wish the Ministry would consider, with half so much Concern as I do; and assign me some other with less Pains, and a Pension. There may soon be a Vacancy, either on the Bench, in the Revenue, or the Army, and I am equally Qualified for each: But this Trade of Examining, I apprehend, may at one time or other go near to sour my Temper. I did lately propose that some of those ingenious Pens, which are engaged on the other Side, might be employed to succeed me; and I undertook to bring them over for t'other Crown; but it was answered, that those Gentlemen do much better Service in the Stations where they are. It was added, that abundance of Abuses yet remained to be laid open to the World, which I had often promised to do, but was too much diverted by other Subjects, that came into my Head. On the other Side; the Advice of some Friends, and the Threats of many Enemies, have put me upon considering what would become of me if Times should alter. This I have done very maturely, and the Result is, that I am in no manner of Pain. I grant, that what I have said upon Occasion, concerning the late Men in Power, may be called Satyr by some unthinking People, as long as that Faction is down; but if ever they come into Play again, I must give them warning beforehand, that I shall expect to be a Favourite, and that those pretended Advocates of theirs, will be Pillored for Libellers. For, I appeal to any Man, whether I ever charged that Party, or its Leaders, with one single Action or Design, which (if we may judge by their former Practices) they will not openly profess, be proud of, and score up for Merit, when they come again to the Head of Affairs? I said, they were Insolent to the Q U E E N; Will they not value themselves upon That, as an Argument to prove them bold Assertors of the People's Liberty? I affirmed they were against a Peace; will they be angry with me for setting forth the Refinements of their Politicks, in pursuing the only Method left to preserve them in Power? I said, they had involved the Nation in Debts, and ingrossed much of its Money; they go beyond me, and boast they have got it all, and the Credit too. I have urged the Probability of their intending great Alterations in Religion and Government: If they destroy both at their next Coming, will they not reckon my foretelling it, rather as a Panegyrick than an Affront? I said, they had formerly a * Design against Mr. Harly's Life: If they were now in Power, would they not immediately cut off his Head, and thank me for justifying the Sincerity of their Intentions? In short, there is nothing I ever said of those worth"

---

* Vide EXAMINER 32.

Patriots, which may not be as well excused: Therefore, as soon as They resume their Places, I positively design to put in my Claim; and, I think, may do it with better Grace, than many of that Party who now make their Court to the present Ministry. I know two or three great Men, at whose Levees you may Daily observe a Score of the most forward Faces, which every Body is ashamed of, except those who wear them. But I conceive my Pretensions will be upon a very different Foot: Let me offer a Parallel Case. Suppose, King Charles the First had entirely subdued the Rebels at Naseby, and reduced the Kingdom to his Obedience: Whoever had gone about to Reason, from the former Conduct of those Saints, that if the Victory had fallen on Their side, they would have murdered their Prince, destroyed Monarchy and the Church, and made the King's Party compound for their Estates as Delinquents; would have been called a false, uncharitable Libeller, by those very Persons who afterwards gloried in all this, and called it the Work of the Lord, when they happened to succeed. I remember there was a Person Fined and Imprisoned for Scandalum Magnum, because he said the Duke of York was a Papist; but when that Prince came to be King, and made open Profession of his Religion, he had the Justice immediately to release his Prisoner, who in his Opinion had put a Compliment upon him, and not a Reproach: And therefore Colonel Titus, who had warmly asserted the same Thing in Parliament, was made a Privy-Councillor.

By this Rule, if that which, for some Politick Reasons, is now called Scandal upon the late Ministry, prove one Day to be only an Abstract of such a Character as they will assume and be proud of; I think I may fairly offer my Pretensions, and hope for their Favour. And I am the more confirmed in this Notion by what I have observed in those Papers, that come weekly out against the Examiner: The Authors are perpetually telling me of my Ingenuity to my Masters; that I blunder, and betray the Cause; and write with more Bitterness against those who hire me, than against the Whigs. Now, I took all this at first only for so many Strains of Wit, and pretty Paradoxes to divert the Reader; but upon further thinking I find they are Serious. I imagined I had complimented the present Ministry for their dutiful Behaviour to the QUEEN; for their Love of the old Constitution in Church and State; for their Generosity and Justice, and for their Desire of a speedy, honourable Peace: But it seems I am mistaken, and they reckon all this for Satyr, because it is directly contrary to the Practice of all those whom they set up to defend, and utterly against all their Notions of a good Ministry. Therefore I cannot but think they have Reason on their side: For, suppose I should write the Character of an Honest, a Religious, and a learned Man, and send the first to Newgate, these second to the Grecian Coffee-House, and the last to White's; would they not all pass for Satyrs, and justly enough, among the Companies to whom they were sent?

HAVING therefore employed several Papers in such sort of Panegyricks, and but very few on what they understand to be Satyrs; I shall henceforth upon Occasion be more Liberal of the latter; of which they are like to have a Taste in the remainder of this present Paper.

AMONG all the Advantages which the Kingdom hath received by the late Change of Ministry, the greatest must be allowed the calling of the present Parliament, upon the Dissolution of the last. It is acknowledged, that this excellent Assembly hath entirely recovered the Honour of Parliaments, which hath been unhappily prostituted for some Years past by the Factious Proceedings of an unnatural Majority, in Concert with a most corrupt Administration. It is plain, by the present Choice of Members, that the Electors of England, when left to themselves, do rightly understand their true Interest. The moderate Whigs begin to be convinced, that we have been all this while in wrong Hands; and that Things are now as they should be. And, as the present House of Commons is the best Representative of the Nation that hath ever been summoned in our Memories; so they have taken Care in their first Session, by that noble Bill of Qualification, that future Parliaments should be composed of Landed Men; and our Properties lie no more at Mercy of those who have none themselves, or at least only what is transient or imaginary. If there be any Gratitude in Posterity, the Memory of this Assembly will be always celebrated; if otherwise, at least we, who share in the Blessings they derive to us, ought with grateful Hearts to acknowledge them.

I DESIGN, in some following Papers, to draw up a List (for I can do no more) of the great Things this Parliament hath already performed; the many Abuses they have detected; their Justice in deciding Elections without Regard of Party; their Clearfulness and Address in raising Supplies for the War; and at the same Time providing for the Nation's Debts; their Duty to the QUEEN, and their Kindness to the Church. In the mean Time I cannot forbear mentioning two Particulars, which in my Opinion do discover, in some Measure, the Temper of the present Parliament; and bear Analogy to those Passages related by Plutarch, in the Lives of certain great Men; which, as himself observeth, Although they be not of Actions which make any great Noise or Figure in History, yet give more Light into the Characters of Persons, than we could receive from an Account of their most renowned Atchievements.

SOMETHING like this may be observed from two late Instances of Decency and good Nature, in that illustrious Assembly I am speaking of. The first was, when after that inhuman Attempt upon Mr. Harley, they were pleased to vote an Address to the QUEEN; wherein they express their utmost Detestation of the Fact; their high Esteem and great Concern for that able Minister; and justly impute his Misfortunes to that Zeal for her Majesty's Service, which had drawn upon him the Hatred of all the Abettors of Popery and Faction. I dare affirm, that so distinguishing a Mark of Honour and good Will from such a Parliament, was more acceptable to a Person of Mr. Harley's generous Nature, than the most bountiful Grant that was ever yet made to a Subject; as her Majesty's Answer, filled with gracious Expressions in his Favour, adds more to his real Glory, than any Titles she could bestow. The Prince and Representatives of the whole Kingdom, join in their Concern for so important a Life. These are the true Rewards of Virtue; and this is the Commerce between noble Spirits, in a Coin which the Giver knows where to bestow, and the Receiver how to value, although neither Avarice nor Ambition would be able to comprehend its Worth.

THE other Instance I intended to produce of Decency and good Nature, in the present House of Commons, relates to their most worthy Speaker; who having unfortunately lost his eldest Son;

the Assembly, moved with a generous Pity for so sensible an Affliction, adjourned themselves for a Week, that so good a Servant of the Publick, might have some Interval to wipe away a Father's Tears: And indeed, that Gentleman hath too just an Occasion for his Grief by the Death of a Son, who had already acquired so great a Reputation for every amiable Quality; and who might have lived to be so great an Honour and an Ornament to his antient Family.

BEFORE I conclude, I must desire one Favour of the Reader; that when he thinks it worth his while to peruse any Paper writ against the Examiner, he will not form his Judgment by any mangled Quotation out of it which he finds in such Papers, but be so just to read the Paragraph referred to; which I am confident will be found a sufficient Answer to all that ever those Papers can object. At least I have seen above fifty of them, and never yet observed one single Quotation transcribed with common Candor.

---

---

No. 35. Thursday, April 5, 1711.

---

Nullo suo peccato impediantur, quo minus alterius peccata demonstrare possint.

I HAVE been considering the old Constitution of this Kingdom; comparing it with the Monarchies and Republicks whereof we meet so many Accounts in ancient Story, and with those at present in most Parts of Europe: I have considered our Religion, established here by the Legislature soon after the Reformation: I have likewise examined the Genius and Disposition of the People, under that reasonable Freedom they possess: Then I have turned my Reflections upon those two great Divisions of Whig and Tory, (which, some Way or other, take in the whole Kingdom) with the Principles they both profess, as well as those wherewith they reproach one another. From all this, I endeavour to determine, from which Side her present Majesty may reasonably hope for most Security to her Person and Government; and to which she ought, in Prudence, to trust the Administration of her Affairs. If these two Rivals were really no more than Parties, according to the common Acceptation of the Word; I should agree with those Politicians who think, a Prince descendeth from his Dignity by putting himself at the Head of either; and that his wisest Course is, to keep them in a Balance; raising or depressing either, as it best suited with his Designs. But, when the visible Interest of his Crown and Kingdom lies on one Side; and when the other is but a Faction, raised and strengthned by Incidents and Intrigues, and by deceiving the People with false Representations of Things; he ought, in Prudence, to take the first Opportunity of opening his Subjects Eyes, and declaring himself in favour of those, who are for preserving the Civil and Religious Rights of the Nation, wherewith his own are so interwoven.

THIS was certainly our Case: For I do not take the Heads, Advocates, and Followers of the Whigs, to make up, strictly speaking, a National Party; being patched up of heterogeneous, inconsistent Parts, whom nothing served to unite but the common Interest of sharing in the Spoil and Plunder of the People; the present Dread of their Adversaries, by whom they apprehended to be called to an Account, and that general Conspiracy, of endeavouring to overturn the Church and State; which, however, if they could have compassed, they would certainly have fallen out among themselves, and broke in Pieces, as their Predecessors did, after they destroyed the Monarchy and Religion. For, how could a Whig, who is against all Discipline, agree with a Presbyterian, who carries it higher than the Papists themselves? How could a Socinian adjust his Models to either? Or how could any of these cement with a Deist or Free-thinker, when they came to consult upon settling Points of Faith? Neither would they have agreed better in their Systems of Government; where some would have been for a King, under the Limitations of the Duke of Venice; others for a Dutch Republick; a third Party for an Aristocracy; and most of them all for some new Fabrick of their own contriving.

BUT however, let us consider them as a Party, and under those general Tenets wherein they agreed, and which they publickly owned, without charging them with any that they pretend to deny. Then, let us examine those Principles of the Tories, which their Adversaries allow them to profess, and do not pretend to tax them with any Actions contrary to those Professions: After which, let the Reader judge from which of these two Parties a Prince hath most to fear; and whether her Majesty did not consider the Ease, the Safety, and Dignity of her Person, the Security of her Crown, and the transmission of Monarchy to her Protestant Successors, when she put her Affairs into the present Hands.

SUPPOSE the Matter were now entire; the QUEEN to make her Choice; and for that End, should order the Principles on both Sides to be fairly laid before her. First, I conceive the Whigs would grant, that they have naturally no great Veneration for crowned Heads; that they allow, the Person of the Prince may, upon many Occasions, be resisted by Arms; and that they do not condemn the War raised against King Charles the First, or own it to be a Rebellion, although they would be thought to blame his Murder. They do not think the Prerogative to be yet sufficiently limited, and have therefore taken Care (as a particular Mark of their Veneration for the illustrious House of Hanover) to clip it closer against the next Reign; which, consequently, they would be glad to see done in the present: Not to mention, that the Majority of them, if it were put to the Vote, would allow, that they prefer a Commonwealth before a Monarchy. As to Religion; their universal undisputed Maxim is, That it ought to make no Distinction at all among Protestants; and in the Word Protestant they include every Body who is not a Papist, and who will, by an Oath, give Security to the Government. Union in Discipline and Doctrine, the offensive Sin of Schism, the Notion of a Church and a Hierarchy, they laugh at as Foppery, Cant and Priestcraft. They see no Necessity at all that there should be a National Faith; and what we usually call by that Name, they only style the Religion of the Magistrate. Since the Dissenters and we agree in the Main, why should the Difference of a few Speculative Points, or Modes of Dress, incapacitate them from serving their Prince and Country, in a Juncture when we ought to have all Hands up against the common Enemy? And why should they be forced to take the Sacrament from our Clergy's Hands, and in our Posture; or indeed why compelled to receive it at all, when they take an Employment which has nothing to do with Religion?

THESE are the Notions which most of that Party avow, and which they do not endeavour to disguise or set off with false Colours, or complain of being misrepresented about. I have here placed them on Purpose, in the same Light which themselves do, in the very Apologies they make for what we accuse them of; and how inviting even these Doctrines are, for such a Monarch to close with, as our Law, both Statute and Common, understands a King of England to be, let others decide. But then, if to these we should add other Opinions, which most of their own Writers justify, and which their universal Practice hath given a Sanction to; they are no more than what a Prince might reasonably expect, as the natural Consequence of those avowed Principles. For, when such Persons are at the Head of Affairs, the low Opinion they have of Princes, will certainly lead them to violate that Respect they ought to bear; and at the same Time, their own Want of Duty to their Sovereign is largely made up, by exacting greater Submissions to themselves from their Fellow-Subjects: It being indisputably true, That the same Principle of Pride and Ambition makes a Man treat his Equals with Insolence, in the same Proportion as he affronts his Superiors; as both Prince and People have sufficiently felt from the late Ministry.

THEN, from their confessed Notions of Religion, as above related, I see no Reason to wonder, why they countenanced not only all Sorts of Dissenters, but the several Gradations of Free-thinkers among us (all which were openly enrolled in their Party;) or why they were so very averse from the present established Form of Worship, which by prescribing Obedience to Princes from the Topick of Conscience, would be sure to thwart all their Schemes of Innovation.

ONE Thing I might add, as another acknowledged Maxim in that Party, and in my Opinion, as dangerous to the Constitution as any I have mentioned; I mean, That of preferring, on all Occasions, the Moneyed Interest before the Landed; which they were so far from denying, that they would gravely debate the Reasonableness and Justice of it; and at the Rate they went on, might in a little Time have found a Majority of Representatives, fitly qualified to lay those heavy Burthens on the rest of the Nation, which themselves would not touch with one of their Fingers.

HOWEVER, to deal impartially, there are some Motives which might compel a Prince under the Necessity of Affairs, to deliver himself over to that Party. They were said to possess the great Bulk of Cash, and consequently of Credit in the Nation; and the Heads of them had the Reputation of presiding over those Societies who have the great Direction of both: So that all Applications for Loans to the Publick Service, upon any Emergency, must be made through them; and it might prove highly dangerous to disoblige them; because in this Case, it was not to be doubted, that they would be obstinate and malicious, ready to obstruct all Affairs, not only by shutting their own Purses, but by endeavouring to sink Credit, although with some present imaginary Loss to themselves, only to shew it was a Creature of their own.

FROM this Summary of Whig-Principles and Dispositions, we find what a Prince may reasonably fear and hope from that Party. Let us now very briefly consider the Doctrines of the Tories, which their Adversaries will not dispute. As they prefer a well-regulated Monarchy, before all other Forms of Government; so they think it next to impossible to alter that Institution here, without involving our whole Island in Blood and Desolation. They believe, that the Prerogative of a Sovereign ought, at least, to be held as sacred and inviolable as the Rights of his People; if only for this Reason; because, without a due Share of Power, he will not be able to protect them. They think, that by many known Laws of this Realm, both Statute and Common, neither the Person, nor lawful Authority of the Prince, ought, upon any Pretence whatsoever, to be resisted or disobeyed. Their Sentiments, in relation to the Church, are known enough, and will not be controverted, being just the Reverse to what I have delivered as the Doctrine and Practice of the Whigs upon that Article.

BUT here I must likewise deal impartially too; and add one Principle as a Characteristick of the Tories, which hath much disengaged some Princes from making Use of them in Affairs. Give the Wbig but Power enough to insult their Sovereign, engross his Favours to themselves, and to oppress and plunder their Fellow-Subjects; they presently grow into good Humour and good Language towards the Crown; profess they will stand by it with their Lives and Fortunes; and whatever Rudenesses they may be guilty of in private, yet they assure the World, that there never was so gracious a Monarch. But, to the Shame of the Tories, it must be confessed, that nothing of all this hath been ever observed in them; in or out of Favour, you see no Alteration, further than a little Cheerfulness or Cloud in their Countenances; the highest Employments can add nothing to their Loyalty; but their Behaviour to their Prince, as well as their Expressions of Love and Duty, are, in all Conditions exactly the same.

HAVING thus impartially stated the avowed Principles of Wbig and Tory; let the Reader determine, as he pleaseth, to which of these two a wise Prince may, with most Safety to himself and the Publick, trust his Person and his Affairs; and whether it were Rashness or Prudence in her Majesty to make those Changes in the Ministry, which have been so highly extolled by some, and condemned by others.

---

No. 36. Thursday, April 12, 1711.

---

*Tres species tam dissimiles, tria talia texta
Una dies dedit exitio* —————

I WRITE this Paper for the Sake of the Dissenters, whom I take to be the most spreading Branch of the Wbig Party, that professeth Christianity; and the only one that seems to be zealous for any particular System of it; the Bulk of those we call the Low-Church being generally indifferent, and undetermined in that Point; and the other Subdivisions having not yet taken either the Old or New Testament into their Scheme. By the Dissenters therefore, it will easily be understood, that I mean the Presbyterians, as they include the Sects of Anabaptists, Independents, and others, which have been melted down into them since the Restoration. This Sect, in order to make it self National, having gone so far as to raise a Rebellion, murder their King, destroy Monarchy and the Church; was afterwards broken in Pieces by its own Divisions; which made Way for the King's Return from his Exile. However, the Zealous among them did still entertain Hopes of recovering the Dominion of Grace; whereof I have read a remarkable Passage, in a Book published about the Year 1661, and written by one of their own Side. As one of the Regicides was going to his Execution, a Friend asked him, Whether he thought the Cause would revive? He answered, The Cause is in the Bosom of Christ; and as sure as Christ rose from the Dead, so sure will the Cause revive also. And therefore the Nonconformists were strictly watched and restrained by Penal Laws, during the Reign of King Charles the Second; the Court and Kingdom looking on them as a Faction, ready to join in any Design against the Government in Church or State: And surely this was reasonable enough, while so many continued alive, who had voted, and fought, and preached against both, and gave no Proof that they had changed their Principles. The Nonconformists were then exactly upon the same Foot with our Nonjurors now, whom we double Tax, forbid their Conventicles, and keep under Hatches; without thinking ourselves possessed with a persecuting Spirit; because we know they want nothing but the Power to Ruin us. This, in my Opinion, should altogether silence the Dissenters Complaints of Persecution under King Charles the Second; or make them shew us wherein they differed, at that Time, from what our Jacobites are now.

THEIR Inclinations to the Church were soon discovered, when King James the Second succeeded to the Crown, with whom they unanimously joined in its Ruin, to revenge themselves for that Restraint they had most justly suffered in the foregoing Reign; not from the persecuting Temper of the Clergy, as their Clamours would suggest, but the Prudence and Caution of the Legislature. The same Indulgence against Law, was made Use of by them and the Papists; and they amicably employed their Power, as in Defence of one common Interest.

BUT the Revolution happening soon after, served to wash away the Memory of the Rebellion; upon which, the Run against Popery, was no doubt as just and seasonable, as that of Fanatism, after the Restoration: And the Dread of Popery, being then our latest Danger, and consequently the most fresh upon our Spirits, all Mouths were open against That; the Dissenters were rewarded with an Indulgence by Law; the Rebellion and King's Murder was now no longer a Reproach; the former was only a Civil War, and whoever durst call it a Rebellion, was a Jacobite, and Friend to France. This was the more unexpected, because the Revolution being wholly brought about by Church of England Hands, they hoped one good Consequence of it, would be the relieving us from the Incroachments of Dissenters, as well as those of Papists; since both had equally Confederated towards our Ruin; and therefore, when the Crown was new settled, it was hoped at least that the rest of the Constitution would be restored. But this Affair took a very different Turn; the Dissenters had just made a Shift to save a Tide; and join with the Prince of Orange, when they found all was desperate with their Protector King James: And, observing a Party, then forming against the old Principles in Church and State, under the Name of Whigs and Low-Churchmen, they listed themselves of it, where they have ever since continued.

IT is therefore, upon the Foot they now are, that I would apply my self to them, and desire they would consider the different Circumstances at present, from what they were under, when they began their Designs against the Church and Monarchy, about seventy Years ago. At that Juncture they made up the Body of the Party; and whosoever joined with them from Principles of Revenge, Discontent, Ambition, or Love of Change, were all forced to shelter under their Denomination; united heartily in the Pretences of a further and purer Reformation in Religion, and of advancing the great Work (as the Cant was then) that God was about to do in these Nations; received the Systems of Doctrine and Discipline prescribed by the Scots, and readily took the Covenant; so that there appeared no Division among them, 'till after the common Enemy was subdued.

BUT now their Case is quite otherwise; and I can hardly think it worth being a Party, upon the Terms they have been received of late Years: For, suppose the whole Faction should at length succeed in their Design of destroying the Church; are they so Weak to imagine, that the new Modelling of Religion, would be put into their Hands? Would their Brethren, the Low-Churchmen and Freethinkers, submit to their Discipline, their Synods or their Classes, and divide the Lands of Bishops, or Deans and Chapters, among Them? How can they help observing, that their Allies, instead of pretending more Sanctity than other Men, are some of them for levelling all Religion; and the rest for abolishing it? Is it not manifest, that they have been treated by their Confederates, exactly after the same manner, as they were by King James II; made Instruments to ruin the Church, not for their own Sakes, but under a pretended Project of universal Freedom in Opinion, to advance the dark Designs of those who employ them? For, excepting the Antimonarchical Principle, and a few false Notions about Liberty, I see but little Agreement betwixt them; and even in these, I believe it would be impossible to contrive a Frame of Government, that would please them all, if they had it now in their Power to try. But however, to be sure, the Presbyterian Institution would never obtain. For, suppose they should, in imitation of their Predecessors, propose to have no King but our Saviour Christ; the whole Clan of Free-thinkers would immediately object, and refuse his Authority. Neither would their Low-Church Brethren use them better, as well knowing what Enemies they are to that Doctrine of unlimitted Toleration, wherever they are suffered to preside. So that upon the whole, I do not see, as their present Circumstances stand, where the Dissenters can find better Quarter, than from the Church of England.

BESIDES, I leave it to their Consideration, whether, with all their Zeal against the Church, they ought not to shew a little Decency; and how far it consists with their Reputation, to act in Concert with such Confederates. It was reckoned a very infamous Proceeding in the present most Christian King, to assist the Turk against the Emperor: Policy, and Reasons of State, were not allowed sufficient Excuses for taking Part with an Infidel against a Believer. It is one of the Dissenters Quarrels against the Church, that She is not enough reformed from Popery; yet they boldly entered into a League with Papists and a Popish Prince, to destroy Her. They profess much Sanctity, and object against the wicked Lives of some of our Members; yet, they have been long, and still continue, in strict Combination with Libertines and Atheists, to contrive our Ruin. What if the Jews should multiply, and become a formidable Party among us? Would the Dissenters join in Alliance with them likewise, because they agree already in some general Principles, and because the Jews are allowed to be a stiff-necked and rebellious People?

IT is the Part of Wise Men to conceal their Passions, when they are not in Circumstances of exerting them to Purpose: The Arts of getting Power, and preserving Indulgence, are very different. For the former, the reasonable Hopes of the Dissenters, seem to be at an End; their Comrades, the Whigs and Free-thinkers, are just in a Condition proper to be forsaken; and the Parliament, as well as the Body of the People, will be deluded no longer. Besides, it sometimes happens for a Cause to be exhausted and worn out, as that of the Whigs in general, seems at present to be: The Nation hath felt enough of it. It is as vain to hope restoring that decayed Interest, as for a Man of Sixty to talk of entering on a new Scene of Life, that is only proper for Youth and Vigour. New Circumstances and new Men must arise, as well as new Occasions, which are not like to happen in our Time. So, that the Dissenters have no Game left, at present, but to secure their Indulgence: In order to which, I will be so bold to offer them some Advice.

FIRST, That until some late Proceedings be a little forgot, they would take Care not to provoke, by any Violence of Tongue or Pen, so great a Majority, as there is now against them; nor keep up any longer that Combination with their broken Allies; but disperse themselves, and lie dormant against some better Opportunity: I have shewn, they could have got no Advantage if the late Party had prevailed; they will certainly lose none by its Fall, unless through their own Fault. They pretend a mighty Veneration for the QUEEN, let them give Proof of it, by quitting the ruined Interest of those who have used her so ill; and by a due Respect to the Persons she is pleased to trust at present with her Affairs: When they can no longer hope to govern, when struggling can do them no good, and may possibly hurt them; what is left but to be silent and passive?

SECONDLY, Although there be no Law (beside that of God Almighty) against Occasional Conformity; it would be Prudence in the Dissenters to use it as tenderly as they can: For, besides the infamous Hypocrisy of the Thing it self; too frequent Practice would perhaps make a Remedy necessary. And after all they have said to justify themselves in this Point, it still continues hard to conceive, how those Consciences can pretend to be scrupulous, upon which an Employment hath more Power than the Love of Unity.

IN the last Place, I am humbly of Opinion, That the Dissenters would do well to drop that Lesson they have learned from their Directors, of affecting to be underhorrible Apprehensions, that the Tories are in the Interests of the Pretender, and would be ready to embrace the first Opportunity of inviting him over. It is with the worst Grace in the World, that they offer to join in the Cry upon this Article: As if those, who alone stood in the Gap against all the Encroachments of Papery and Arbitrary Power, are not more likely to keep out both, than a Sett of Schismatics, who to gratify their Ambition and Revenge, did, by the meanest Compliances, encourage and spirit up that unfortunate Prince, to fall upon such Measures, as must, at last, have ended in the Ruin of our Liberty and Religion.

I wish those who give themselves the trouble to write to the Examiner, would consider whether what they send be proper for such a Paper to take notice of: I had one Letter last Week, written, as I suppose, by a Divine, to desire I would offer some Reasons against a Bill now before the Parliament for Ascertaining the Tythe of Hops; from which the Writer apprehends great Damage to the Clergy, especially the poorer Vicars: If it be, as he says (and he seems to argue very reasonably upon it) the Convocation now sitting, will, no doubt, upon due Application, represent the Matter to the House of Commons; and he may expect all Justice and Favour from that Great Body, who have already appeared so tender of their Rights.

A Gentleman, likewise, who hath sent me several Letters, relating to Personal Hardships he received from some of the late Ministry, is advised to publish a Narrative of them; they being too large, and not proper for this Paper.

---

---

No. 37. Thursday, April 19, 1711.

---

Semper causa eventorum magis mouent quam ipsa eventa.

AM glad to observe, that several among the Whigs have begun very much to change their Language of late. The Style is now among the reasonable part of them, when they meet a Man in Business, or a Member of a Parliament; Well, Gentlemen, if you go on as you have hitherto done, we shall no longer have any Pretence to complain. They find, it seems, that there have been yet no Overtures made to bring in the Pretender, nor any preparatory Steps towards it. They read no enslaving Votes, nor Bills brought in to endanger the Subject. The Indulgence to scrupulous Consciences, is again confirmed from the Throne, inviolably preserved, and not the least Whisper offered that may affect it. All Care is taken to support the War; Supplies cheerfully granted, and Funds readily subscribed to, in spight of the little Arts made use of to discredit them. The just Resentments of some, which are laudable in themselves, and which at another Juncture it might be proper to give way to, have been softened or diverted by the Calmness of others. So that upon the Article of present Management, I do not see how any Objection of Weight can well be raised.

HOWEVER, our Adversaries still alledge, that this great Success was wholly unexpected, and out of all probable View. That, in publick Affairs, we ought, least of all others, to judge by Events; That, the Attempt of changing a Ministry, during the Difficulties of a long War, was rash and inconsiderate: That, if the QUEEN were disposed by her Inclinations, or from any personal Dislike, for such a Change, it might have been done with more Safety in a Time of Peace: That, if it had miscarried by any of those Incidents, which in all Appearance might have intervened, the Consequences would perhaps have ruined the whole Confederacy; and therefore, however it hath now succeeded, the Experiment was too dangerous to try.

BUT this is what we can by no means allow them. We never will admit Rashness or Chance to have produced all this Harmony and Order. It is visible to the World, that the several Steps towards this Change were slowly taken, and with the utmost Caution. The Movers observed as they went on, how Matters would bear; and advanced no farther at first, than so as they might be able to stop or go back, if Circumstances were not mature. Things were grown to such a Height, that it was no longer the Question, whether a Person who aimed at an Employment were a Whig or a Tory; much less, whether he had Merit or proper Abilities for what he pretended to: He must owe his Preferment only to the Favourites; and the Crown was so far from Nominating, that they would not allow it a Negative. This, the QUEEN was resolved no longer to endure; and began to break into their Prescription, by bestowing one or two Places of Consequence, without consulting her Ephori; after they had fixed them for others, and concluded as usually, that all their Business was to signify their Pleasure to her Majesty. But, although the Persons the QUEEN had chosen, were such as no Objection could well be raised against, upon the Score of Party, yet the Oligarchy took the Alarm; their Sovereign Authority was, it seems, called in Question; they grew into Anger and Discontent, as if their undoubted Rights were violated. All former Obligations to their Sovereign now became cancelled; and they put themselves upon the Foot of People, who were hardly used after the most eminent Services.

I BELIEVE, all Men who know any thing in Politicks, will agree, that a Prince thus treated by those he hath most confided in, and perpetually loaded with his Favours, ought to extricate himself as soon as possible; and is then only blameable in his Choice of Time, when he defers one Minute after it is in his Power; because, from the monstrous Encroachments of exorbitant Avarice and Ambition, he cannot tell how long it may continue to be so. And it will be found, upon enquiring into History, that most of those Princes, who have been ruined by Favourites, have owed their Misfortune to the Neglect of early Remedies; deferring to struggle until they were quite sunk.

THE Whigs are every Day cursing the ungovernable Rage, the haughty Pride, and unsatiable Covetousness of a certain Person, as the Cause of their Fall; and are apt to tell their Thoughts, that one single Removal might have set all Things right. But the Interests of that single Person were found upon Experience, so complicated and woven with the rest, by Love, by Awe, by Marriage, by Alliance; that they would rather confound Heaven and Earth, than dissolve such an Union.

I HAVE always heard and understood, that a King of England, possessed of his People's Hearts; at the Head of a Free Parliament, and in full Agreement with a great Majority, made the true Figure in the World that such a Monarch ought to do; and pursued the real Interest of himself and his Kingdom, Will they allow her Majesty to be in those Circumstances at present? And was it not plain by the Addresses sent from all Parts of the Island, and by the visible Disposition of the People, that such a Parliament would undoubtedly be chosen? And so it proved, without the Court's using any Arts to influence Elections.

WHAT People then, are these in a Corner, to whom the Constitution must truckle? If the whole Nation's Credit cannot supply Funds for the War, without humble Application from the entire Legislature to a few Retailers of Money; it is high time we should sue for a Peace. What new Maxims are these, which neither we nor our Forefathers ever heard of before, and which no wise Institution would ever allow? Must our Laws from henceforward pass the Bank and East-India Company, or have their Royal Assent before they are in Force?

To hear some of these worthy Reasoners talking of Credit; that she is so nice, so squeamish, so capricious; you would think they were describing a Lady troubled with Vapours or the Cholick, to be only removed by a Course of Steel, or swallowing a Bullet. By the narrowness of their Thoughts, one would imagine they conceived the World to be no wider than Exchange-Alley. It is probable They may have such a sickly Dame among them; and it is well if she hath no worse Diseases, considering what Hands she passes through. But, the National Credit is of another Complexion; of sound Health, and an even Temper; her Life and Existence being a Quintessence drawn from the Vitals of the whole Kingdom. And we find these Money-Politicians, after all their Noise, to be of the same Opinion, by the Court they paid her, when she lately appeared to them in the Form of a Lottery.

As to that mighty Error in Politics they charge upon the QUEEN, for changing her Ministry in the Height of a War, I suppose it is only looked upon as an Error under a Whiggish Administration; otherwise the late King had much to answer for, who did it pretty frequently. And it is well known, that the late Ministry, of Famous Memory, was brought in during the present War; only with this Circumstance, that two or three of the Chief did first change their own Principles, and then took in suitable Companions.

BUT however, I see no Reason why the Tories should not value their Wisdom by Events, as well as the Whigs. Nothing was ever thought a more precipitate rash Counsel, than that of altering the Coin at the Juncture it was done; yet the Prudence of the Undertaking was sufficiently justified by the Success. Perhaps it will be said, that the Attempt was necessary, because the whole Species of Money was so grievously Clipped and Counterfeit. And, is not her Majesty's Authority as Sacred as her Coin? And hath not that been most scandalously Clipped and Mangled; and often Counterfeited too?

It is another grievous Complaint of the Whigs, that their late Friends, and the whole Party, are treated with Abundance of Severity in Print; and in particular by the Examiner. They think it hard, that when they are wholly deprived of Power, hated by the People, and out of all Hope of re-establishing themselves; their Infirmities should be so often displayed, in order to render them yet more odious to Mankind. This is what they employ their Writers to set forth in their Papers of the Week; and it is Humoursome enough to observe one Page taken up in railing at the Examiner for his Invectives against a discarded Ministry; and the other Side filled with the falsest and vilest Abuses, against those who are now in the highest Power and Credit with their Sovereign; and whose least Breath would scatter them into Silence and Obscurity. However, although I have indeed often wondered to see so much Licentiousness taken and connived at, and am sure it would not be suffered in any other Country of Christendom; yet, I never once invoked the Assistance of the Goal or the Pillory, which upon the least Provocation, was the usual Style during their Tyranny. There hath not passed a Week these twenty Years without some malicious Paper scattered in every Coffee-House by the Emissaries of that Party, whether it were down or up. I believe, they will not pretend to object the same Thing to us. Nor do I remember any constant Weekly Paper, with Reflections on the late Ministry or Junta. They have many weak, defenceless Parts; they have not been used to a regular Attack, and therefore it is, that they are so ill able to endure one, when it comes to be their Turn. So that they complain more of a few Months Truths from us, than we did of all their Lies, and for twice as many Years.

I CANNOT forbear observing upon this Occasion, that those worthy Authors I am speaking of, seem to me not fairly to represent the Sentiments of their Party; who, in disputing with us, do generally give up several of the late Ministry; and freely own many of their Failings. They confess the monstrous Debt upon the Navy, to have been caused by most scandalous Mismanagement: They allow the Insolence of some, and the Avarice of others, to have been insupportable: But these Gentlemen are most liberal in their Praises to those Persons, and upon those very Articles, where their wisest Friends give up the Point. They gravely tell us, that such a one was the most faithful Servant ever any Prince had; another the most dutiful, a third the most generous, and a fourth of the greatest Integrity. So that I look upon these Champions, rather as retained by a Cabal than a Party; which I desire the reasonable Men among them would please to consider.

---

No. 38. Thursday, April 26, 1711.

---

Indignum est in ea civitate, qua legibus continetur, discedi a legibus.

IHAVE been often considering how it comes to pass, that the Dexterity of Mankind in Evil, should always outgrow, not only the Prudence and Caution of private Persons, but the continual Expedients of the wisest Laws contrived to prevent it. I cannot imagine a Knav to possess a greater Share of natural Wit or Genius, than an honest Man. I have known very notable Sharpers at Play, who upon all other Occasions, were as great Dunces, as Human Shape can well allow; and, I believe, the same might be observed among the other Knots of Thieves and Pick-Pockets about this Town. The Proposition however is certainly true, and to be confirmed by an hundred Instances. A Scrivener, an Attorney, a Stock-Jobber, and many other Retailers of Fraud, shall not only be able to over-reach others, much wiser than themselves; but find out new Inventions, to elude the Force of any Law made against them. I suppose the Reason of this may be, that as the Aggressor is said to have generally the Advantage of the Defender; so, the Makers of the Law, which is to defend our Rights, have usually not so much Industry or Vigour, as those whose Interest leads them to attack it. Besides, it rarely happens that Men are rewarded by the Publick for their Justice and Virtue; neither do those who act upon such Principles, expect any Recompence until the next World: Whereas Fraud, where it succeeds, gives present Pay; and this is allowed the greatest Spur imaginable both to Labour and Invention. When a Law is made to stop some growing Evil, the Wits of those, whose Interest it is to break it with Secrecy or Impunity, are immediately at Work; and even among those who pretend to fairer Characters, many would gladly find Means to avoid, what they would not be thought to violate. They desire to reap the Advantage, if possible, without the Shame, or, at least, without the Danger. This Art is what I take that dextrous Race of Men, sprung up soon after the Revolution, to have studied with great Application ever since; and to have arrived at great Perfection in it. According to the Doctrine of some Romish Casuists, they have found out Quam prope ad peccatum sine peccato possint accedere. They can tell how to go within an Inch of an Impeachment, and yet come back untouched. They know what Degree of Corruption will just forfeit an Employment, and whether the Bribe you receive be sufficient to set you tight, and put something in your Pocket besides. How much, to a Penny, you may safely cheat the QUEEN, whether forty, fifty, or sixty per Cent. according to the Station you are in, and the Dispositions of the Persons in Office, below and above you. They have computed the Price you may securely take or give for a Place, or what Part of the Salary you ought to reserve. They can discreetly distribute five hundred Pounds in a small Borough, without any Danger from the Statutes, against bribing Elections. They can manage a Bargain for an Office, by a third, fourth, or fifth Hand; so that you shall not know whom to accuse; they can win a thousand Guineas at Play, in spight of the Dice, and send away the Loser satisfied: They can pass the most exorbitant Accounts, overpay the Creditor with half his Demands, and sink the rest.

IT would be endless to relate, or rather indeed impossible to discover, the several Arts which curious Men have found out to enrich themselves, by defrauding the Publick, in defiance of the Law. The Military Men, both by Sea and Land, have equally cultivated this most useful Science: Neither hath it been altogether neglected by the other Sex; of which, on the contrary, I could produce an Instance, that would make ours Blush to be so far out-done.

BESIDES, to confess the Truth, our Laws themselves are extremely defective in many Articles, which I take to be one ill Effect of our best Possession, Liberty. Some Years ago, the Ambassador of a great Prince was arrested, and Outrages committed on his Person in our Streets, without any Possibility of Redress from Westminster-Hall, or the Prerogative of the Sovereign; and the Legislature was forced to provide a Remedy against the like Evil in Times to come. A Commissioner of the Stamped Paper was lately discovered to have notoriously cheated the Publick of great Sums for many Years, by counterfeiting the Stamps, which the Law had made Capital: But the Aggravation of his Crime, proved to be the Cause that saved his Life; and that additional heightning Circumstance of betraying his Trust, was found to be a legal Defence. I am assured, that the notorious Cheat of the Brewers at Portsmouth, detected about two months ago in Parliament, cannot by any Law now in Force be punished in a Degree, equal to the Guilt and Infamy of it. Nay, what is almost incredible, had Guisard survived his detestable Attempt upon Mr. Harley's Person, all the inflaming Circumstances of the Fact, would not have sufficed, in the Opinion of many Lawyers, to have punished him with Death; and the Publick must have lain under this Dilemma, either to condemn him by a Law, ex post Facto (which would have been of dangerous Consequence, and form an ignominious Precedent) or undergo the Mortification to see the greatest Villain upon Earth escape unpunished, to the infinite Triumph and Delight of Popery and Faction. But even this is not to be wondred at, when we consider, that of all the Insolences offered to the QUEEN since the Act of Indemnity, (at least, that ever came to my Ears) I can hardly instance above two or three, which, by the Letter of the Law could amount to High Treason.

FROM these Defects in our Laws, and the Want of some discretionary Power safely lodged, to exert upon Emergencies; as well as from the great Acquirements of able Men, to elude the Penalties of those Laws they break; it is no wonder that the Injuries done to the Publick are so seldom redressed. But besides, no Individual suffers, by any Wrong he doth to the Commonwealth, in Proportion to the Advantage he gains by doing it. There are seven or eight Millions who contribute to the Loss, while the whole Gain is sunk among a few. The Damage suffered by the Publick, is not so immediately or heavily felt by particular Persons; and the Zeal of Prosecution is apt to drop and be lost among Numbers.

BUT, imagine a Set of Politicians for many Years at the Head of Affairs, the Game visibly their own, and by Consequence acting with great Security; may not these be sometimes tempted to forget their Caution, by length of Time, by excess of Avarice and Ambition, by the Insolence or Violence of their Nature, or perhaps by a meer Contempt for their Adversaries? May not such Motives as these put them often upon Actions directly against the Law, such as no Evasions can be found for, and which will lay them fully open to the Vengeance of a prevailing Interest, whenever they are out of Power? It is answered in the Affirmative. And here we cannot refuse the late Ministry their due Praises; who foreseeing a Storm, provided for their own Safety by two admirable Expedients, by which, with great Prudence, they have escaped the Punishments due to pernicious

---

Councils and corrupt Management. The first, was to procure, under Pretences hardly specious, a general Act of Indemnity, which cuts off all Impeachments. The second, was yet more refined: Suppose, for Instance, a Counsel is to be pursued, which is necessary to carry on the dangerous Designs of a prevailing Party, to preserve them in Power, to gratify the unmeasurable Appetites of a few Leaders, Civil and Military, although by hazarding the Ruin of the whole Nation: This Counsel, desperate in it self, unprecedented in the Nature of it, they procure a Majority to form into an Address, which makes it look like the Sense of the Nation. Under that Shelter they carry on the Work, and lie secure against After-Reckonings.

I MUST be so free to tell my Meaning in this; that among other Things, I understand it of the Address made to the QUEEN about three Years ago, to desire that her Majesty would not consent to a Peace, without the entire Restitution of Spain. A Proceeding, which to People abroad, must look like the highest Strain of Temerity, Folly, and Gasconade. But we at home, who allow the Promoters of that Advice to be no Fools, can easily comprehend the Depth and Mystery of it. They were assured by this Means, to pin down the War upon us; consequently to increase their own Power and Wealth, and multiply Difficulties on the QUEEN and Kingdom, until they had fixed their Party too firmly to be shaken, whenever they should find themselves disposed to reverse their Address, and give us Leave to wish for a Peace.

IF any Man entertain a more favourable Opinion of this monstrous Step in Politicks, I would ask him what we must do, in Case we find it impossible to recover Spain? Those among the Whigs who believe a GOD, will confess, that the Events of War lie in his Hands; and the rest of them, who acknowledge no such Power, will allow, that Fortune hath too great a Share in the good or ill Success of Military Actions, to let a wise Man reason upon them, as if they were entirely in his Power. If Providence shall think fit to refuse Success to our Arms; with how ill a Grace, with what Shame and Confusion shall we be obliged to recant that precipitate Address, unless the World will be so charitable to consider, that Parliaments among us, differ as much as Princes; and, that by the fatal Conjunction of many unhappy Circumstances, it is very possible for our Island to be represented some Times by those who have the least Pretensions? So little Truth or Justice there is in what some pretend to advance, that the Actions of former Senates, ought always to be treated with Respect by the latter; that those Assemblies are all equally venerable, and no one to be preferred before another: By which Argument, the Parliament that began the Rebellion against King Charles the First, voted his Tryal, and appointed his Murderers, ought to be remembered with Respect.

BUT to return from this Digression; it is very plain, that considering the Defectiveness of our Laws, the variety of Cases, the Weakness of the Prerogative, the Power or the Cunning of ill-designing Men, it is possible, that many great Abuses may be visibly committed, which cannot be legally punished: Especially if we add to this, that some Enquiries might probably involve those, whom upon other Accounts, it is not thought convenient to disturb. Therefore, it is very false Reasoning, especially in the Management of Public Affairs, to argue that Men are Innocent, because the Law hath not pronounced them Guilty.

I AM apt to think, it was to supply such Defects as these, that Satyr was first introduced into the World; whereby those whom neither Religion, nor natural Virtue, nor fear of Punishment, were able to keep within the Bounds of their Duty, might be with-held by the Shame of having their Crimes exposed to open View in the strongest Colours, and themselves rendered odious to Mankind. Perhaps all this may be little regarded by such hardened and abandoned Natures as I have to deal with; but, next to taming or binding a Savage-Animal, the best Service you can do the Neighbourhood, is to give them warning, either to arm themselves, or not come in its Way.

COULD I have hoped for any Signs of Remorse from the Leaders of that Faction, I should very gladly have changed my Style, and forgot or passed by their Million of Enormities. But they are every Day more fond of discovering their impotent Zeal and Malice: Witness their Conduct in the City about a Fortnight ago, which had no other End imaginable, beside that of perplexing our Affairs, and endeavouring to make Things desperate, that themselves may be thought necessary. While they continue in this frantick Mood, I shall not forbear to treat them as they deserve; that is to say, as the inveterate, irreconcilable Enemies to our Country and its Constitution.

---

---

No. 39. Thursday, May 3, 1711.

---

Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?

HERE have been certain Topicks of Reproach, liberally bestowed for some Years past, by the Whigs and Tories, upon each other. We charge the former with a Design of destroying the Established Church, and introducing Fanaticism and Free-thinking in its stead. We accuse them as Enemies to Monarchy; as endeavouring to undermine the present Form of Government, and to build a Commonwealth, or some new Scheme of their own, upon its Ruins. On the other Side, their Clamours against us, may be summed up in those three formidable Words, Papery, Arbitrary Power, and the Pretender. Our Accusations against them we endeavour to make good by certain Overt-Acts; such as their perpetually abusing the whole Body of the Clergy; their declared Contempt for the very Order of Priesthood; their Aversion against Episcopacy; the publick Encouragement and Patronage they gave to Tindall, Toland, and other Atheistical Writers; their appearing as professed Advocates, retained by the Dissenters; excusing their Separation, and laying the Guilt of it to the Obsturacy of the Church; their frequent Endeavours to repeal the Test, and their setting up the Indulgence to scrupulous Consciences, as a Point of greater Importance than the established Worship. The Regard they bear to our Monarchy, hath appeared by their open ridiculing the Martyrdom of King Charles the First, in their Calves-head Clubs, their common Discourses and their Pamphlets: Their denying the unnatural War raised against that Prince, to have been a Rebellion; their justifying his Murder in the allowed Papers of the Week; their Industry in publishing and spreading Seditious and Republican Tracts; such as Ludlow's Memoirs, Sidney of Government, and many others; their endless lopping of the Prerogative, and mincing into nothing her Majesty's Titles to the Crown.

WHAT Proofs they bring for our endeavouring to introduce Papery, Arbitrary Power, and the Pretender, I cannot readily tell, and would be glad to hear; however, those important Words having, by dextrous Management, been found of mighty Service to their Cause, although applied with little Colour, either of Reason or Justice; I have been considering whether they may not be adapted to more proper Objects.

As to Papery, which is the first of these; to deal plainly, I can hardly think there is any Sett of Men among us, except the Professors of it, who have any direct Intention to introduce it here: But the Question is, whether the Principles and Practices of us, or the Whigs, be most likely to make Way for it? It is allowed on all Hands, that among the Methods concerted at Rome, for bringing over England into the Bosom of the Catholick Church; one of the Chief was, to send Jesuits and other Emisaries, in Lay-Habits; who personating Tradesmen and Mechanicks, should mix with the People, and under the Pretence of a further and purer Reformation, endeavour to divide us into as many Sects as possible; which would either put us under the Necessity of returning to our old Errors, to 'preserve Peace' at home; or by our Divisions make Way for some powerful Neighbour, with the Assistance of the Pope's Permission, and a consecrated Banner, to convert and enslave us at once. If this hath been reckoned good Politicks (and it was the best the Jesuit-Schools could invent) I appeal to any Man, whether the Whigs, for many Years past, have not been employed in the very same Work? They professed on all Occasions, that they knew no Reason why any one System of Speculative Opinions (as they termed the Doctrines of the Church) should be established by Law more than another; or why Employments should be confined to the Religion of the Magistrate, and that called the Church Established. The grand Maxim they laid down, was, That no Man, for the Sake of a few Notions and Ceremonies, under the Names of Doctrine and Discipline, should be denied the Liberty of serving his Country: As if Places would go a begging, unless Brownists, Familists, Sweet-Singers, Quakers, Anabaptists and Muggletonians, would take them off our Hands.

I HAVE been sometimes imagining this Scherme brought to Perfection, and how diverting it would look to see half a Dozen Sweet-Singers on the Bench in their Ermins, and two or three Quakers with their white Staves at Court. I can only say, this Project is the very Counter-part of the late King James's Design, which he took up as the best Method for introducing his own Religion, under the Pretext of an universal Liberty of Conscience; and that no Difference in Religion should make any in his Favour. Accordingly, to save Appearances, he dealt some Employments among Dissenters of most Denominations; and what he did was, no doubt, in pursuance of the best Advice he could get at Home or Abroad; but the Church thought it the most dangerous Step he could take for her Destruction. It is true, King James admitted Papists among the rest, which the Whigs would not; but this is sufficiently made up by a material Circumstance, wherein they seem to have much out-done that Prince, and to have carried their Liberty of Conscience to a higher Point; having granted it to all the Classes of Free-thinkers, which the nice Conscience of a Popish Prince would not give him leave to do; and was therein mightily overseen; because it is agreed by the Learned, that there is but a very narrow Step from Atheism, to the other Extream, Superstition. So that upon the whole, whether the Whigs had any real Design of bringing in Popery or no, it is very plain, that they took the most effectual Step towards it; and if the Jesuits had been their immediate Directors, they could not have taught them better, nor have found apter Scholars.

THEIR second Accusation is, That we encourage and maintain Arbitrary Power in Princes; and promote enslaving Doctrines among the People. This they go about to prove by Instances, producing the particular Opinions of certain Divines in King Charles the Second's Reign; a Decree of Oxford-University, and some few Writers since the Revolution. What they mean is the Principle of Passive-Obedience and Non-Resistance, which those who affirm, did, I believe, never intend should include

Arbitrary Power. However, although I am sensible that it is not reckoned prudent in a Dispute, to make any Concessions without the last Necessity; yet I do agree, that, in my own private Opinion, some Writers did carry that Tenet of Passive-Obedience to a Height, which seemed hardly consistent with the Liberties of a Country, whose Laws can be neither enacted nor repealed, without the Consent of the whole People, I mean not those who affirm it due in general, as it certainly is to the Legislature; but such as fix it entirely in the Prince's Person. This last hath, I believe, been done by a very few; but when the Whigs quote Authors to prove it upon us, they bring in all who mention it as a Duty in general, without applying it to Princes, abstracted from their Senate.

By thus freely declaring my own Sentiments of Passive-Obedience, it will at last appear, that I do not write for a Party: Neither do I, upon any Occasion, pretend to speak their Sentiments, but my own. The Majority of the two Houses, and the present Ministry (if those be a Party) seem to me, in all their Proceedings, to pursue the real Interest of Church and State: And if I shall happen to differ from particular Persons among them in a single Notion about Government, I suppose they will not, upon that Account, explode me and my Paper. However, as an Answer once for all, to the tedious Scurrilities of those idle People, who affirm, I am hired and directed what to write; I must here inform them, that their Censure is an Effect of their Principles: The present Ministry are under no Necessity of employing prostitute Pens; they have no dark Designs to promote, by advancing Heterodox Opinions.

BUT, (to return) suppose two or three private Divines, under King Charles the Second, did a little over-strain the Doctrine of Passive-Obedience to Princes; some Allowance might be given to the Memory of that unnatural Rebellion against his Father, and the dismal Consequences of Resistance. It is plain, by the Proceedings of the Churchmen before and at the Revolution, that this Doctrine was never designed to introduce arbitrary Power.

I LOOK upon the Whigs and Dissenters to be exactly of the same political Faith; let us, therefore, see what Share each of them had in advancing Arbitrary Power. It is manifest, that the Fanatics made Cromwell the most absolute Power in Christendom: The Rump abolished the House of Lords; the Army abolished the Rump; and by this Army of Saints he governed. The Dissenters took Liberty of Conscience and Employments from the late King James, as an Acknowledgment of his dispensing Power; which makes the King of England as absolute as the Turk. The Whigs, under the late King, perpetually declared for keeping up a standing Army in Times of Peace; which hath in all Ages been the first and great Step to the Ruin of Liberty. They were, besides, discovering every Day their Inclinations to destroy the Rights of the Church; and declared their Opinion in all Companies, against Bishops sitting in the House of Peers; which was exactly copying after their Predecessors of Forty One. I need not say, their real Intentions were to make the King absolute; but whatever be the Designs of innovating Men, they usually end in a Tyranny: As we may see by an hundred Examples in Greece, and in the later Commonwealths of Italy mentioned by Machiavel.

In the third Place, the Whigs accuse us of a Design to bring in the Pretender; and to give it a greater Air of Probability, they suppose the QUEEN to be a Party in this Design; which, however, is no very extraordinary Supposition in those who have advanced such singular Paradoxes concerning Greg and Giscard. Upon this Article their Charge is general, without ever offering to produce an Instance. But I verily think and believe, it will appear no Paradox, that if ever he be brought in, the Whigs are his Men. For, first, it is an undoubted Truth, that a Year or two after the Revolution, several Leaders of that Party had their Pardons sent them by the late King James; and had entred upon Measures to restore him, on Account of some Disobligations they received from King William. Besides, I would ask, whether those who are under the greatest Ties of Gratitude to King James, are not at this Day become the most zealous Whigs? And of what Party those are now, who kept a long Correspondence with St. Germain?

IT is likewise very observable of late, that the Whigs upon all Occasions, profess their Belief of the Pretender's being no Impostor, but a real Prince, born of the late QUEEN's Body: Which, whether it be true or false, is very unseasonably advanced, considering the Weight such an Opinion must have with the Vulgar, if they once thoroughly believe it. Neither is it at all improbable, that the Pretender himself puts his chief Hopes in the Friendship he expects from the Dissenters and Whigs; by his Choice to invade the Kingdom when the latter were most in Credit: And he had Reason to count upon the former, from the gracious Treatment they received from his supposed Father, and their joyful Acceptance of it. But further; what could be more consistent with the Whiggish Notion of a Revolution-Principle, than to bring in the Pretender? A Revolution-Principle, as their Writings and Discourses have taught us to define it, is a Principle perpetually disposing Men to Revolutions: this is suitable to the famous Saying of a great Whig, That the more Revolutions the better; which how odd a Maxim soever in Appearance, I take to be the true Characteristick of the Party.

A DOG loves to turn round often; yet after certain Revolutions, he lies down to Rest: But Heads, under the Dominion of the Moon, are for perpetual Changes, and perpetual Revolutions: Besides, the Whigs owe all their Wealth to Wars and Revolutions; like the Girl at Bartholomew-Fair, who gets a Penny by turning round a hundred Times, with Swords in her Hands.

To conclude, the Whigs, have a natural Faculty of bringing in Pretenders, and will therefore probably endeavour to bring in the great One at last: How many Pretenders to Wit, Honour, Nobility, Politicks, have they brought in these last twenty Years? In short, they have been sometimes able to procure a Majority of Pretenders in Parliament; and wanted nothing to render the Work compleat, except a Pretender at their Head.

---

No. 40. Thursday, May 10, 1711.

---

Dos est magna parentium virtus.

I TOOK up a Paper some Days ago in a Coffee-House; and if the Correctness of the Style, and a superior Spirit in it, had not immediately undeceived me, I should have been apt to imagine, I had been reading an Examiner. In this Paper there were several important Propositions advanced. For Instance, That Providence raised up Mr. Harley to be an Instrument of great Good, in a very critical Juncture, when it was much wanted. That, his very Enemies acknowledge his eminent Abilities, and distinguishing Merit, by their unwearyed and restless Endeavours against his Person and Reputation: That, they have had an inveterate Malice against both: That, he hath been wonderfully preserved from SOME unparalleled Attempts; with more to the same Purpose. I immediately computed by Rules of Arithmetick, that in the last cited Words there was something more intended than the Attempt of Guisard, which I think can properly pass but for One of the SOME. And, although I dare not pretend to guess the Author's Meaning, yet the Expression allows such a Latitude, that I would venture to hold a Wager, most Readers, both Whig and Tory, have agreed with me, that this Plural Number must in all Probability, among other Facts, take in the Business of Greg.

SEE now the Difference of Styles. Had I been to have told my Thoughts on this Occasion; instead, of saying how Mr. Harley was treated by some Persons, and preserved from some unparalleled Attempts, I should, with intolerable Bluntness and ill Manners, have told a formal Story, of a Committee sent to a condemned Criminal in Newgate, to bribe him with a Pardon, on Condition he would swear High Treason against his Master; who discovered his Correspondence, and secured his Person, when a certain grave Politician had given him Warning to make his Escape: And by this Means I should have drawn a whole swarm of Hedge-Writers to exhaust their Catalogue of Scurrilities against me as a Lyar, and a Slanderer. But with Submission to the Author of that forementioned Paper, I think he hath carried that Expression to the utmost it will bear: For, after all this Noise, I know of but two Attempts against Mr. Harley, that can really be called unparalleled; which are those aforesaid of Greg and Guisard: For, as to the rest, I will engage to parallel them from the Story of Cataline, and others I could produce.

HOWEVER, I cannot but observe with infinite Pleasure, that a great Part of what I have charged upon the late prevailing Faction, and for affirming which, I have been adorned with so many decent Epithets, hath been sufficiently confirmed at sev-ral Times, by the Resolutions of one or the other House of Parliament. I may therefore now say, I hope, with good Authority, that there have been some unparalleled Attempts against Mr Harley. That, the late Ministry were justly to blame in some Management, which occasioned the unfortunate Battle of Almanza, and the Disappointment at Toulon. That, the Publick hath been grievously wronged by most notorious Frauds, during the Whig Administration. That, those who advised the bringing in the Palatines, were Enemies to the Kingdom. That, the late Managers of the Revenue have not duly passed their Accounts, for a great Part of thirty five Millions; and ought not to be trusted in such Employments any more. Perhaps in a little Time I may venture to affirm some other Paradoxes of this kind and produce the same Vouchers. And perhaps also, if it had no been so busy a Period, instead of one Examiner, the late Minister might have had above four hundred, each of whose little Finger would be heavier than my Loins. It makes me think of Neptune's Threat to the Winds; Quos ego—sed motos præstat compone fructus. Thus, when the Sons of Eolus had almost sunk the Ship with the Tempests they raised, it was necessary to smooth the Ocean, and secure the Vessel, instead of pursuing the Offenders.

BUT, I observe the general Expectation at present, instead of dwelling any longer upon Conjectures who is to be punished for past Miscarriages, seems bent upon the Rewards intended to those who have been so highly instrumental in rescuing our Constitution from its late Dangers. It is the Observation of Tacitus, in the Life of Agricola, that his eminent Services had raised a general Opinion of his being designed, by the Emperor for Prator of Britain. Nullis in hoc suis sermonibus, sed quia par videbatur: And then he adds, Non semper errat Fama, aliquando et eligit. The Judgment of a wise Prince, and the general Disposition of the People, do often point at the same Person; and sometimes the popular Wishes do even foretel the Reward intended for some superior Merit. Thus, among several deserving Persons, there are Two, whom the publick Vouge hath in a peculiar Manner singled out, as designed very soon to receive the choicest Marks of the Royal Favour. One of them to be placed in very high Station, and Both to increase the Number of ou-

Nobility. This, I say, is the general Conjecture; for I pretend to none, nor will be chargeable if it be not fulfilled; since it is enough for their Honour, that the Nation thinks them worthy of the greatest Rewards.

UPON this Occasion I cannot but take Notice, That of all the Heresies in Politicks, profusely scattered by the Partisans of the late Administration, none ever displeased me more, or seemed to have more dangerous Consequences to Monarchy, than that pernicious Talent so much affected, of discovering a Contempt for Birth, Family, and ancient Nobility. All the Threadbare Topicks of Poets and Orators were displayed to discover to us, that Merit and Virtue were the only Nobility; and that the Advantages of Blood could not make a Knave or a Fool either Honest or Wise. Most popular Commotions we read of in Histories of Greece and Rome, took their Rise from unjust Quarrels to the Nobles; and in the latter, the Plebeians Encroachments on the Patricians, were the first Cause of their Ruin.

SUPPOSE there be nothing but Opinion in the Difference of Blood; every Body knows, that Authority is very much founded on Opinion. But surely, that Difference is not wholly imaginary. The Advantages of a liberal Education, of chusing the best Companions to converse with; not being under the Necessity of practicing little mean Tricks by a scanty Allowance; the enlarging of Thought, and acquiring the Knowledge of Men and Things by Travel; the Example of Ancestors inciting to great and good Actions. These are usually some of the Opportunities that fall in the Way of those who are born, of what we call the better Families; and, allowing Genius to be equal in them and the Vulgar, the Odds are clearly on their Side. Nay, we may observe in some, who by the Appearance of Merit, or Favour of Fortune, have risen to great Stations, from an obscure Birth, that they have still retained some sordid Vices of their Parentage or Education, either insatiable Avarice, or ignominious Falsehood and Corruption.

To say the Truth, the great Neglect of Education in several noble Families, whose Sons are suffered to pass the most improveable Seasons of their Youth in Vice and Idleness, have too much lessened their Reputation: But, even this Misfortune we owe, among all the rest, to that Whiggish Practice of reviling the Universities, under the Pretence of their instilling Pedantry, narrow Principles, and High-Church Doctrines.

I WOULD not be thought to undervalue Merit and Virtue, where ever they are to be found; but will allow them capable of the highest Dignities in a State, when they are in a very great Degree of Eminence. A Pearl holds its Value although it be found in a Dunghill; but however, that is not the most probable Place to search for it. Nay, I will go farther, and admit, that a Man of Quality without Merit, is just so much the worse for his Quality; which at once sets his Vices in a more publick View, and reproacheth him for them. But on the other Side, I doubt, those who are always undervaluing the Advantages of Birth, and celebrating personal Merit, have principally an Eye to their own, which they are fully satisfied with, and which no Body will dispute with them about; whereas they cannot, without Impudence and Folly, pretend to be nobly born; because this is a Secret too easily discovered: For, no Mens Parentage is so nicely enquired into, as that of assuming Upstarts; especially when they affect to make it better than it is, as they often do; or behave themselves with Insolence.

BUT whatever may be the Opinion of others upon this Subject, whose Philosophical Scorn for Blood and Families reacheth even to those that are Royal, or perhaps took its Rise from a Whiggish Contempt of the latter; I am pleased to find two such Instances of extraordinary Merit, as I have mentioned, joined with ancient and honourable Birth; which, whether it be of real or imaginary Value, hath been held in Veneration by all wise, polite States, both Ancient and Modern. And, as much a Popery as Men pretend to think it, nothing is more observable in those who rise to great Place or Wealth, from mean Originals, than their mighty Solitude to convince the World that they are not so low as is commonly believed. They are glad to find it made out by some strained Genealogy, that they have a remote Alliance with better Families. Cromwell himself was pleased with the Impudence of a Flatterer, who undertook to prove him descended from a Branch of the Royal Stem. I know a Citizen who adds or alters a Letter in his Name with every Plumb he acquires: He now wants only the Change of a * Vowel, to be allied to a Sovereign Prince in Italy; and that perhaps he may contrive to be done, by a Mistake of the Graver upon his Tombstone.

WHEN I am upon this Subject of Nobility, I am sorry for the Occasion given me, to mention the Loss of a Person who was so great an Ornament to it, as the late † Lord President; who began early to distinguish himself in the Publick Service; and passed through the highest Employments of State, in the most difficult Times, with great Abilities and untainted Honour. As he was of a good old Age, his Principles of Religion and Loyalty had received no Mixture from late Infusions, but were instilled into him by his illustrious Father, and other noble Spirits, who had exposed their Lives and Fortunes for the Royal Martyr.

—Pulcherrima proles, Magnanimi Heroes nati melioribus annis.

HIS first great Action was, like Scipio, to defend his Father, when oppressed by Numbers; and his Filial Piety was not only rewarded with long Life, but with a Son, who, upon the like Occasion, would have shewn the same Resolution. No Man ever preserved his Dignity better when he was out of Power, nor shewed more Affability while he was in. To conclude: His Character (which I do not here pretend to draw) is such, as his nearest Friends may safely trust to the most impartial Pen; nor wants the least of that Allowance which, they say, is required for those who are Dead.

---

No. 41. Thursday, May 17, 1711.

---

—*Quens cur distingere coner,
Tutus ab infestis latronibus?*

I NEVER let slip an Opportunity of endeavouring to convince the World, that I am not Partial; and to confound the idle Reproach of my being hired or directed what to write in Defence of the present Ministry, or for detecting the Practices of the former. When I first undertook this Paper, I firmly resolved, that if ever I observed any gross Neglect, Abuse or Corruption in the publick Management, which might give any just Offence to reasonable People; I would take Notice of it with that innocent Boldness which becometh an honest Man, and a true Lover of his Country; at the same Time preserving the Respect due to Persons so highly entrusted by so wise and excellent a Q U E E N . I know not how such a Liberty might have been resented; but I thank G O D there hath been no Occasion given me to exercise it; for, I can safely affirm, that I have with the utmost Rigour examined all the Actions of the present Ministry, as far as they fall under general Cognizance, without being able to accuse them of one ill or mistaken Step. Observing indeed some Time ago, that Seeds of Dissent had been plentifully scattered from a certain Corner; and fearing they began to rise and spread, I immediately writ a Paper on the Subject; which I treated with that Warmth, I thought it required: But the Prudence of those at the Helm soon prevented this growing Evil; and at present it seems likely to have no Consequences.

---

* Sir H. FURNESE.

† Earl of ROCHESTER.

I HAVE had indeed for some Time a small Occasion of Quarrelling, which I thought too inconsiderable for a formal Subject of Complaint, although I have hinted at it more than once. But, it is grown at present to as great Height, as a Matter of that Nature can possibly bear; and therefore I conceive it high Time that an effectual Stop should be put to it. I have been amazed at the flaming Licentiousness of several Weekly Papers, which for some Months past, have been chiefly employed in barefaced Scurrilities against those who are in the greatest Trust and Favour with the QUEEN , with the first and last Letters of their Names frequently printed; or some Periphrasis describing their Station, or other Innuendo's, contrived too plain to be mistaken. The Consequence of which is, (and it is natural it should be so) that their long Impunity hath rendered them still more audacious.

At this Time I particularly intend a Paper called the Medley; whose indefatigable, incessant Railings against me, I never thought convenient to take Notice of, because it would have diverted my Design, which I intended to be of Publick Use.

Besides, I never yet observed that Writer, or those Writers, (for it is every Way a Medley) to argue against any one material Point or Fact that I had advanced; or make one fair Quotation. And after all, I knew very well how soon the World grows weary of Controversy. It is plain to me, that three or four Hands at least have been joined at Times in this worthy Composition; but the Out-lines, as well as the Finishing, seem to have been always the Work of the same Pen, as it is visible from half a score Beauties of Style inseperable from it. But who these Medlers are, or where the judicious Leaders have picked them up, I shall never go about to conjecture. Factious Rancour, false Wit, abandoned Scurrility, impudent Falshood, and servile Pedantry, having so many Fathers, and so few to own them, that Curiosity her self would not be at the Pains to guess. It is the first Time I ever did my self the Honour to mention that admirable Paper: Nor could I imagine any Occasion likely to happen, that would make it necessary for me to engage with such an Adversary. This Paper is Weekly published, and as appears by the Number, hath been so for several Months; and is next to the Observator, allowed to be the best Production of that Party. Last Week my Printer brought me that of May 7, Number 32, where there are two Paragraphs relating to the Speaker of the House of Commons, and to Mr. Harley; which, as little as I am inclined to engage with such an Antagonist, I cannot let pass, without failing in my Duty to the Publick: And if those in Power will suffer such infamous Insinuations to pass with Impunity, they act without Precedent from any Age or Country of the World.

I DESIRE to open this Matter, and leave the Whigs themselves to determine upon it. The House of Commons resolved, Nemine Contradicente, that the Speaker should congratulate Mr. Harley's Escape and Recovery in the Name of the House, upon his first Attendance on their Service. This is accordingly done; and the Speech, together with the Chancellor of the Exchequer's, are printed by Order of the House. The Author of the Medley takes this Speech to Task the very next Week after it is published; telling us, in the aforesaid Paper, That the Speaker's commendng Mr. Harley, for being an Instrument of great Good to the Nation, was ill-chosen Flattery; because Mr. Harley had brought the Nation under great Difficulties, to say no more: He says, that when the Speaker tells Mr. Harley, that Providence hath wonderfully preserved him from some unparalleled Attempts, (for that the Medley alludes to) he only revives a false and groundless Calumny upon other Men; which is an Instance of impotent, but inveterate Malice, that makes him [the Speaker] still appear more vile and contemptible. This is an Extract from his first Paragraph. In the next this Writer says, That the Speaker's praying to God for the Continuance of Mr. Harley's Life, as an invaluable Blessing, was a fulsome Piece of Insincerity, which exposeth him to Shame and Derision; because he is known to bear ill Will to Mr. Harley; to have an extream bad Opinion of him, and to think him an Obstructor of those fine Measures he would bring about.

I now appeal to the Whigs themselves, whether a great Minister of State, in high Favour with the QUEEN, and a Speaker of the House of Commons, were ever publickly treated after so extraordinary a Manner, in the most licentious Times? For, this is not a clandestine Libel stolen into the World, but openly Printed and Sold, with the Bookseller's Name and Place of Abode at the Bottom. And the Juncture is admirable, when Mr. Harley is generally believed upon the very Point to be made an Earl, and promoted to the most important Station of the Kingdom: Nay, the very Marks of Esteem he hath so lately received from the whole Representative Body of the People, are called ill-chosen Flattery, and a fulsome Piece of Insincerity, exposing the Donors to Shame and Derision.

DOES this intrepid Writer think he hath sufficiently disguised the Matter, by that stale Artifice of altering the Story, and putting it as a supposed Case? Did any Man who ever saw the Congratulatory Speech, read either of those Paragraphs in the Medley, without interpreting them just as I have done? Will the Author declare upon his great Sincerity, that he never had any such Meaning? Is it enough, that a Jury at Westminster-Hall would, perhaps, not find him guilty of defaming the Speaker and Mr. Harley in that Paper? Which, however, I am much in doubt of too; and must think the Law very defective, if the Reputation of such Persons must lie at the Mercy of such Pens. I do not remember to have seen any Libel, supposed to be writ with Caution and double Meaning, in order to prevent Prosecution, delivered under so thin a Cover, or so unartificially made up as this; whether it were from an Apprehension of his Reader's Dulness, or an Effect of his own. He hath transcribed the very Phrases of the Speaker, and put them in a different Character, for fear they might pass unobserved; and to prevent all Possibility of being mistaken. I shall be pleased to see him have Recourse to the old Evasion, and say, that I who make the Application, am chargeable with the Abuse: Let any Reader of either Party be Judge. But I cannot forbear asserting, as my Opinion, that for a Ministry to endure such open Calumny, without calling the Author to Account, is next to deserving it. And, this is an Omission I venture to charge upon the present Ministry, who are too apt to despise little Things, which however have not always little Consequences.

WHEN this Paper was first undertaken, one Design, among others, was, to examine some of those Writings so frequently published with an evil Tendency, either to Religion or Government; but I was long diverted by other Enquiries, which I thought more immediately necessary; to animadvert upon Mens Actions, rather than their Speculations; to shew the Necessity there was of changing the Ministry, that our Constitution in Church and State might be preserved; to expose some dangerous Principles and Practices under the former Administration; and prove by many Instances, that those who are now at the Helm, are entirely in the true Interest of Prince and People. This I may modestly hope, hath in some Measure been already done, sufficient to answer the End proposed, which was to inform the Ignorant and those at Distance; and to convince such as are not engaged in a Party, from other Motives than that of Conscience. I know not whether I shall have any Appetite to continue this Work much longer; if I do, perhaps some Time may be spent in exposing and overturning the false Reasonings of those who engage their Pens on the other Side; without losing Time in vindicating my self against their Scurrilities, much less in retorting them. Of this Sort there is a certain humble Companion, a * French Maitre de Langues, who every Month publisheth an

* One A. BOYER.

Extract from Votes, News-Papers, Speeches and Proclamations, larded with some insipid Remarks of his own; which he calls, The Political State of Great-Britain: This ingénious Piece he tells us himself, is constantly translated into French, and printed in Holland, where the Dutch, no doubt, conceive most noble Sentiments of us, conveyed through such a Vehicle. It is observable in his Account for April, that the Vanity, so predominant in many of his Nation, hath made him more concerned for the Honour of Guiscard, than the Safety of Mr. Harley: And for fear we should think the worse of his Country upon that Assassin's Account, he tells us, there have been more Murders, Parades and Villainies, committed in England, than any other Part of the World. I cannot imagine how an illiterate Foreigner, who is Neither Master of our Language, or indeed of common Sense; and who is devoted to a Faction, I suppose, for no other Reason, but his having more Whig-Customers than Tories, should take it into his Head to write Politick Tracts of our Affairs. But I presume, he builds upon the Foundation of having been called to an Account for his Insolence in one of his former Monthly Productions; which is a Method that seldom fails of giving some Vogue to the foolishest Composition. If such a Work must be done, I wish some tolerable Hand would undertake it; and that we would not suffer a little whiffling Frenchman to neglect his Trade of teaching his Language to our Children, and presume to instruct Foreigners in our Politicks.

---

---

No. 42. Thursday, May 24, 1711.

---

*Delicta majorum immeritus iues,
Romane; donec templa refeceris,
Ædesq; labentes deorum;* —

SEVERAL Letters have been lately sent me, desiring I would make honourable mention of the pious Design of building fifty Churches, in several Parts of London and Westminster, where they are most wanted; occasioned by an Address of the Convocation to the QUEEN, and recommended by her Majesty to the House of Commons; who immediately promised, they would enable her to accomplish so excellent a Design; and are now preparing a Bill accordingly. I thought, to have deferred any Notice of this important Affair until the End of this Session; at which Time I proposed to deliver a particular Account of the great and useful Things already performed by this present Parliament. But in Compliance to those who give themselves the Trouble of advising me; and partly convinced by the Reasons they offer; I am content to bestow a Paper upon a Subject, that indeed so well deserveth it.

THE Clergy, and whoever else have a true Concern for the Constitution of the Church, cannot but be highly pleased with one Prospect in this new Scene of publick Affairs. They may very well remember the Time, when every Session of Parliament was like a Cloud hanging over their Heads; and, if it happened to pass without bursting into some Storm upon the Church, we thanked GOD, and thought it an happy Escape, until the next Meeting; upon which we resumed our secret Apprehensions, although we were not allowed to believe any Danger. Things are now altered; the Parliament takes the Necessities of the Church into Consideration; receives the Proposals of the Clergy met in Convocation; and amidst all the Exigencies of a long expensive War, and under the Pressure of heavy Debts, finds a Supply for erecting fifty Edifices to the Service of GOD. And, it appears by the Address of the Commons to her Majesty upon this Occasion, (wherein they discovered a true Spirit of Religion) that the applying the Money granted to accomplish so excellent a Design, would, in their Opinion, be the most effectual Way of carrying on the War: That, it would (to use their own Words) be a Means of drawing down Blessings on her Majesty's Undertakings, as it adds to the Number of those Places, where the Prayers of her devout and faithful Subjects, will be daily offered up to God, for the Prosperity of her Government at Home, and the Success of her Arms Abroad.

I AM sometimes hoping, that we are not naturally so bad a People, as we have appeared for some Years past. Faction, in order to support it self, is generally forced to make Use of such abominable Instruments, that as long as it prevails, the Genius of a Nation is over-pressed, and cannot appear to exert it self: But, when that is broke and suppressed; when Things return to the old Course; Mankind will naturally fall to act from Principles of Reason and Religion. The Romans, upon a great Victory, or Escape from publick Danger, frequently built a Temple in Honour of some God, to whose peculiar Favour they imputed their Success or Delivery: And sometimes the General did the like, at his own Expence, to acquit himself of some pious Vow he had made. How little of any Thing resembling this hath been done by us after all our Victories! And perhaps for that Reason, among others, they have turned to so little Account. But what could we expect? We acted all along as if we believed nothing of a GOD or his Providence; and therefore it was consistent to offer up our Edifices only to Those, whom we looked upon as Givers of all Victory, in his stead.

I HAVE computed, that Fifty Churches may be built by a Medium, at Six Thousand Pound for a Church; which is somewhat under the Price of a Subject's Palace: Yet perhaps the Care of above two hundred thousand Souls, with the Benefit of their Prayers for the Prosperity of their QUEEN and Country, may be almost put in the Balance with the domestick Convenience, or even Magnificence of any Subject whatsoever.

SIR William Petty, who under the Name of Captain Graunt, published some Observations upon Bills of Mortality about five Years after the Restoration; tells us, the Parishes in London were even then so unequally divided, that some were two hundred times larger than others. Since that Time, the Encrease of Trade, the Frequency of Parliaments, the Desire of living in the Metropolis, together with that Genius for Building, which began after the Fire, and hath ever since continued; have prodigiously enlarged this Town on all sides, where it was capable of Encrease: And those Tracts of Land built into Streets, have generally continued of the same Parish they belonged to, while they lay in Fields; so that the Care of above thirty thousand Souls hath been sometimes committed to one Minister, whose Church would hardly contain the twentieth part of his Flock: Neither, I think, was any Family in those Parishes obliged to pay above a Groat a Year to their Spiritual Pastor. Some few of those Parishes have been since divided; in others were erected Chapels of Ease, where a Preacher is maintained by general Contribution. Such poor Shifts and Expedients, to the infinite Shame and Scandal of so vast and flourishing a City, have been thought sufficient for the Service of God and Religion; as if they were Circumstances wholly indifferent.

THIS Defect, among other Consequences of it, hath made Schism a Sort of necessary Evil; there being at least three hundred thousand Inhabitants in this Town, whom the Churches would not be able to contain, if the People were ever so well disposed: And in a City not overstocked with Zeal, the only way to preserve any Degree of Religion, is to make all Attendance upon the Duties of it, as easy and cheap as possible: Whereas, on the contrary, in the larger Parishes, the Press is so great, and the Pew-keeper's Tax so exorbitant, that those who love to save Trouble and Money, either stay at home, or retire to the Conventicles. I believe there are few Examples in any Christian Country of so great a Neglect for Religion; and the Dissenting Teachers have made their Advantages largely by it; Sowing Tares among the Wheat while Men slept; being much more expert at procuring Contributions, which is a Trade they are bred up in, than Men of a liberal Education.

AND to say Truth, the Way practised by several Parishes in and about this Town, of maintaining their Clergy by voluntary Subscriptions, is not only an Indignity to the Character, but hath many pernicious Consequences attending it; such a precarious Dependance, subjecting a Clergyman, who hath not more than ordinary Spirit and Resolution, to many Inconveniences, which are obvious to imagine: But this Defect, will no doubt, be remedied by the Wisdom and Piety of the present Parliament; and a Tax laid upon every House in a Parish, for the Support of their Pastor. Neither indeed can it be conceived, why a House, whose Purchase is not reckoned above one third less than Land of the same yearly Rent, should not pay a twentieth Part annually (which is half Tyth) to the Support of the Minister. One thing I could wish; that in fixing the Maintenance to the several Ministers in these new intended Parishes, no determinate Sum of Money may be named, which in all Perpetuities ought by any means to be avoided; but rather a Tax in Proportion to the Rent of each House, although it be but a Twentieth or even a thirtieth part. The contrary of this, I am told, was done in several Parishes of the City after the Fire; where the Incumbent and his Successors were to receive for ever a certain Sum; for Example, one or two hundred Pounds a Year. But the Law-givers did not consider, that what we call at present, one hundred Pounds, will in Process of Time, have not the intrinsick Value of twenty; and twenty Pounds now are hardly equal to forty Shillings, three hundred Years ago. There are a thousand Instances of this all over England, in reserved Rents applied to Hospitals; in old Chieffries; and even among the Clergy themselves, in those Payments which, I think, they call a Modus.

As no Prince had ever better Dispositions than her present Majesty, for the Advancement of true Religion; so, there was never any Age that produced greater Occasions to employ them on. It is an unspeakable Misfortune, that any Designs of so excellent a Queen, should be checked by the Necessities of a long and ruinous War, which the Folly or Corruption of modern Politicians have involved us in, against all the Maxims whereby our Country flourished so many hundred Years: Else her Majesty's Care of Religion would certainly have reached even to her American Plantations. Those noble Countries, stocked by Numbers from hence, whereof too many are in no very great Reputation for Faith or Morals, will be a perpetual Reproach to us, until some better Care be taken for cultivating Christianity among them. If the Governors of those several Colonies were obliged, at certain Times, to transmit an exact Representation of the State of Religion, in their several Districts; and the Legislature here would, in a time of Leisure, take that Affair under their Consideration; it might be perfected with little Difficulty, and be a great Addition to the Glories of her Majesty's Reign.

BUT, to wave further Speculations upon so remote a Scene, while we have Subjects enough to employ them on at home; It is to be hoped, the Clergy will not let slip any proper Opportunity of improving the pious Dispositions of the Q U E N and Kingdom, for the Advantage of the Church; when by the Example of Times past, they consider how rarely such Conjunctures are like to happen. What if some Method were thought on towards repairing of Churches? For which there is like to be too frequent Occasions; those ancient Gothick Structures, throughout this Kingdom, going every Year to decay. That Expedient of repairing or rebuilding them by charitable Collections, seems in my Opinion not very suitable, either to the Dignity and Usefulness of the Work, or to the Honour of our Country; since it might be so easily done, with very little Charge to the Publick, in a much more decent and honourable Manner, while Parliaments are so frequently called. But, these and other Regulations must be left to a Time of Peace, which I shall humbly presume to wish may soon be our Share, however offensive it may be to any, either abroad or at home, who are Gainers by the War.

---

No. 43. Thursday, May 31, 1711.

---

Scilicet, ut posses curvo dignoscere rectum.

HA VING been forced in my Papers to use the Cant-words of Whig and Tory, which have so often varied their Significations, for twenty Years past; I think it necessary to say something of the several Changes those two Terms have undergone since that Period; and then to tell the Reader what I have always understood by each of them, since I undertook this Work. I reckon, that these Sorts of conceited Appellations, are usually invented by the Vulgar; who not troubling themselves to examine through the Merits of a Cause, are consequently the most violent Partisans of what they espouse; and in their Quarrels, usually proceed to their beloved Argument of calling Names, until at length they light upon one which is sure to stick; and in time, each Party grows proud of that Appellation, which their Adversaries at first intended for a Reproach. Of this kind were the Prasini and Veneti, the Guelfs and Gibelins, Huguenots and Papists, Round-beads and Cavaliers; with many others, of ancient and modern Date. Among us of late there seems to have been a Barrenness of Invention in this Point; the Words Whig and Tory, although they be not much above thirty Years old, having been pressed to the Service of many Successions of Parties, with very different Idea's fastened to them. This Distinction, I think, began towards the latter part of King Charles the Second's Reign; was dropt during that of his Successor, and then revived at the Revolution; since which it hath perpetually flourished, although applied to very different kinds of Principles and Persons. In that Convention of Lords and Commons, some of both Houses were for a Regency to the Prince of Orange, with a Reservation of Style and Title to the absent King, which should be made Use of in all publick Acts. Others, when they were brought to allow the Throne vacant, thought the Succession should immediately go to the next Heir, according to the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, as if the last King were actually dead. And, although the Dissenting Lords (in whose House the chief Opposition was) did at last yield both those Points, took the Oaths to the new King, and many of them Employments; yet they were looked upon with an Evil Eye by the warm Zealots of the other Side; neither did the Court ever heartily favour any of them, although some were of the most eminent for Abilities and Virtue; and served that Prince, both in his Councils and his Army, with untainted Faith. It was apprehended, at the same Time, and perhaps it might have been true, that many of the Clergy would have been better pleased with the Scheme of a Regency, or at least an uninterrupted lineal Succession, for the Sake of those whose Consciences were truly Scrupulous; and they thought there were some Circumstances, in the Case of the deprived Bishops, that looked a little hard, or at least deserved Commiseration.

THESE, and other the like Reflections did, as I conceive, revive the Denominations of Whig and Tory.

SOME Time after the Revolution, the Distinction of High and Low-Church came in; which was raised by the Dissenters, in order to break the Church Party, by dividing the Members into High and Low; and the Opinion raised, That the High joined with the Papists, inclined the Low to fall in with the Dissenters.

AND here I shall take Leave to produce some Principles, which in the several Periods of the late Reign, served to denote a Man of one or the other Party. To be against a Standing Army in Time of Peace, was all High-Church, Tory and Tantivy. To differ from a Majority of Bishops was the same. To raise the Prerogative above Law for serving a Turn, was Low-Church and Whig. The Opinion of the Majority in the House of Commons, especially of the Country-Party or Landed Interest, was High-flying and rank Tory. To exalt the King's Supremacy beyond all Precedent, was Low-Church, Whiggish and Moderate. To make the least Doubt of the pretended Prince being Supposititious, and a Tyler's Son, was, in their Phrase, Top and Top-gallant, and perfect Jacobitism. To resume the most exorbitant Grants that were ever given to a Set of profligate Favourites, and apply them to the Publick, was the very Quintesence of Toryism; notwithstanding those Grants were known to be acquired, by sacrificing the Honour and the Wealth of England.

IN most of these Principles, the two Parties seem to have shifted Opinions, since their Institution under King Charles the Second; and indeed to have gone very different from what was expected from each, even at the Time of the Revolution. But, as to that concerning the Pretender, the Whigs have so far renounced it, that they are grown the great Advocates for his Legitimacy: Which gives me the Opportunity of vindicating a noble * Duke who was accused of a Blunder in the House, when, upon a certain Lord's mentioning the Pretended Prince, his Grace told the Lords, He must be plain with them, and call that Person, not the Pretended Prince, but the Pretended Impostor: Which was so far from a Blunder in that Polite Lord, as his Ill-willers give out, that it was only a refined Way of delivering the avowed Sentiments of his whole Party.

BUT to return. This was the State of Principles when the QUEEN came to the Crown; sometime after which, it pleased certain great Persons, who had been all their Lives in the Altitude of Tory-Profession, to enter into a Treaty with the Whigs; from whom they could get better Terms than from their old Friends, who began to be resty, and would not allow Monopolies of Power and Favour; nor consent to carry on the War intirely at the Expence of this Nation, that they might have Pensions from Abroad; while another People, more immediately concerned in the War, Traded with the Enemy as in Times of Peace. Whereas, the other Party, whose Case appeared then as desperate, was ready to yield to any Conditions that would bring them into Play. And I cannot help affirming. That this Nation was made a Sacrifice to the unmeasurable Appetite of Power and Wealth in a very few, who shall be nameless, who in every Step they made, acted directly against what they had always professed. And if his Royal Highness the Prince had died some Years sooner (who was a perpetual Check in their Career) it is dreadful to think how far they might have proceeded.

---

* The Duke of

[Incomplete note in F.]

SINCE that Time, the Bulk of the Whigs appeareth rather to be linked to a certain Sett of Persons, than any certain Set of Principles: So that if I were to define a Member of that Party, I would say, he was one who believed in the late Ministry. And therefore, whatever I have affirmed of Whigs in any of these Papers, or objected against them, ought to be understood either of those who were Partisans of the late Men in Power, and privy to their Designs; or such who joined with them, from a Hatred to our Monarchy and Church; as Unbelievers and Dissenters of all Sizes: Or Men in Office, who had been guilty of much Corruption, and dreaded a Change; which would not only put a Stop to further Abuses for the Future, but might perhaps, introduce Examinations of what was past: Or those who had been too highly obliged, to quit their Supporters with any common Decency. Or lastly, the Money-Traders, who could never hope to make their Markets so well of Præmiums and Exorbitant Interest, and high Remittances, by any other Administration.

UNDER these Heads, may be reduced the whole Body of those whom I have all along understood for Whigs: For, I do not include within this Number, any of those, who have been misled by Ignorance, or seduced by plausible Pretences, to think better of that Sort of Men than they deserve, and to apprehend mighty Dangers from their Disgrace: Because, I believe, the greatest Part of such well-meaning People, are now thoroughly converted.

AND indeed, it must be allowed, that the two fantastick

Names of Whig and Tory, have at present very little Relation to those Opinions, which were at first thought to distinguish them. Whoever formerly professed himself to approve the Revolution, to be against the Pretender, to justify the Succession in the House of Hanover, to think the British Monarchy not absolute, but limited by Laws, which the Executive Power could not dispense with; and to allow an Indulgence to scrupulous Consciences; such a Man was content to be called a Whig. On the other side, whoever asserted the Queen's Hereditary Right; that the Persons of Princes were Sacred; their lawful Authority not to be resisted on any Pretence; nor even their Usurpations, without the most extream Necessity: That, Breaches in the Succession were highly dangerous; that, Schism was a great Evil, both in it self and its Consequences; that, the Ruin of the Church, would probably be attended with that of the State; that, no Power should be trusted with those who are not of the established Religion; such a Man was usually called a Tory. Now, although the Opinions of both these are very consistent, and I really think are maintained at present by a great Majority of the Kingdom; yet, according as Men apprehend the Danger greater, either from the Pretender and his Party, or from the Violence and Cunning of other Enemies to the Constitution; so, their common Discourses and Reasonings, turn either to the first or second Sett of these Opinions I have mentioned; and are consequently styled either Whigs or Tories. Which is, as if two Brothers apprehended their House would be set upon, but disagreed about the Place from whence they thought the Robbers would come; and therefore would go on different Sides to defend it; they must needs weaken and expose themselves by such a Separation; and so did we, only our Case was worse: For, in order to keep off a weak, remote Enemy, from whom we could not suddenly apprehend any Danger, we took a nearer and a stronger one into the House. I make no Comparison at all between the two Enemies: Popery and Slavery are without doubt the greatest and most dreadful of any; but I may venture to affirm, that the Fear of these, have not, at least since the Revolution, been so close and pressing upon us, as that from another Faction; excepting only one short Period, when the Leaders of that very Faction, invited the abdicating King to return; of which I have formerly taken Notice.

HAVING thus declared what Sort of Persons I have always meant, under the Denomination of Whigs, it will be easy to shew whom I understand by Tories. Such whose Principles in Church and State, are what I have above related; whose Actions are derived from thence, and who have no Attachment to any Sett of Ministers, further than as these are Friends to the Constitution in all its Parts; but will do their utmost to save their Prince and Country, whoever be at the Helm.

By these Descriptions of Whig and Tory, I am sensible those Names are given to several Persons very undeservedly; and, that many a Man is called by one or the other, who hath not the least Title to the Blame or Praise I have bestowed on each of them throughout my Papers.

---

---

No. 44. Thursday, June 7, 1711.

---

Magna vis est, magnum nomen, unum & idem Sentientis Senatus.

WOEVER calls to mind the Clamour and the Calumny, the artificial Fears and Jealousies, the shameful Misrepresentation of Persons and of Things, that were raised and spread by the Leaders and Instruments of a certain Party, upon the Change of the last Ministry, and Dissolution of Parliament; if he be a true Lover of his Country, must feel a mighty Pleasure, although mixed with some Indignation, to see the Wishes, the Conjectures, the Endeavours of an inveterate Faction intirely disappointed; and this important Period wholly spent, in restoring the Prerogative to the Prince, and Liberty to the Subject; in reforming past Abuses, preventing future, supplying old Deficiencies, providing for Debts, restoring the Clergy to their Rights, and taking Care of the Necessities of the Church: And, all this unattended with any of those Misfortunes which some Men hoped for, while they pretended to fear.

FOR my own part, I must confess, the Difficulties appeared so great to me, from such a Noise and Shew of Opposition, that I thought nothing but the absolute Necessity of Affairs, could ever justify so daring an Attempt. But, a wise and good Prince, at the Head of an able Ministry, and of a Senate freely chosen, all united to pursue the true Interest of their Country, is a Power, against which, the little inferior Politicks of any Faction, will be able to make no long Resistance. To this we may add one additional Strength, which in the Opinion of our Adversaries, is the greatest and justest of any; I mean the Vox Populi, so indisputably declarative on the same Side. I am apt to believe, when these discarded Politicians begin seriously to consider all this, they will think it proper to give out; and reserve their Wisdom for some more convenient Juncture.

It is pleasant enough to observe, that those who were the chief Instruments of raising the Noise; who started Fears, bespoke Dangers, and formed ominous Prognosticks, in order to scare the Allies, to spirit the French, and fright ignorant People at home; made use of those very Opinions themselves had broached, for Arguments to prove, that the Change of Ministers was dangerous and unseasonable. But, if a House be Swept, the more Occasion there is for such a Work, the more Dust it will raise; if it be going to Ruin, the Repairs, however necessary, will make a Noise, and disturb the Neighbourhood awhile. And as to the Rejoicings made in France, if it be true, that they had any, upon the News of those Alterations among us; their Joy was grounded upon the same Hopes with that of the Whigs, who comforted themselves, that a Change of Ministry and Parliament, would infallibly put us all into Confusion; increase our Divisions, and destroy our Credit; wherein, I suppose, by this time they are equally undeluded.

But this long Session, being in a manner ended, which several Circumstances, and one Accident, altogether unforeseen, have drawn out beyond the usual Time; it may be some small piece of Justice to so excellent an Assembly, barely to mention a few of those great Things they have done for the Service of their QUEEN and Country; which I shall take notice of, just as they come to my Memory.

THE Credit of the Nation began mightily to suffer by a Discount upon Exchequer Bills, which have been generally reckoned the surest and most sacred of all Securities. The present Lord Treasurer, then a Member of the House of Commons, proposed a Method, which was immediately complied with, of raising them to a Par with Specie; and so they have ever since continued.

THE British Colonies of Nevis and St. Christophers, had been miserably Plundered by the French; their Houses burnt, their Plantations destroyed, and many of the Inhabitants carried away Prisoners: They had often, for some Years past, applyed in vain for Relief from hence; until the present Parliament, considering their Condition as a Case of Justice and Mercy, voted them one hundred thousand Pounds by Way of Recompence, in some Manner, for their Sufferings.

SOME Persons, whom the Voice of the Nation authorizeth me to call her Enemies, taking Advantage of the general Naturalization Act, had invited over a great Number of Foreigners of all Religions, under the Name of Palatines; who understood no Trade or Handicraft; yet rather chose to beg than labour; who besides infesting our Streets, bred contagious Diseases, by which we lost in Natives, thrice the Number of what we gained in Foreigners. The House of Commons, as a Remedy against this Evil, brought in a Bill for repealing that Act of general Naturalization; which, to the Surprise of most People, was rejected by the Lords. And upon this Occasion, I must allow my self to have been justly rebuked by one of my Weekly Monitors, for pretending in a former Paper, to hope that Law would be repealed; wherein the Commons being disappointed, took care, however, to send many of the Palatines away, and to represent their being invited over, as a pernicious Council.

THE Qualification-Bill, incapacitating all Men to serve in Parliament, who have not some Estate in Land, either in Possession or certain Reversion, is perhaps the greatest Security that ever was contrived for preserving the Constitution, which otherwise might, in a little time, lie wholly at the Mercy of the Monyed Interest. And, since much the greatest Part of the Taxes is paid, either immediately from Land, or from its Productions; it is but common Justice, that those who are the Proprietors, should appoint what Portion of it ought to go to the Support of the Publick; otherwise, the Engrossers of Money, would be apt to lay heavy Loads on others, which themselves never touch with one of their Fingers.

THE Publick Debts were so prodigiously encreased, by the Negligence and Corruption of those who had been Managers of the Revenue; that the late Ministers, like careless Men, who run out their Fortunes, were so far from any Thoughts of Payment; that they had not the Courage to state or compute them. The Parliament found that thirty Five Millions had never been accounted for; and that the Debt on the Navy, wholly unprovided for, amounted to nine Millions. * The late Chancellor of the Exchequer, suitable to his transcendant Genius for publick Affairs, proposed a Fund to be Security for that immense Debt, which is now confirmed by a Law; and is likely to prove the greatest Restoration and Establishment of the Kingdom's Credit. Nor content with this, the Legislature hath appointed Commissioners of Accompts, to inspect into past Mismanagements of the publick Money, and prevent them for the Future.

I HAVE, in a former Paper, mentioned the Act for building fifty new Churches in London and Westminster, with a Fund appropriated for that pious and noble Work. But, while I am mentioning Acts of Piety, it would be unjust to conceal my Lord High Treasurer's Concern for Religion, which hath extended even to another Kingdom: His Lordship having some Months ago, obtained of her Majesty the first Fruits and Tents to the Clergy of Ireland, as he is known to have already done for that Reverend Body here.

THE Act for carrying on a Trade to the South-Sea, proposed by the same great Person, whose Thoughts are perpetually employed, and ever with Success, on the Good of his Country; will, in all Probability, if duly executed, be of mighty Advantage to the Kingdom, and an everlasting Honour to the present Parliament.

I MIGHT go on further, and mention that seasonable Law against excessive Gaming; the putting a Stop to that scandalous Fraud of false Musters in the Guards; the diligent and effectual Enquiry made by the Commons into several gross Abuses. I might produce many Instances of their impartial Justice in deciding controverted Elections, against former Example, and great Provocations to retaliate. I might shew their cheerful Readiness in granting such vast Supplies; their great Unanimity, not to be broken by all the Arts of a malicious and cunning Faction; their unfeigned Duty to the QUEEN; and lastly, that Representation made to her Majesty from the House of Commons, discovering such a Spirit and Disposition in that noble Assembly, to redress all those Evils, which a long Male-Administration had brought upon us.

---

* Earl of OXFORD.

It is probable, that trusting only to my Memory, I may have omitted many Things of great Importance; neither do I pretend further in the Compass of this Paper, than to give the World some general, however imperfect Idea, how worthily this great Assembly hath discharged the Trust of those who so freely chose them; and what we may reasonably hope and expect from the Piety, Courage, Wisdom, and Loyalty of such excellent Patriots, in a Time so fruitful of Occasions to exert the greatest Abilities.

AND now I conceive the main Design I had in writing these Papers, is fully executed. A great Majority of the Nation is at Length thoroughly convinced, that the QUEEN proceeded with the highest Wisdom, in changing her Ministry and Parliament. That, under a former Administration, the greatest Abuses of all Kinds were committed; and the most dangerous Attempts against the Constitution for some Time intended. The whole Kingdom finds the present Persons in Power, directly and openly pursuing the true Service of their QUEEN and Country; and to be such whom their most bitter Enemies cannot tax with Bribery, Covetousness, Ambition, Pride, Insolence, or any pernicious Principles in Religion or Government.

FOR my own particular, those little barking Pens which have so constantly pursued me, I take to be of no further Consequence to what I have writ, than the scoffing Slaves of old, placed behind the Chariot, to put the General in Mind of his Mortality; which was but a Thing of Form, and made no Stop or Disturbance in the Show. However, if those perpetual Snarlers against me, had the same Design, I must own they have effectually compassed it; since nothing can well be more mortifying, than to reflect, that I am of the same Species with Creatures capable of uttering so much Scurrility, Dulness, Falshood and Impertinence, to the Scandal and Disgrace of Human Nature.

No. 45. Thursday June 14, 1711.

Melius non tangere Clamo.

WHEN a General hath conquered an Army, and reduced a Country to Obedience; he often finds it necessary to send out small Bodies, in order to take in petty Castles and Forts; and beat little straggling Parties, which are otherwise, apt to make Head and infest the Neighbourhood: This Case exactly resembles mine; I count the main Body of the Whigs entirely subdued; at least, until they appear with new Reinforcements, I shall reckon them as such; and therefore do now find my self at Leisure to examine inferior Abuses. The Business I have left, is to fall on those Wretches who would still be keeping the War on Foot, when they have no Country to defend, no Forces to bring into the Field, nor any Thing remaining, but their bare good-Will towards Action and Mischief: I mean, the present Sett of Writers, whom I have suffered without Molestation, so long to infest the Town. If there were not a Concurrence from Prejudice, Party, weak Understanding, and Misrepresentation, I should think them too inconsiderable in themselves to deserve Correction: But, as my Endeavour hath been to expose the gross Impositions of the Fallen Party, I will give a Taste in the following Petition, of the Sincerity of their Factors; to shew how little those Writers for the Whigs were guided by Conscience or Honour; their Business being only to gratify a private Interest.

To the Right Honourable the present Ministry, the humble Petition of the Party-Writers to the late Ministry.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioners have served their Time to the Trade of writing Pamphlets and Weekly Papers, in Defence of the Whigs, against the Church of England, and the Christian Religion, and her Majesty's Prerogative, and her Title to the Crown:

That, since the late Change of Ministry, and meeting of this Parliament, the said Trade is mightily fallen off, and the Call for the said Pamphlets and Papers, much less than formerly; and it is feared, to our further Prejudice, that the Examiner may discontinue Writing; whereby some of your Petitioners will be brought to utter Distress; for as much as through false Quotations, noted Absurdities, and other legal Abuses, many of your Petitioners, to their great Comfort and Support, were enabled to pick up a Weekly Subsistance out of the said Examiner.

That, your said poor Petitioners, did humbly offer your Honour's to write in Defence of the late Change of Ministry and Parliament, much cheaper than they did for your Predecessors; which your Honours were pleased to refuse.

Notwithstanding which Offer, your Petitioners are under daily Apprehension, that your Honours will forbid them to follow the said Trade any longer; by which your Petitioners, to the Number of four Score, with their Wives and Families, will inevitably starve; having been bound to no other Calling.

YOUR Petitioners desire your Honours will tenderly consider the Premisses, and suffer your said Petitioners to continue their Trade (those who set them at Work, being still willing to employ them, although at lower Rates) and your said Petitioners will give Security to make Use of the same Stuff, and dress it in the same Manner, as they always did, and no other.

And your Petitioners, &c.

A Short
CHARACTER

O F

His Ex. T. E. of W.

L. L. of I.—.

W I T H

An Account of some smaller Facts, during His Government, which will not be put into the Articles of Impeachment,

---

---

L O N D O N:

Printed for William Cotes, Bookseller, at the Black-Swan on Ludgate-hill. 1711.

Price d.

---

---

A short Character of his Excellency THOMAS Earl of WHARTON, Lord Lieutenant of IRELAND

With an Account of some smaller Facts during his Government, which will not be put into the Articles of Impeachment.

London, Aug. 30, 1710.

THE Kingdom of Ireland, being governed by Deputation from hence, its Annals, since the English Establishment, are usually digested under the Heads of the several Governors: But, the Affairs and Events in that Island, for some Years past, have been either so insignificant, or so annexed to those of England, that they have not furnished Matter of any great Importance to History. The Share of Honour, which Gentlemen from thence have had by their Conduct and Employments in the Army, turneth all to the Article of this Kingdom; the rest which relateth to Politics, or the Art of Government, is inconsiderable to the last Degree, however it may be represented at Court by those who preside there, and would value themselves upon every Step they make, towards finishing the Slavery of that People, as if it were gaining a mighty Point to the Advantage of England.

GENERALLY speaking, the Times which afford most plentiful Matter for Story, are those in which a Man would least chuse to live; such as under the various Events and Revolutions of War, the Intrigues of a ruined Faction, or the Violence of a prevailing one, and lastly the arbitrary, unlawful Acts of oppressing Governors. In the War, Ireland hath no Share but in Subordination to us; the same may be said of their Factions, which, at present, are but imperfect Transcripts of ours: But the third Subject for History, which is arbitrary Power, and Oppression; as it is that by which the People of Ireland have for some Time, been distinguished from all her * Majesty's Subjects, so being now at its greatest Height under his Excellency Thomas Earl of Wharton, a short Account of his Government, may be of some Use or Entertainment to the present Age, although, I hope, it will be incredible to the next: And, because this Account may be judged rather an History of his Excellency, than of his Government, I must here declare that I have not the least View to his Person in any Part of it. I have had the Honour of much Conversation with his Lordship, and am thoroughly convinced how indifferent he is to Applause, and how insensible of Reproach: Which is not a Humour put on to serve a Turn, or keep a Countenance, nor arising from the Consciousness of Innocence, or any Grandeur of Mind, but the meer unaffected Bent of his Nature.

---

* Queen ANNE.

---

He is without the Sense of Shame or Glory, as some Men are without the Sense of Smelling; and, therefore, a good Name to him is no more than a precious Ointment would be to these. Whoever, for the Sake of others, were to describe the Nature of a Serpent, a Wolf, a Crocodile or a Fox, must be understood to do it without any personal Love or Hatred for the Animals themselves.

IN the same Manner, his Excellency is one whom I neither personally love nor hate. I see him at Court, at his own House, and sometimes at mine (for I have the Honour of his Visits) and when these Papers are public, it is Odds but he will tell me, as he once did upon a like Occasion, that he is damnable mauled; and then with the easiest Transition in the World, ask about the Weather, or Time of the Day? So that I enter on the Work with more Chearfulness, because I am sure, neither to make him angry, nor any Way hurt his Reputation; a Pitch of Happiness and Security to which his Excellency hath arrived, which no Philosopher before him could reach.

I INTEND to execute this Performance by first giving a Character of his Excellency, and then relating some Facts during his Government, which will serve to confirm it.

I KNOW very well that Mens Characters are best known from their Actions; but these being confined to his Administration in Ireland, his Character may, perhaps, take in something more, which the Narrowness of the Time, or the Scene hath not given him Opportunity to exert.

THOMAS, Earl of Wharton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, by the Force of a wonderful Constitution hath some Years passed his Grand Climacteric, without any visible Effects of old Age, either on his Body or his Mind, and in Spight of a continual Prostitution to those Vices which usually wear out both. His Behaviour is in all the Forms of a young Man at five and twenty. Whether he walketh or whistleth, or sweareth, or talketh Bawdy, or calleth Names, he acquitteth himself in each beyond a Templar of three Years standing. With the same Grace, and in the same Style he will rattle his Coachman in the Middle of the Street, where he is Governor of the Kingdom; and, all this is without Consequence, because it is in his Character, and what every Body expecteth. He seemeth to be but an ill Dissembler, and an ill Liar, although they are the two Talents he most practiseth, and most valueth himself upon. The Ends he hath gained by Lying appear to be more owing to the Frequency, than the Art of them: His Lies being sometimes detected in an Hour, often in a Day, and always in a Week. He tells them freely in mixed Companies, although he knows half of those that hear him to be his Enemies, and is sure they will discover them the Moment they leave him. He sweareth solemnly he loveth, and will serve you; and your Back is no sooner turned, but he tells those about him you are a Dog and a Rascal. He goeth constantly to Prayers in the Forms of his Place, and will talk Bawdy and Blasphemy at the Chapel Door. He is a Presbyterian in Politics, and an Atheist in Religion; but he chuseth at present to whore with a Papist. In his Commerce with mankind his general Rule is, to endeavour to impose on their Understanding, for which he hath but one Receipt, a Composition of Lies and Oaths: And this he applieth indifferently, to a Freeholder of forty Shillings, and a Privy-Counsellor; by which the Easy and the Honest are often either deceived or amused, and either Way he gaineth his Point. He will openly take away your Employment To-day, because you are not of his Party; To-morrow he will meet or send for you, as if nothing at all had passed, lay his Hands with much Friendship on your Shoulders, and with the greatest Ease and Familiarity, tell you that the Faction are driving at something in the House; that you must be sure to attend, and to speak to all your Friends to be there, although he knoweth at the same Time, that you and your Friends are against him in the very Point he mentioneth: And however absurd, ridiculous and gross this may appear, he hath often found it successful, some Men having such an aukward Bashfulness, they know not how to refuse on a sudden, and every Man having something to hope or fear, which often hinders them from driving Things to Extremes with Persons of Power, whatever Provocations they may have received. He hath sunk his Fortune by endeavouring to ruin one Kingdom *, and hath raised it by going far in the Ruin of another †. With a good natural Understanding, a great Fluency in Speaking, and no ill Taste of Wit, he is generally the worst Companion in the World; his Thoughts being wholly taken up between Vice and Politics, so that Bawdy, Prophaneness and Business, fill up his whole Conversation. To gratify himself in the two first he maketh use of suitable Favourites, whose Talents reach no higher than to entertain him with all the Lewdness that passeth in Town. As for Business, he is said to be very dextrous at that Part of it which turneth upon Intrigue, and he seemeth to have transferred those Talents of his Youth for intriguing with Women, into public Affairs. For, as some vain young Fellows, to make a Gallantry appear of Consequence, will chuse to venture their Necks by climbing up a Wall or Window at Midnight to a common Wench, where they might as freely have gone in at the Door, and at Noon-Day; so his Excellency, either to keep himself in Practice, or advance the Fame of his Politics, affects the most obscure, troublesome, and winding Paths, even in the most common Affairs, those which would be brought about as well in the ordinary Forms, or would follow of Course whether he intervened or not.

HE bears the Gallantries of his Lady with the Indifference of a Stoic, and thinks them well recompenced by a Return of Children to support his Family without the Fatigues of being a Father. He has three predominant Passions, which you will seldom find united in the same Man, as arising from different Dispositions of Mind, and naturally thwarting each other: These are Love of Power, Love of Money, and Love of Pleasure; they ride him sometimes by Turns, and sometimes all together: Since he went into Ireland, he seemeth most disposed to the second, and hath met with great Success, having gained by his Government, of under two Years, five and forty thousand Pounds by the most favourable Computation, half in the regular Way, and half in the prudential.

---

* England.

† Ireland.

HE was never yet known to refuse or keep a Promise; as I remember he told a Lady, but with an Exception to the Promise he then made (which was to get her a Pension) yet he broke even that, and I confess, deceived us both. But here I desire to distinguish between a Promise and a Bargain; for he will be sure to keep the latter when he has the fairest Offer.

THUS much for his Excellency's Character: I shall now proceed to his Actions, only during the Time he was Governor of Ireland, which were transmitted to me by an eminent Person in Business there, who had all Opportunities of being well informed, and whose Employment did not lie at his Excellency's Mercy.

THIS Intelligence being made up of several Facts independent of each other, I shall hardly be able to relate them in due Order of Time, my Correspondent omitting that Circumstance, and transmitting them to me just as he recollects them; so that the Gentlemen of that Kingdom, now in Town, will, I hope, pardon me any Slips I shall make in that or any other Kind, while I keep exactly to the Truth.

THOMAS PROBY, Esq; Chirurgeon-General of Ireland, a Person universally esteemed, and whom I have formerly seen here, had built a Country-House, half a Mile from Dublin, adjoining to the Phoenix Park. In a Corner of the Park, just under his House, he was much annoyed with a Dog-kennel which belonged to the Government; upon which he applied to Thomas, Earl of Pembroke, then Lord Lieutenant, and to the Commissioners of the Revenue, for a Lease of about five Acres of that Part of the Park. His Petition was referred to the Lord Treasurer here, and sent back for a Report, which was in his Favour, and the Bargain so hard, that the Lord Treasurer struck off some Part of the Rent. He had a Lease granted him, for which he was to build another Kennel, provide Ice yearly for the Government, and pay a certain Rent; the Land might be worth about thirty Shillings an Acre. His Excellency, soon after his Arrival in Ireland, was told of this Lease, and by his absolute Authority commanded Mr. Proby to surrender up the Land; which he was forced to do, after all the Expence he had been at, or else, must have expected to lose his Employment; at the same Time he is under an Obligation to pay his Rent, and, I think, he doth it to this Day. There are several Circumstances in this Story which I have forgot, having not been sent to me with the rest; but, I had it from a Gentleman of that Kingdom, who some Time ago was here.

UPON his Excellency's being declared Lord Lieutenant, there came over to make his Court one Dr. Lloyd, Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, noted in that Kingdom for being the only Clergyman that declared for taking off the Sacramental Test, as he did openly in their Convocation of which he was a Member. The Merit of this, and some other Principles suitable to it, recommended by Tom Broderick, so far ingratiated him with his Excellency, that being provided of a proper Chaplain already, he took him however into a great Degree of Favour: The Doctor attended his Excellency to Ireland, and observing a cast Wench in the Family to be in much Confidence with my Lady, he thought by addressing there, to have a short open Passage to Preference. He met with great Success in his Amour; and walking one Day with his Mistress after my Lord and Lady in the Castle-Garden, my Lady said to his Excellency, "What do you think? we are going to lose poor Foyd," a Name of Fondness they usually gave her. "How do you mean?" said my Lord. "Why the Doctor behind us is resolved to take her from us." "Is he, by G—d? why then (G—d d—mn me) he shall have the first Bishoprick that falls *."

THE Doctor, thus encouraged, grew a most violent Lover, returned with his Excellency for England; and soon after, the Bishoprick of Cork falling void, to shew he meant fair, he married his Damsel publickly here in London, and his Excellency as honourably engaged his Credit to get him the Bishoprick; but, the Matter was reckoned so infamous, that both the Archbishops here, especially his Grace of York, interposed with the Queen, to hinder so great a Scandal to the Church, and Dr. Brown, Provost of Dublin College, being then in Town, her Majesty was pleased to nominate him; so that Dr. Lloyd was forced to sit down with a moderate Deanery in the Northern Parts of that Kingdom, and the additional Comfort of a sweet Lady, who brought this her first Husband no other Portion, than a Couple of Olive Branches for his Table, though she herself hardly knoweth by what Hand they were planted.

* It was confidently reported, as a Conceit of his Excellency, that, talking upon this Subject, he once said with great Pleasure, that he hoped to make his W——e a Bishop.

THE Queen reserveth all the great Employments of Ireland to be given by herself, though often by the Recommendation of the chief Governor, according to his Credit at Court. The Provostship of Dublin College is of this Number, which was now vacant, upon the Promotion of Dr. Brown; Dr. Benjamin Pratt, a Fellow of that College, and Chaplain to the House of Commons of that Kingdom, as well as domestic Chaplain to the Duke of Ormond, was at that Time here, in Attendance upon the Duke. He is a Gentleman of good Birth and Fortune in Ireland, and lived here in a very decent Figure: He is a Person of Wit and Learning, hath travelled and conversed in the best Company, and was very much esteemed among us here when I had the Pleasure of his Acquaintance: But, he had the original Sin of being a reputed Tory, and a Dependent on the Duke of Ormond; however, he had many Friends among the Bishops and other Nobility to recommend him to the Queen; at the same Time there was another Fellow of that College, one Dr. Hall, who had much the Advantage of Pratt in Point of Seniority; this Gentleman had very little introduced himself into the World, but lived retired, although otherwise said to be an excellent Person, and very deserving for his Learning and Sense: He had been recommended from Ireland by several Persons, and his Excellency, who had never before seen nor thought of him, after having tried to injure the College by recommending Persons from this Side, at last set up Hall, with all imaginable Zeal against Pratt. I tell this Story the more fully, because it is affirmed, by his Excellency's Friends, that he never made more Use of his Court Skill, than at this Time, to stop Dr. Pratt's Promotion; not only from the Personal Hatred he had to the Man, on Account of his Patron and Principles, but that he might return to Ireland with some little Opinion of his Credit at Court; which had mighty suffered by many Disappointments, especially that of his Chaplain Dr Lloyd. It would be incredible to relate the many Artifices he used to this End, of which the Doctor had daily intelligence, and would fairly tell his Excellency so at his Levees, who sometimes could not conceal his Surprize, and then would promise with half a dozen Oaths, never to concern himself one Way or other; these were broke every Day, and every Day detected. One Morning, after some Expostulation between the Doctor and his Excellency, and a few additional Oaths, that he would never oppose him more, his Excellency went immediately to the Bishop of Ely, and prevailed on him to go to the Queen, from him, and let her Majesty know, that he never could consent, as long as he lived, that Dr. Pratt should be Provost, which the Bishop barely complied with, and delivered his Message; although at the same Time he did the Dr. all the good Offices he could. The next Day the Doctor was again with his Excellency, and gave him Thanks for so open a Proceeding; the Affair was now past dissembling, and his Excellency, owned he did not oppose him directly, but confessed he did it collaterally. The Doctor, a little warmed, said, "No, my Lord, you mean directly you did not, but indirectly you did." The Conclusion was, that the Queen named the Doctor to the Place; and, as a further Mortification, just upon the Day of his Excellency's Departure for Ireland.

But here I must desire the Reader's Pardon, if I cannot digest the following Facts in so good a Manner as I intended; because it is thought expedient, for some Reasons, that the World should be informed of his Excellency's Merits as soon as possible. I will therefore only transcribe the several Passages as they were sent me from Dublin, without either correcting the Style, or adding any Remarks of my own. As they are, they may serve for Hints to any Person, who may hereafter have a Mind to write Memoirs of his Excellency's Life.

SOME REMARKS
UPON A Pamphlet,
ENTITL'D,

[A Letter to the Seven Lords of the Committee, appointed to Examine G R E G G.]

---

By the Author of the EXAMINER.

---

LONDON,
Printed for John Morphew, near Stationers-Hall. 1711. (Price 3 d.)

---

---

SOME REMARKS, &c.

THOSE who have given themselves the trouble to write against me, either in single Papers, or Pamphlets, (and they are pretty numerous) do all agree in discovering a violent Rage, and at the same time affecting an Air of Contempt toward their Adversary; which, in my humble Opinion, are not very consistent; and therefore it is plain, that their Fury is real and hearty, their Contempt only personated. I have pretty well studied this Matter, and would caution Writers of their Standard, never to engage in that difficult Attempt of Despising, which is a Work to be done in cold Blood, and only by a superior Genius to one at some distance beneath him. I can truly affirm, I have had a very sincere Contempt for many of those who have drawn their Pens against me; yet I rather chose the cheap way of discovering it by silence and neglect, than be at the pains of new Terms to express it: I have known a Lady value her self upon a haughty disdainful Look, which very few understood, and no Body alive regarded. Those Common-place Terms of Infamous Scribler, Prostitute Libeller, and the like, thrown abroad without Propriety or Provocation, do ill personate the true Spirit of Contempt, because they are such as the meanest Writer whenever he pleases, may use, towards the best. I remember indeed a Parish Fool, who, with a great deal of Deformity carried the most disdainful Look I ever observed in any Countenance; and it was the most prominent part of his Folly; but he was thoroughly in earnest, which these Writers are not: For there is another thing I would observe, that my Antagonists are most of them so, in a literal Sense; breathe real Vengeance, and extend their Threats to my Person, if they knew where to find it; wherein they are so far from despising, that I am sensible they do me too much Honour. The Author of the Letter to the seven Lords, takes upon him the three Characters of a Despiser, a Threatener, and a Railer; and succeeds so well in the two last, that it has made him miscarry in the first. It is no unwise Proceeding which the Writers of that side have taken up, to scatter their Menaces in every Paper they publish; it may perhaps look absurd, ridiculous and impudent in People at mercy to assume such a Style; but the Design is right, to endeavour persuading the World that it is They who are the injured Party, that They are the Sufferers, and have a right to be angry.

However, there is one Point wherein these Gentlemen seem to stretch this wise Expedient a little farther than it will allow. I, who for several Months undertook to Examine into the late Management of Persons and Things, was content sometimes to give only a few Hints of certain Matters, which I had Charity enough to wish might be buried for ever in Oblivion, if the Confidence of these People had not forced them from me. One Instance whereof, among many, is the Business of Gregg, the Subject of a Letter I am now considering. If this Piece hath been written by Direction, as I should be apt to suspect; yet I am confident, they would not have us think so, because it is a sort of Challenge, to let the World into the whole Secret of Gregg's Affair. But I suppose they are confident, it is what I am not Master of; wherein it is odds but they may be mistaken; for I believe, the Memorials of that Transaction are better preserved than they seem to be aware of, as perhaps may one Day appear.

This Writer is offended because I have said so many severe Things with Application to particular Persons. The Medley has been often in the same Story: If they condemn it as a Crime in general, I shall not much object, at least I will allow it should be done with Truth and Caution; but by what Argument will they undertake to prove that it is pardonable on one side, and not on the other? Since the late Change of Ministry, I have observed many of that Party take up a new Style, and tell us, That this way of personal Reflection ought not to be endured; they could not approve of it; it was against Charity and good Manners. When the Whigs were in Power, they took special Care to keep their Adversaries silent; then all kind of Falshood and Scurrility, was doing good service to the Cause, and detecting of evil Principles. Now, that the Face of Things is changed, and we have liberty to retort upon them, they are for calling down Fire from Heaven upon us; though by a sort of Indulgence which they were Strangers to, we allow them equal liberty of the Press with ourselves; and they even now make greater Use of it against Persons in highest Power and Credit, than we do against those who have been discarded for the most infamous Abuse of both.

Who encouraged and rewarded the Observator and Review for many Years together, in charging the whole Body of the Clergy with the most odious Crimes and Opinions? In declaring all who took Oaths to the Government, and called themselves Tories, to be worse than Papists and Nonjurors? in exposing the Universities, as Seminaries of the most pernicious Principles in Church and State? in defending the Rebellion, and the Murder of King Charles I. which they asserted to be altogether as justifiable as the late Revolution? Is there a great Man now in Power, or in any Credit with the Queen, whom those worthy Undertakers have not treated by Name in the most ignominious Manner? Even since this great Change of Affairs, with what amazing Licentiousness hath the Writer of the Medley attacked every Person of the present Ministry, the Speaker of the House of Commons, and the whole Senate? He has turned into Ridicule the Results of the Council and the Parliament, as well as the just and generous Endeavours of the latter to pay the Debts and restore the Credit of the Nation, almost ruined by the Corruption and Management of his own Party.

And are these the People who complain of personal Reflections? Who so confidently invoke the Men in Power (whom they have so highly obliged) to punish or silence me for reflecting on their exploded Heroes? Is there no difference between Men chosen by the Prince, reverenced by the People for their Virtue, and others rejected by both for the highest Demerits? Shall the Medley and his Brothers fly out with Impunity against those who preside at the Helm; and am I to be torn in pieces because I censure others, who for endeavouring to split the Vessel against a Rock, are put under the Hatches.

I now proceed to the Pamphlet which I intend to consider; It is a Letter written to seven Great Men, who were appointed to Examine Gregg in Newgate. The Writer tells their Lordships, that the Examiner hath charged them for endeavouring by Bribery and Subornation of that Criminal to take away Mr. Harley's Life. If there be anything among the Papers I have writ, which may be applied to these Persons, it would have become this Author to have cleared them fully from the Accusation, and then he might at leisure have fallen upon me as a Lyar and Misrepresenter; but of that he has not offered a Syllable: The Weight of his Charge lies here; that such an Author as the Examiner should presume, by certain Innuendo's, to accuse any great Persons of such a Crime. My Business in those Papers was to represent Facts, and I was as sparing as possible of reflecting upon particular Persons; but the Mischief is, that the Readers have always found Names to tally with those Facts; and I know no Remedy for this. As for Instance in the Case here before us. An under Clerk in the Secretary's Office, of 50*l.* a Year, is discovered to hold Correspondence with France, and apprehended by his Master's Order, before he could have Opportunity to make his Escape, by the private warning of a certain Person, a profest Enemy to the Secretary. The Criminal is condemned to dye. It is found, upon his Tryal, that he was a poor profligate Fellow; the Secretary at that time was under the mortal hatred of a violent prevailing Party, who dreaded him for his great Abilities, and his avowed Design to break their destructive Measures. It was very well known, that a Secretary of State hath little or no Intercourse with the lower Clerks, but with the Under Secretaries, who are the more immediate Masters of those Clerks, and are, and ought to be, as they then were, Gentlemen of Worth: However, it would pass well enough in the World, that Gregg was employed in Mr. Secretary Harley's Office, and was consequently one of his Clerks, which would be Ground enough to build upon it what Suggestions they pleased. Then for the Criminal, he was Needy and Vicious: He owed his Death to the Secretary's watchful Pursuit of him, and would therefore probably incline to hearken to any Offers that would save his Life, gratify his Revenge, and make him easy in his Fortune: So that if a work of Darkness were to be done, it must be confess, here were proper Motives, and a proper Instrument. But ought we to suspect any Persons of such a diabolical Practice? Can all Faith, and Honour, and Justice be thus violated by Men? Questions proper for a Pulpit, or well becoming a Philosopher; but what if it were Regnandi causa? (and that perhaps in a literal Sense). Is this an Age of the World to think Crimes improbable because they are great?

Perhaps it is: But what shall we say to some of those Circumstances which attended this Fact? Who gave Rise to this Report against Mr. Harley? Will any of his Enemies confess in cold Blood that they did either believe, suspect or imagine, the Secretary, and one of the under Clerks, to be joined in corresponding with France? Some of them, I should think, knew better what belonged to such a Correspondence, and how it ought to be managed. The Nature of Grigg's Crime was such, as to be best performed without any Accomplices at all: It was, to be a Spy here for the French, and to tell them all he knew; and it appears by his Letters that he never had it in his Power to let them into any thing of Importance. The Copy of the Queen's Letter to the Emperor, which he sent to the Enemy, and hath made such a noise, was only to desire, that Pr. Eugene might be employed to command in Spain, which for six Weeks before had been mentioned in all the Gazettes of Europe. It was evident from the Matter of his Letters, that no Man of Consequence could have any share in them. The whole Affair had been Examined in the Cabinet, two Months before, and there found and reported as only affecting the Person of Grigg, who to supply his Vices and his Wants was tempted to engage in that Correspondence; it is therefore hard to conceive, how that Examination should be resumed after such a distance of Time, with any fair or honourable Intention. Why were not Grigg's Examinations published, which were signed by his own Hand, and had been taken in Cabinet two Months before the Committee of the House was appointed to re-examin him? Why was he pressed so close to cry out with Horror, Good God, would you have me accuse Mr. Harley when he is wholly innocent? why were all the Answers returned to the Queries sent him, immediately burned? I cannot in my Conscience but think, that the Party was bound in Honour to procure Grigg a Pardon, which was openly promised him, upon Condition of making an ingenuous Confession, unless they had some other Notions of what is ingenuous, than is commonly meant by that Word. A Confession may be never the less ingenuous, for not answering the Hopes or Designs of those who take it; but though the Word was publickly used, the Definition of it was reserved to private Interpretation, and by a capricious humour of Fortune, a most flagitious, though repenting Villain, was hanged for his Virtue. It could not indeed consist with any kind of Prudence then in Fashion, to spare his Life, and thereby leave it in his Power at any time to detect their Practices, which he might afterwards do at any time, with so much Honour to himself.

But I have the luck to be accused by this Author in very good Company; the two Houses of Parliament in general, and the Speaker of the House of Commons in particular; whom he taxes with Falshood and Absurdity, as well as my self, though in a more respectful manner, and by a sort of Irony. The whole Kingdom had given the same Interpretation that I had done, to some certain Passages in the Address from both Houses, upon the Attempt of Guisard; Friends and Enemies agreed in applying the word Faction. But the Speaker is much clearer; talks (as I have mentioned in another Place) of SOME unparalelled Attempts, and uses other Terms that come pretty home to the Point. As to what the Parliament affirms, this Author makes it first as absurd and impracticable as he can, and then pretends to yield, as pressed by so great an Authority, and explains their Meaning into Nonsense, in order to bring them off from reflecting upon his Party. Then for the Speaker, this Writer says, he is but a single Man, and because his Speech was in Words too direct to avoid, he advises him to save his Honour and Virtue, by owning a Solecism in Speech, and to write less Correctly, rather than mean Maliciously. What an Expedient this Advocate hath found to remove the Load of an Accusation! He answers, the Crime is horrible, that Great Men ought not to be thus insolently Charged: We reply, that the Parliament and Speaker appear, in many Points, to be of the same Opinion: He rejoins, that he is pressed by too great an Authority; that perhaps those wise Assemblies, and that Honourable Gentleman, (who besides is but a single Man) may probably speak Nonsense; they must either deliver a Solecism, or be Malicious, and in good Manners he rather thinks it may be the former.

The Writer of the Letter having thus dispatched the Examiner, falls next upon a Paper called Secret Transactions, &c. written, as he tells us, by one Francis Hoffman, and the Ordinary of Newgate, Persons whom I have not the Honour to be known to, (whatever my Better's may be) nor have yet seen their Productions; but by what is cited from them in the Letter, it should seem, they have made some untoward Observations; however, the same Answer still serves, not a Word to controul what they say, only they are a couple of daring, insolent Wretches, to reflect upon the greatest and best Men in England; and there's an End. I have no sort of Regard for that same Hoffman, to whose Character I am a perfect Stranger; but methinks the Ordinary of Newgate should be treated with more Respect, considering what Company he has kept, and what Visitors he may have had. However I shall not enter into a Point of Controversy whether the Lords were acquainted with the Ordinary, or the Ordinary with the Lords, since this Author leaves it undecided. Only one Thing I take to be a little hard; It is now confessed on all Hands, that Mr. Harley was most unjustly suspected of joining with an under Clerk in corresponding with France: The Suspicion being in it self unreasonable, and without the least probable Grounds, wise Men began to consider what violent Enemies that Gentleman had; they found the Report most industriously spread, the Whigs in common Discourse discovering their Wishes, that he might be found guilty; the management of the whole Affair was put into the Hands of such, as it is supposed would at least not be sorry to find more than they expected; The Criminals dying Speach is unfortunately published, wherein he thanks God he was not tempted to save his Life by falsely accusing his Master, with more to the same purpose: From all this put together, it was no very unnatural Conjecture, that there might have been some tampering; now, I say, it is a little hard that Mr. Harley's Friends must not be allowed to have their Suspicions, as well as his Enemies: And this Author, if he intended to deal fairly, should have spent one Paragraph in railing at those who had the Impudence and Villainy to suspect Mr. Harley, and then proceed in due method to defend his Committee of Examiners: But that Gentleman being, as this Author says of the Speaker, but a single Man; I suppose, his Reputation and Life were esteemed but of little Consequence.

There is one State of the Case in this Letter, which I cannot well omit, because the Author, I suppose, conceives it to be extremely cunning and malicious; that it cuts to the quick, and is wonderfully Severe upon Mr. Harley, without exposing the Writer to any Danger. I say this to gratify him, to let him know, I take his meaning, and discover his Inclinations. His parallel Case is this; Supposing Guiscard had been intimate with some great Officer of State, and had been suspected to communicate his most secret Affairs with that Minister; then he asks, Whether it would have been Subversion, or Seeking the Life and Blood of that Officer, in these great Lords of the Council, if they had narrowly examined this Affair, inquired with all Exactness what he knew of this great Officer, what Secrets he had imported to him, and whether he were privy to his corresponding? &c. In this Parallel, Guiscard's Case is supposed to be the same with Greg's; and That of the great Officer with Mr. Harley's. So that here he lays down as a Thing granted, that Greg was intimate with Mr. Harley, and suspected to communicate his most Secret Affairs to him. Now did ever any rational Man suspect, that Mr. Harley, first Principal Secretary of State, was intimate with an under Clerk, or upon the Foot of having most Secret Affairs communicated to Him from such a Councillor, from one in so inferior a Station, whom perhaps he hardly knew by sight? Why was that Report raised, but for the Uses which were afterwards made of it? Or, why should we wonder that they, who were so wicked to be Authors of it, would be scrupulous in applying it to the only Purpose for which it could be raised?

Having thus considered the main Design of this Letter, I shall make a few Remarks upon some particular Passages in it.

First, Though it be of no Consequence to this Dispute, I cannot but observe a most evident Falshood, which he repeats three or four times in his Letter, that I make the World believe I am set on work by Great People. I remember my self to have several Times affirmed the direct contrary, and so I do still; and if I durst tell him my Name, which he is so desirous to know, he would be convinced that I am of a Temper to think no Man great enough to set me on Work; nay I am content to own all the scurrilous Titles he gives me, if he be able to find one Innuendo through all those Papers that can any way favour this Calumny: The Malice of which is not intended against Me, but the present Ministry, to make the World believe, that what I have published, is the utmost Effort of all they can say or think against the last: Whereas it is nothing more than the common Observations of a private Man, deducing Consequences and Effects from very natural and visible Causes.

He tells us, with great Propriety of Speech, That the Seven Lords and their Friends are treated as Subverters of the Constitution, and such as have been long endeavouring to destroy both Church and State. This puts me in mind of One, who first murdered a Man, and afterwards endeavoured to kill him: And therefore I here solemnly deny them to have been Subverters of the Constitution: But that some People did their best Endeavours, I confidently believe.

He tells Me particularly, that I acquit Guiscard by a blunder of a Design against Mr. Harley's Life. I declare he injures me, for I look upon Guiscard to be full as guilty of the Design, as even those were who tampered in the Business of Gregg; and both (to avoid all cavelling) as guilty as ever any Man was that suffered Death by Law.

He calls the Stabbing of Mr. Harley, a sore Blow, but I suppose he means His Recovery; That indeed was a sore Blow to the Interests of his Party: But I take the Business of Gregg to have been a much sorer Blow to their Reputation.

This Writer wonders how I should know their Lordship's Hearts, because he hardly knows his own. I do not well see the Consequence of this: Perhaps he never examines into his own Heart, perhaps it keeps no correspondence with his Tongue or his Pen: I hope at least, it is a Stranger to those foul Terms he has strowed throughout his Letter; otherwise Ifear I know it too well: For out of the abundance of the Heart, the Mouth speaketh. But however, Actions are pretty good Discoverers of the Heart, though Words are not; and whoever has once endeavoured to take away my Life, if he has still the same, or rather much greater Cause, whether it be a just one or no, and has never shewn the least Sign of Remorse; I may venture, without being a Conjurer, to know so much of his Heart, as to believe he would repeat his Attempt, if it were in his Power. I must needs quote some following Lines in the same Page, which are of an extraordinary Kind, and seem to describe the blessed Age we should live in, under the return of the late Administration. It is very well (saith he) that Peoples Heads are to stand on their Shoulders, as long as the Law's will let them; if it depended upon any thing besides, it may be your Lordships seven Heads might be as soon cut off, as that one Gentleman's, were you in Power. Then he concludes the Paragraph with this charitable Prayer, in the true Moderation-Style, and in Italick Letter, May the Head that has done the Kingdom the greatest Mischief, fall first, let it be whose it will. The plain meaning of which is this: If the late Ministry were in Power, they would act just as the present Ministry would, if there were no Law, which perhaps may be true: But I know not any Ministry upon Earth, that I durst confide in without Law; and if at their coming in again, they design to make their Power the Law, they may as easily cut off Seven Heads as One. As for the Head that has done the greatest Mischief to the Kingdom, I cannot consent it should fall, untill he and I have settled the meaning of the word Mischief. Neither do I much approve this renewing an old Fashion of whipping off Heads by a Prayer; it began from what some of us think an ill Precedent. Then that unlimitted Clause, let it be whose it will, perplexes me not a little: I wish in compliance with an old Form, he had excepted my Lord-Mayor: Otherwise, if it were to be determined by their Vote, whose Head it was that had done the greatest Mischief; which way can we tell how far their Predecessor's Principles may have influenced them? God preserve the Queen and Her Ministers from such undistinguishing disposers of Heads.

His Remarks upon what the Ordinary told Hoffman, are singular enough. The Ordinary's Words are, that so many Endeavours were used to corrupt Gregg's Conscience, &c. that he felt as much uneasiness lest Gregg should betray his Master, as if it had been his own Case. The Author of the Letter says to this, that for ought the Ordinary knew, he might confess what was exactly true of his Master; and that therefore, an indifferent Person might as well be uneasy, for fear Gregg should discover something of his Master, that would touch his Life, and yet might have been True. But if these were really the Ordinary's Thoughts at that time, they were honest and reasonable. He knew it was highly improbable that a Person of Mr. Harley's Character and Station should make use of such a Confederate in Treason: If he had suspected his Loyalty, he could not have suspected his Understanding; and knowing how much Mr. Harley was feared and hated by the Men in Power, and observing that Resort to Greg at unseasonable Hours, and that strange Promises were often made him by Men of Note; all this put together, might naturally incline the Ordinary to think, the Design could be nothing else, but that Mr. Harley should be accused in spight of his Innocence.

This Charge of Subornation is, it seems, so extraordinary a Crime, that the Author challenges all the Books in the new Lord's Library (because he hears it is the largest) to furnish us with an Instance like it. What if this Charge should be true? Then I, in my turn, would challenge all the Books in another Lord's Library, which is ten times larger (though perhaps not so often disturbed) to furnish us with an Instance like this. If it be so monstrous a Thing to accuse others of Subornation, what Epithet is left to bestow upon those who are really guilty of the Crime it self? I think it beyond Controversy, that Subornation was practised in the Business of Greg: This manifestly appears from those few Facts I have mentioned: Let the Whigs agree among them where to fix it. Nay it is plain, by the great Endeavours made to stifle his last Speech, that they would have suborned the poor Man even after he was dead: And is this a Matter now to be called in question, much less to be denied?

He compares the Examination of Guisard with that of Greg, talks of several great Persons who Examined the former in Prison, and promised him the Queen's Pardon if he would make a full Discovery. Then the Author puts the Case, How wicked it would be to charge these honourable Counsellors with suborning Guiscard by Promises of Life, &c. to accuse the Innocent, and betray his Friends. Does it any where appear that those Noble Persons who examined Guisard, put leading Questions to him, or pointed out where they would have him fix an Accusation? Did they name some mortal Enemy of their own, and then drop Words of Pardon and Reward, if he would accuse him? Did Guisard leave any Paper behind him, to justify the Innocence of some great Person whom he was tempted to accuse? Yet perhaps I could think of certain People, who were much more likely to act in Concert with Guiscard, than ever Mr. Harley was to be Confederate with Greg. I can imagine several who wished the Pen-knife in Mr. Harley's Heart, though Guiscard alone was desperate enough to attempt it. Who were those, that by their Discourses, as well as Countenances, discovered their Joy when the Blow was struck? Who were those that went out, or stood silent, when the Address and Congratulation were voted? And who were those that refined so far as to make Mr. Harley Confederate with his own Assassin?

There is one Point which this Author affirms more than once or twice in a transient way, as if he would have us suppose it a Thing granted; but is of such a weight, that it wants nothing but Truth to make the late Change of Ministry a very useless and dangerous Proceeding: For so it must be allowed, if, as he affirms, Affairs are still under the like Management, and must be so, because there is no better; that this Sett of Men must take the same courses in their Ministrations with their Predecessors, or ten times worse; that the new Servants go on in the old Methods, and give the same Council and Advice, on the like Occasions, with the old ones; with more to the same Purpose. A Man may affirm, without being of the Cabinet, that every Syllable of this is absolutely false; unless he means, that Mony is still raised by Parliament, and borrowed upon new Funds; that the Duke of Marlborough still Commands the Army; that we have a Treasurer, Keeper, President, and Secretaries, as we had before; and that because the Council meets much about the same Times and Places as formerly, therefore they give the same Advice, and pursue the same Measures. What does he think of finding Funds to pay the old unprovided-for Debt of the Navy, and erecting a Company for the South-sea Trade? What does he think of Mr. Hill's Expedition to preserve our Trade in the West-Indies? What, of the Methods taken to make our Allies pay their Quota's to the War, which was a thing so scandalously either neglected, connived at, or encouraged? What, of the Care to retrench the exorbitant Expences of the Spanish War? What, of those many Abuses and Corruptions at home, which have been so narrowly enquired into, and in a good part redressed? Evils so deeply radicated, must require some time to remedy them, and cannot be all set right in a few Months. Besides, there are some Circumstances known by the Names of Honour, Probity, good Sense, great Capacity for Business; as likewise, certain Principles of Religion and Loyalty, the Want or Possession of all which, will make a mighty Difference even in the Pursuit of the same Measures. There is also one Characteristick which will ever distinguish the late Ministry from the Present, That the former sacrificing all Regards to the Increase of their Wealth and Power, found Those were no otherwise to be preserved, but by Continuance of the War; whereas the Interest, as well as Inclinations of the present, dispose them to make use of the first Opportunities for a safe and honourable Peace.

The Writer goes on upon another parallel Case, which is, the modern way of reflecting upon a Prince and Ministry. He tells us, That the Queen was brought to discard her old Officers through the multitude of Complaints, secret Teazings, and importunate Clamors of a Rout of People, led by their Priests, and spirited underhand by crafty Emissaries. Would not any one who reads this imagine, that the whole Rabble, with the Clergy at their Head, were whispering in the Queen's Ear, or came in Disguise to desire a Word with her Majesty, like the Army of the two Kings of Brentford? The unbiassed Majority of the Nobility and Gentry of the Kingdom, are called, by this Son of Obscurity, a Rout of People, and the Clergy their Leaders. We have often accused that Party for their evil Talent of Railing perpetually against the Clergy, which they discovered at first without any visible Reason or Provocation, as conscious of the Designs they had in view, and therefore wisely began by villifying those whom they intended to destroy. I have observed formerly, that the Party-Malice against the Clergy hath been so blind and furious, as to charge them with Crimes wholly inconsistent. I find they are still in the same Disposition, and that this Writer hath received Direction from his Superiors, to pursue the old Stile upon that Article. Accordingly, in the Paragraph I am now upon, he represents that Reverend Body as Leaders, Cullies, and Tools. First he says, That Rout of secret Teasers (meaning the Nobility and Gentry of the Kingdom) were led by the Priests. Then he assures us, that the Queen will, in a Year or two, begin to consider, Who it was that cheated those poor Priests. And in case Her Majesty should have a mind to bring in the old Ministry again, he comforts his Party, That the Priests are seldom wanting to become the Tools of cunning Managers. I desire to know in what Sense he would have us to understand, that these poor Priests have been cheated: Are they cheated by a Fund established for Building 50 Churches? Or by the Queen's Letter empowering them to proceed on the Business proper for a Convocation? What one single Advantage could they possibly lose by this Change? They are still indeed abused every Day in Print, but it is by those who are without the Power to hurt them; the Serpent has lost his Sting, is trodden under Foot, and its bissing is contemned. But he confidently affirms, That when it shall be thought fit to restore the old Ministry, the Priests will not be wanting to become the Tools of their cunning Managers. This I cannot by any Means allow, unless they have some hidden Reserve of Cunning which hath never yet been produced. The cunningest Managers I ever knew among them, are of all others most detested by the Clergy: Neither do I remember they have been ever able to make any of them Tools, except by making them Bishops; even those few they were able to seduce, would not be their Tools at a lower Rate.

But because this Author, and others of his Standard, affect to make use of that Word Tool, when they have a mind to be Shrewd and Satirical; I desire once for all to set them right. A Tool and an Instrument, in the metaphorical Sense, differ thus: the Former, is an Engine in the Hands of Knaves, the latter in those of wise and honest Men. The greatest Ministers are Instruments in the Hands of Princes, and so are Princes themselves in the Hands of God; and in this Sense the Clergy are ready to be Instruments of any Good to the Prince or People. But that the Clergy of England, since the Reformation, have at any Time been the Tools of a Party, is a Calumny which History and constant Experience, will immediately confute. Scismatick and Fanatick Preachers, have indeed been perpetually employed that way with good Success; by the Faction against K. Charles I. to Murder their Prince, and ruin the Monarchy; by K. James II. to bring in Popery: And ever since the Revolution, to advance the unmeasurable Appetite of Power and Wealth, among a Set of profligate Upstarts. But in all these three Instances, the established Clergy (except a very few, like Tares among Wheat, and those generally Sown by the Enemy) were so far from being Tools, that in the first, they were persecuted, imprisoned and deprived; and in the two others, they were great Instruments, under God, for preserving Our Religion and Liberty.

In the same Paragraph, which contains a Project for turning out the present Ministry, and restoring the last; he owns, that the Queen is now Served with more obsequious Words, more humble Adorations, and a more seeming Resignation to her Will and Pleasure, than she was before. And indeed if this be not true, her Majesty has the worst Luck of any Prince in Christendom. The Reverse of these Phrases I take to be Rude Expressions, Insolent Behaviour, and a real Opposition to her Majesty's most just and reasonable Commands, which are the mildest Terms that the Demeanor of some late Persons towards their Prince can deserve, in return of the highest Favours that Subjects ever received, whereof a hundred Particulars might be produced. So that according to our Authors way of Reasoning, I will put a parallel Case in my Turn. I have a Servant to whom I am exceeding Kind, I reward him infinitely above his Merit. Besides which, he and his Family snap every thing they can lay their Hands on; they will let none come near me, but themselves and Dependants; they misrepresent my best Friends as my greatest Enemies; besides, they are so saucy and malapert, there is no Speaking to them; so far from any Respect, that they treat me as an Inferior. At last I pluck up Spirit, turn them all out of doors, and take in new ones, who are content with what I allow them, though I have less to spare than formerly; give me their best Advice when I ask it, are constantly in the way, do what I bid them, make a Bow when they come in and go out, and always give me a respectful Answer. I suppose the Writer of the Letter would tell me that my present Domesticks were indeed a little more Civil, but the former were better Servants.

There are two Things wherewith this Author is peculiarly Angry. First, at the licentious way of the Scum of Mankind treating the greatest Peers in the Nation. Secondly, that these Hedge-Writers (a Phrase I unwillingly lend him, because it cost me some Pains to invent) seldom speak a Word against any of the late Ministry, but they presently fall to Compliment my Lord Treasurer, and others in great Places. On the first, he brings but one Instance, but I could produce a good many hundred; what does he think of the Observer, the Review and the Medley? In his own impartial judgment, may not they as fairly bid for being the Scum of Mankind, as the Examiner? and have they not treated at least as many, and almost as great Peers, in as infamous a manner? I grant indeed, that through the great defect of Truth, Genius, Learning, and common Sense among the Libellers of that Party, they being of no Entertainment to the World, after serving the present Turn, were immediately forgotten. But this we can remember in gross, that there was not a great Man in England, distinguished for his Love to the Monarchy or the Church, who under the Appellations of Tory, Jacobite, High-flyer, and other Cant Words, was not represented as a publick Enemy, and loaden by name with all manner of Obloquy. Nay have they not even disturbed the Ashes, and endeavoured to blast the Memories of the Dead, and chiefly of those who lost their Lives in the Service of the Monarchy and the Church? His other Quarrel is at our Flattering my Lord Treasurer, and other Great Persons in Power. To which I shall only say; for every Line written in Praise of the present Ministry, I will engage to furnish the Author with three Pages of the most fulsom Panegyricks on the least deserving Members of the last; which is somewhat more than by the Proportion of Time, while they were in Power, could fall to their share. Indeed I am apt to think that the Men of Wit at least, will be more sparing in their Incense of this Kind for the future, and say no more of any Great Man now at the Helm, than they believe he deserves. Poems, Dedications, and other publick Encomiums, might be of use to those, who were obliged to keep up an unnatural Spirit in the Nation, by supplying it with Art; and consequently the Authors deserved, and sometimes met Encouragment and Reward. But those Great Patriots, now at the Head of Affairs, are sufficiently supported by the uncompelled Favour of the Queen, and the natural Disposition of the People. We can do them no Service by our Applauses, and therefore can expect no Payment: So that I look upon this kind of Stock to have fallen at least 90 per. cent. since the great Changes at Court.

He puts a few Questions, which I am in some pain to answer. Cannot (says he) the Successors be excellent Men, unless the Predeces- sors be Villains? Cannot the Queen change her Ministers, but they must presently be such as neither God nor Man can endure? Do Noble Men fall from all Honour, Virtue and Religion, because they are so unhappy as to fall from their Prince's Favour? I desire to say something in the first place, to this last Question, which I answer in the Negative. However he will own, that Men should fall from their Prince's Favour, when they are so unhappy as to fall from all Honour, Virtue and Religion; though I must confess my Belief at the same time, that some certain Persons have lately fallen from Favour, who could not, for a very manifest Reason, be said, properly speaking, to fall from any of the other three. To his other Questions I can only say, that the constant Language of the Whig-Pamphleteers, has been this Twelvemonth past, to tell us how dangerous a Step it was to change the Ministry at so nice a Juncture; to shake our Credit, disoblige our Allies, and encourage the French. Then, this Author tells us, that those discarded Politicians were the greatest Ministers we ever had: His Brethren have said the same thing a hundred times. On the other side, the Queen, upon long Deliberation, was resolved to part with them: The universal Voice of the People was against them: Her Majesty is the most mild and gracious Prince that ever reigned: We have been constantly victorious, and are ruined; the Enemy flourishes under his perpetual Losses. If these be the Consequences of an able, faithful, diligent and dutiful Administration; of that astonishing Success, he says, Providence hath crowned us with, what can be those of one directly contrary? But, not to enter into a wide Field at present, I faithfully promise the Author of the Letter, his Correspondents, his Patrons, and his Brethren, that this Mystery of Iniquity shall be very shortly laid open to the view of the World; when the most ignorant and prejudiced Reader will, I hope, be convinced by Facts not to be controled, how miserably this poor Kingdom has been deluded to the very brink of Destruction.

He would have it, that the People of England have lost their Senses; are bewitched and cheated, mad and without Understanding: But that all this will go off by degrees, and then his Great Men will recover their Esteem and Credit. I did, in one of my Papers, overthrow this idle affected Opinion, which has been a thousand times urged by those who most wished and least believed it: I there shewed the difference between a short Madness of the People, and their natural Bent or Genius. I remember when King James II. went from England, he left a Paper behind him, with Expressions much to the same purpose; hoping, among other things, that God would open the Eyes of the Nation. Too much Zeal for his Religion brought us then in danger of Papery and arbitrary Power; too much Infidelity, Avarice and Ambition, brought us lately into equal danger of Atheism and Anarchy. The People have not yet opened their Eyes, to see any Advantage in the two former; nor I hope will ever find their Senses enough to discover the Blessings of the two latter. Cannot I see things in another Light than this Author and his Party do, without being blind? Is my Understanding lost when it differs from theirs? Am I cheated, bewitched and out of my Senses, because I think those to have been Betrayers of our Country, whom they call Patriots?

He hopes his seven Correspondents will never want their Places; but is in pain for the poor Kingdom, lest their Places should want them. Now I have examined this matter, and am not at all disengaged. Two of them hold their Places still, and are likely to continue in them. Two more were Governors of Islands; I believe the Author does not imagin those to be among the Places which will want Men to fill them. God be thanked, a Man may Command the Beef-Eaters without being a Soldier; I will at any time undertake to do it my self. Then, it would be a little hard, if the Queen should be at a Loss for a Steward to Her Family. So that upon the whole, I see but one great Employment which is in any danger of wanting a sufficient Person to execute it. We must do as well as we can: Yet I have been told, that the bare Business of Presiding in Council, does not require such very transcendent Abilities; and I am mistaken, if till within these late Years, we have not been some Ages without that Office. So that I hope Things may go well enough, provided the Keeper, Treasurer, and both the Secretaries will do their Duties; and it is happy for the Nation that none of their seven Lordships left any of those Places to want them.

The Writer of the Letter concludes it with an Appeal to all the Princes and States of Europe, Friends and Enemies by Name, to give their Judgment, whether they think the late Ministry were wanting in Faithfulness, Abilities, or Diligence to serve their Prince and Country. Now, if he speaks by Order of his Party, I am humbly of Opinion, they have incurred a Premunire, for appealing to a Foreign Jurisdiction, and Her Majesty may seize their Goods and Chattels whenever she pleases. In the mean time, I will not accept his Appeal; which has been rejected by the Queen and both Houses of Parliament. But let a fair Jury be Impanelled in any County of England, and I will be determined by their Verdict. First, he names the King of France and all his Counsellors, with the Pretender and all his Favourers and Abettors. These I except against: I know they will readily judge the late Ministry to be faithful, able and diligent in serving their Prince and Country. The Councils of some People have, in their way, served very much to promote the Service of the Pretender, and to enable the French King to assist him; and is not he, in that Monarch's Opinion, as well as his own, their lawful Prince? I except against the Emperor and the States; because it can be proved upon them, that the Plaintiffs and they have an Understanding together. I except against any Prince who makes unreasonable Demands, and threatens to recal his Troops if they be not complied with; because they have been forced of late to change their Language, and may perhaps be shortly obliged to observe their Articles more strictly. I should be sorry, for the Appealers sakes, to have their Case referred to the Kings of Sweden and Denmark, who infallibly would decree them to be all hanged up for their Insolence to their Sovereign. But above all, the King of Spain would certainly be against them, when he considers, with how scandalous a Neglect his Interests have been managed; and that the full Possession of his Kingdom was made a Sacrifice to those, whose private or Party-Interest swayed them to the continuance of the War. The Author had reason to omit the Grand Signior and the Czar in the List of his Judges; The Decrees of those Princes are too sudden and sanguinary, and their Lessons to instruct Subjects in Behaviour to their Princes, by strangling them with a Bowstring, or flinging them to be devoured alive by Hogs, were enough to deter him from submitting to their Jurisdiction.

F I N I S.

A N E W
Journey to PARIS:

Together with some Secret Transactions

Between the

Fr---h K---g,
AND AN

Eng— Gentleman.

---

By the Sieur du BAUDRIER.

---

Translated from the French.

---

The Second Edition, Corrected.

---

L O N D O N,

Printed for John Morphew, near Stationers-Hall. 1711. (Price 2 d.)

---

---

THE TRANSLATOR
TO THE READER.

THE Original of the following Discourse was transmitted to me three Days ago from the Hague, to which Town it was sent from France; but in the Title-Page there was no mention of the Place where it was Printed, only the Author's Name at length, and the Year of our Lord. That the Tract is genuine, I believe no Person will doubt. You see all along the Vanity of That Nation, in a mean Man, giving himself the Airs of a Secretary, when it appears, by several Circumstances, that he was received only as a menial Servant. It were to be wished, the Author had been one of more Importance, and farther trusted in the Secrets of his Master's Negotiation; but to make amends, he informs us of several Particulars, which one of more Consequence would not have given himself the trouble about: And these Particulars are such, as we at home will perhaps be curious to know; not to mention that he gives us much Light into some Things that are of great moment; and by his not pretending to know more, we cannot doubt the Truth of what he relates.

It is plain, he waited at Table, carried his Master's Valise, and attended in his Bed-chamber; though he takes care to tell us, that Monsieur Prior made many Excuses and Apologies, because these mean Offices appear very inconsistent with the Character of Secretary, which he would seem to set up for.

I shall make no Reflections on this important Affair, nor upon the Consequences we may expect from it: To reason upon Secrets of State, without knowing all the Springs and Motions of them, is too common a Talent among us, and the Foundation of a thousand Errors. Here is room enough for Speculations; but I advise the Reader to let them serve for his own Entertainment, without troubling the World with his Remarks.

---

---

TO Monsieur Monsieur,
AT *ESTAPLE.

SIR,

I DOUBT not but you are curious, as many others are, to know the Secret of Monsieur Prior, an English Gentleman's late Journey from London to Paris. Perhaps, living retired as you do, you may not have heard of this Person, though some Years ago he was very much distinguished at Paris, and in good Esteem even with our August Monarch. I must let you so far into his Character, as to tell you, that Monsieur Prior has signalized himself, both as an eminent Poet, and Man of Business; was very much valued by the late King William, who employed him in important Affairs, both in England and Holland: He was Secretary to the English Ambassy, at the Treaty of Reswick; and afterwards, to my Lords the Counts of Portland and Jersey; and, in the Absence of the latter, managed, for some time, the Affairs of England at our Court by himself. Since the Reign of Queen Anne he was employed as Commissioner of Trade; but the Ministry changing soon after Queen Anne's coming to the Crown, Monsieur Prior, who was thought too much attached to the Rigides, was laid aside, and lived privately at || Cambridge, where he is a Professor, till he was recalled by the present Ministry.

ABOUT two Months ago, our King, resolving once more to give Peace to Europe, notwithstanding the flourishing Condition of his Fleets and Armies, the good Posture of his Finances, that

---

* A Sea-Port Town in the Bolognois.

¶ Tories.

|| A Mistake of the Author; for, Monsieur Prior did not retire to Cambridge, nor is a Professor, but a Fellow.

his Grandson was almost entirely settled in the quiet Possession of Spain, and that the Affairs of the North was changing every Day to his Advantage; offered the Court of England to send a Minister as far as Bologn, who should be there met by some Person from England, to treat the Overtures of a Peace. Upon the first Notice that this was agreed to, the King immediately dispatched Monsieur de Torcy, in whom he very much confides, to Bologn, where he took Lodgings at a private House in the Faux Bourg, at one Mr. de Marais, Marchand de Soy, who is married to an English Woman, that formerly had been a Suivante to one of the forementioned English Ambassador's Ladies, over against the Hostelerie de St. Jean. Monsieur stayed six Days with much Impatience, when, late at Evening, on Wednesday the 14th of July*<sup>1</sup>, a Person, whom we afterwards knew to be Monsieur Prior, came directly to the Door, and enquired for Monsieur De la Bastide, (the Name and Place, I suppose, having been before concerted:) He was immediately shewn unto Monsieur de Torcy, where, as I am informed, they were shut up for three Hours together, without any Refreshment, though Monsieur Prior had rid Post from Calais that Day in a great deal of Rain. The next Morning I was sent for, in all haste, by Monsieur de Marais, who told me, that a Person of Quality, as he suspected, lately come from England, had some occasion for a Secretary; and, because he knew I understood the Languages, wrote a tolerable Hand, had been conversant with Persons of Quality, and formerly trusted with Secrets of Importance, had been so kind to recommend me to the said Gentleman, to serve him in that Quality. I was immediately called up, and presented to Mr. Prior, who accosted me with great Civility, and after some Conversation was pleased to tell me, I had fully answered the Character Monsieur de Marais had given me. From this time, to the Day Monsieur Prior left Calais, in order to return to England, I may pretend to give you a faithful Account of all his Motions, and some probable Conjectures of his whole Negotiation between Bologn and Versailles.

BUT perhaps, Sir, you may be farther curious to know the * New Style.

Particulars of Monsieur Prior's Journey to Bologn. It is reported that sometime before the Peace of Ryswick, King William did dispatch this very Gentleman to Paris, upon the same account for which he now came: This possibly might be the Motive (besides the known Abilities of Monsieur Prior) to send him a second time. The following Particulars I heard in Discourse between Madamoiselle de Marais and her Husband, which being no great Secrets on our side the Water, I suppose were told without Consequence.

MONSIEUR Prior having received his Instructions from the English Court, under pretence of taking a short Journey of Pleasure, and visiting the Chevalier de Hanmer in the Province of Suffolk, left his House on Sunday night, the 11th of July, N.S. taking none of his Servants with him. Monsieur Moore, who had already prepared a Bark, with all Necessaries, on the Coast of Dover, took Monsieur Prior disguised in his Chariot: They lay on Monday Night, the 12th of July, at the Count de Jersey's House in Kent; arrived in good time the next Day at Dover, drove directly to the Shoar, made the Sign by waving their Hats; which was answered by the Vessel; and the Boat was immediately sent to take him in, which he entered, wrapt in his Cloak, and soon got Aboard. He was six hours at Sea, and arrived at Calais about eleven at Night; went immediately to the Gouvernor, who received him with great Respect, where he lay all Night; and set out pretty late the next Morning, being somewhat incommoded with his Voyage, and then took Post for Bologn, as I have before related.

IN the first Conversation I had the Honour to have with Monsieur Prior he was pleased to talk, as if he would have occasion for my Service but a very few Days; and seemed resolved, by his Discourse, that after he had dispatched his Commission with Monsieur de la Bastide (for so we shall from henceforward call that Minister) he would return to England; by this I found I should have but little Employment in Quality of Secretary; however, having heard so great a Character of him, I was willing to attend him in any Capacity he pleased. Four Days we continued at Bologn, where Monsieur de la Bastide and Monsieur Prior had two long Conferences every Day from Ten to One at Noon, and from Six till Nine in the Evening. Monsieur Prior did me the Honour to send me some Meat and Wine constantly from his own Table; upon the third Morning I was ordered to attend early, observed Monsieur Prior to have a pleasant Countenance, he asked me what I thought of a Journey to England? and commanded me to be ready at an hours Warning. But upon the fourth Evening all this was changed; and I was directed to hire the best Horse I could find for my self.

We set out early the next Day, Sunday the 18th, for Paris, in Monsieur de la Bastide's Chaize, whose two Attendants and my self, made up the Equipage; but a small Valise, which I suppose contained Monsieur Prior's Instructions, he was pleased to trust to my Care to carry on Horseback; which Trust I discharged with the utmost Faithfulness.

SOMEWHAT above two Leagues from Bologn, at a small Village called Neile, the Axletree broke, which took us two hours to mend; we baited at Montreuil, and lay that Night at Abbeville. But I shall not give you any detail of our Journey, which passed without any considerable Accident, till we arrived within four Leagues of Paris; when about three in the Afternoon, two Cavaliers, well mounted, and armed with Pistols, crossed the Road, then turned short and rode up briskly to the Chaize, commanding the Coachman to stop. Monsieur de la Bastide's two Attendants were immediately up with them; but I, who guessed at the Importance of the Charge that Monsieur Prior had intrusted me with, though I was in no fear for my own Person, thought it most prudent to advance with what speed I could, to a small Village, about a quarter of a League forward, to wait the Event. I soon observed the Chaize to come on without any Disturbance, and I ventured to meet it; when I found that it was only a Frolick of two young Cadets of Quality, who had been making a Debauch at a Friend's House hard by, and were returning to Paris; one of them was not unknown to Monsieur de la Bastide. The two Cavaliers began to rally me, said I knew how to make a Retreat, with some other Pleasantries; but Monsieur Prior, (who knew the Cause) highly commended my Discretion. We continued our Journey very merrily, and arrived at Paris on Tuesday the 20th, in the Cool of the Evening.

AT the Entrance of the Town our two Cavaliers left us, and Monsieur de la Bastide conducted Monsieur Prior to a private Lodging in the rue St. Louis, which, by all Circumstances, I concluded to be prepared before for his Reception. Here I first had Orders to say that the Gentleman to whom I had the Honour to belong, was called Monsieur Matthews; I then knew no otherwise; afterwards, at Versailles, I overheard in Conversation with Monsieur de la Bastide, that his real Name was Prior.

MONSIEUR Bastide would have had Monsieur Matthews to have gone with him next Morning to Versailles, but could not prevail with him to comply; of which I could never be able to learn the Reason. Our Minister was very importunate, and Monsieur Prior seemed to have no Fatigue remaining from his Journey; perhaps he might conceive it more suitable to his Dignity that Monsieur de la Bastide should go before, to prepare the King, by giving Notice of his Arrival: However it were, Monsieur Bastide made all haste to Versailles, and returned the same Night. During his Absence, Monsieur Prior never stirred out of his Chamber; and after Dinner, did me the Honour to send for me up, that I might bear him Company, as he was pleased to express it. I was surprized to hear him wondering at the Misery, he had observed in our Country, in his Journey from Calais, at the Scarcity and Poverty of the Inhabitants, which he said, did much exceed even what he had seen in his former Journey; for he owned that he had been in France before. He seemed to value himself very much upon the Happiness of his own Island, which, as he pretended, had felt no Effects, like these, upon Trade or Agriculture.

I MADE bold to return for Answer, That in our Nation we only consulted the Magnificence and Power of our Prince; but that in England, as I was informed, the Wealth of the Kingdom was so divided among the People, that little or nothing was left to their Sovereign; and that it was confidently told (though hardly believed in France) that some Subjects had Palaces more Magnificent than Queen Anne her self: That I hoped, when he went to Versailles, he would allow the Grandeur of our Potent Monarch to exceed, not only that of England, but any other in Europe, by which he would find that what he called the Poverty of our Nation, was rather the Effect of Policy in our Court, than any real Want or Necessity. Monsieur Prior had no better Answer to make me, than that he was no Stranger to our Court, the Splendor of our Prince, and the Maxims by which he governed; but for his part, he thought those Countries were happier, where the Productions of it were more equally divided: Such unaccountable Notions is the Prejudice of Education apt to give! In these and the like Discourses we wore away the time till Mons. de la Bastide's return; who after an hour's private Conference with Monsieur Prior, which I found by their Countenances had been warmly pursued on both sides, a Chariot and six Horses(to my great surprize)were instantly ordered, wherein the two Ministers entered, and drove away with all Expedition, my self only attending on Horseback, with my important Valise.

We got to Versailles on Wednesday the 21st, about Eleven at Night; but instead of entering the Town, the Coachman drove us a back way into the Fields, till we stopt at a certain Vineyard, that I afterwards understood joined to the Gardens of Madam Maintenon's Lodgings. Here the two Gentlemen alighted; Monsieur Prior calling to me, bid me search in the Valise for a small Box of Writings; after which the Coachman was ordered to attend in that Place; and we proceeded on some paces, till we stopt at a little Postern which opened into the Vineyard, whereof Monsieur Bastide had the Key. He opened it very readily, and shut it after them, desiring me to stay untill their return.

I WAITED with some Impatience for three Hours, the great Clock struck Two before they came out: The Coachman, who, I suppose, had his Instructions before, as soon as they were got into the Chariot, drove away to a small House at the end of the Town, where Monsieur Bastide left us, to our selves. I observed Monsieur Prior was very Thoughtful, and without entering into any Conversation, desired my Assistance to put him to Bed. Next Morning, Thursday the 22d, I had positive Orders not to stir abroad. About ten a Clock, Mons. Bastide came; the House being small, my Apartment was divided from Monsieur Prior's by a thin Wainscot, so that I could easily hear what they said, when they raised their Voice, as they often did. After some time I could hear Monsieur de la Bastide say, with warmth, Bon Dieu!

&c. Good God! Were ever such Demands made to a great Monarch, unless you were at the Gates of his Metropolis? For the Love of God, Monsieur Prior relax something, if your Instructions will permit you, else I shall despair of any good Success in our Negotiation? Is it not enough that our King will abandon his Grandson, but he must lend his own Arm to pull him out of the Throne? Why did you not open your self to me at Bologn? Why are you more inexorable here at Versailles? You have risen in your Demands, by seeing Madam Maintenon's Desire for a Peace? As able as you are to continue the War, consider which is to be most preferred, the Good of your Country, or the particular Advantage of your General; for he will be the only Gainer among your Subjects? Monsieur Prior, who has a low Voice, and had not that occasion for Passion, answered so softly, that I could not well understand him; but upon parting, I heard him say, If you insist still on these Difficulties, my next Audience will be that of Leave.

THREE Hours after Monsieur de la Bastide returned again, with a Countenance more composed: He asked Mr. Prior if he would give him leave to Dine with him? Having no Attendance, I readily offered my Service at * Table, which Monsieur Prior was pleased to accept with abundance of Apologies. I found they were come to a better Understanding. Mr. Prior has a great deal of Wit and Vivacity; he entertained Monsieur de la Bastide with much Pleasantry, notwithstanding their being upon the reserve before me. That Monsieur, says Mr. Matthews, if he were un*¶* particulier, would be the most agreeable Person in the World. I imagined they spoke of the King, but going often in and out, I could not preserve the Connexion of their Discourse. Did you mind how obligingly he enquired, whether our Famous Chevalier Newton was still living? He told me my good Friend poor || Despreaux was dead since I was in France; and asked me after Q. Anne's Health. These are some of the Particulars I overheard, whilst at Dinner; which confirmed my Opinion, That Monsieur Prior last Night had an Audience of his Majesty.

---

ABOUT Ten that Evening Monsieur de la Bastide came to take

* By this and some other preceding Particulars, we may discover what sort of Secretary the Author was.

¶ A Private Man.

|| Monsieur Boileau, the famous French Poet.

Monsieur Matthews, to go to the same Place they were at before: I was permitted to enter the Vineyard, but not the Gardens, being left at the Gate to wait their return; which was in about two Hours time. The Moon shone bright, and by Monsieur Matthews's manner, I thought he appeared somewhat dissatisfied. When he came into his Chamber, he threw off his Hat in some Passion, folded his Arms, and walked up and down the Room, for above an Hour, extreme pensive: At length he called to be put to Bed; and ordered me to set a Candle by his Bed-side, and to fetch him some Papers out of his Valise to read.

ON Friday the 23d in the Morning, Monsieur Matthews was so obliging to call me to him, with the assurance, that he was extremely pleased with my Discretion, and manner of Address; as a Proof of which Satisfaction, he would give me leave to satisfy my Curiosity with seeing so fine a Place as Versailles; telling me, he should return next day towards Bologne; and therefore advised me to go immediately to view the Palace, with this Caution (though he did not suppose I needed it) not to say any thing of the Occasion that brought me to Versailles.

MONSIEUR de la Bastide having staid the Afternoon with Monsieur Matthews, about Eight o'Clock they went to the Rendezvous: My Curiosity had led me in the Morning to take a stricter View of the Vineyard and Gardens. I remained at the Gate as before. In an Hour and half's time Monsieur Matthews, with Monsieur de la Bastide, another Gentleman, and a Lady, came into the Walk: De la Bastide opened the Gate, and held it some time in his Hand. Whilst Monsieur Matthews was taking his leave of those Persons, I heard the Lady say, at parting, Monsieur, Songez vous, &c. Consider this Night on what we have said to you. The Gentleman seconded her, saying, Ouy, ouy, Monsieur, Songez vous en pour la dernier fois: Ay, ay, Sir, consider for the last time. To which Monsieur Matthews answered briskly in going out, Sire, tout ou rien, &c. Sir, All or none, as I have had the Honour to tell your Majesty before. Which puts it beyond dispute what the Quality of those Persons were, by whom Monsieur Matthews had the Honour to be entertained.

ON Saturday the 24th, Mons. Matthews kept close as before; telling me, a Post-Chaise was ordered to carry him to Calais, and he would do me the grace to take me with him, to keep him

Company in the Journey, for he should leave Monsieur de la Bastide at Versailles. Whilst we were discoursing, that Gentleman came in with an open Air, and a smiling Countenance; he embraced Monsieur Matthews, and seemed to feel so much Joy, that he could not easily conceal it. I left the Chamber, and retired to my own; whence I could hear him say, Courage, Monsieur, no Travelling to day, Madam Maintenon will have me once more conduct you to her. After which I was called, and received Orders about Dinner, &c. Monsieur de la Bastide told me, we should set out about Midnight. He staid the rest of the day with Monsieur Matthews. About Ten a Clock they went forth, but dispensed with my Attendance; it was One in the Morning before they returned, though the Chaise was at the Gate soon after Eleven. Monsieur Matthews took a Morsel of Bread, and a large Glass of Hermitage Wine; after which they embraced with much Kindness, and so parted.

OUR Journey to Calais passed without any Accident worth informing you: Mr. Prior, who is of a Constitution somewhat tender, was troubled with a Rheum, which made speaking uneasy to him; but it was not so at all to me, and therefore I entertained him as well as I could, chiefly with the Praises of our Great Monarch, the Magnificence of his Court, the Number of his Attendants, the Awe and Veneration paid him by his Generals and Ministers, and the Immense Riches of the Kingdom. One Afternoon, in a small Village between Chaumont and Beauvais, as I was discoursing on this Subject, several poor People followed the Chaise to beg our Charity; one louder than the rest, a comely Person, about Fifty, all in Rags, but with a Mien that shewed him to be of a good House, cryed out, Monsieur, pour l'amour de Dieu, &c. Sir, for the Love of God, give something to the Marquis de Sourdis: Mr. Prior, half asleep, roused himself up at the Name of Marquis, called the poor Gentleman to him, and observing something in his Behaviour like a Man of Quality, very generously threw him a Pistole. As the Coach went on, Monsieur Prior asked me, with much surprize, Whether I thought it possible that unhappy Creature could be * un véritable Marquis? For if it were so, surely the Miseries of our Country must be much greater than even our very Enemies could hope or believe. I made bold to tell him, That I thought we could not well judge from Particulars to Generals, and that I was sure there were great numbers of Marquises in France who had ten thousand Livres a Year. I tell you this Passage, to let you see, that the wisest Men have some Prejudices of their Country about them! We got to Calais on Wednesday the 28th in the Evening, and the next Morning (the 29th) I took my leave of Monsieur Prior, who thanking me in the civilest manner in the World, for the Service I had done him, very nobly made me a Present of Twenty Pistoles, and so we parted. He put to Sea with a fair Wind, and I suppose, in a few Hours landed in England.

---

* A real Marquis.

THIS, Sir, is the utmost I am able to inform you about Monsieur Prior's Journey and Negotiation: Time alone will let us know the Events of it, which are yet in the Dark.

I am,
Sir,
Your most obedient and most bumble Servant,
Du Baudrier.

Postscript by the Translator.

THE Author of this Tract having left his Master on Ship-board at Calais, had, it seems, no further Intelligence when he Published it: Neither am I able to supply it, but by what passes in Common Report; which being in every Body's Mouth, but with no Certainty, I think it needless to repeat.

F I N I S

---

---

APPENDIX A

---

---

A LETTER
TO THE EXAMINER.

---

---

A LETTER
TO THE EXAMINER.

SIR,

WHEN I read the Introduction to your Paper, it was great Satisfaction to me to find, that some Body had undertaken to furnish Mankind, with a Weekly Antidote to that Weekly Poison, which by the President and Inferior Members of a Factional Cabal, is so profusely scatter'd thro' the Nation.

You have sufficiently expos'd the Letter which you chose to begin your Examinations with. How little of that Probability, which ought to be carried thro' the whole Thread of a well invented Fable, appears in it! How little Regard is paid to that Justness and Propriety of Character, without which, Compositions of this Kind are as Monstrous, as that Government must be, where Submission is made the Duty of the Prince, and Dominion the Prerogative of the Subject?

BUT such is the singular Modesty of that Faction, which the Ministers of the Crown have, with so much Advantage to Themselves, nurs'd up, in Opposition to the Crown; that you must expect to have the same Arguments still pursu'd. The Observator, the Review, the Censor of Great Britain, who resembles the Famous Censor of Rome in nothing, but espousing the Cause of the Vanquish'd, with the Crowd of Hireling Scribblers, will hope, by a few False Colours, and a great many Impudent Assertions, at last to perswade the People, that the General, the quondam Treasurer, and the Junto, are the only Objects of the Confidence of the Allies, and of the Fears of the Enemies: For the QUEEN, and the Whole Body of the British Nation—Nos numeros sumus.

SURELY therefore, the Argument which you have undertaken, should be carried further. Allow that the French have recover'd Heart, that they rise in their Demands, that the Conferences at Gertruydenberg were broke off by them, whilst our Plenipotentiaries did all that possibly could be done to obtain a Safe and Honourable Peace; Allow, I say, all this; not because it is True, for the contrary shall one Time or other be made out to the World, when the True State of our present Condition will be set in a clearer Light; yet that Odiuム which the Ministers and their Faction, endeavour to throw on the QUEEN, and on those who have appear'd at her Call, and in Her Defence, will with more Justice be laid at their own Door.

PAINT, Sir, with that Force which you are Master of, the present State of the War Abroad, and expose to Publick View, those Principles, upon which, of late, it has been carried on, so different from those, upon which it was Originally enter'd into. Collect some few of the Indignities which have been this Year offer'd to Her MAJESTY, and of those Unnatural Struggles, which have betray'd the Weakness of a shatter'd Constitution: And when this is done, Dolben shall blush in his Grave among the Dead, Walpole among the Living, and even Volpone shall feel some Remorse.

FORGIVE me, Sir, if in that Warmth which these Reflections occasion, I anticipate in some measure the Subject, and encroach on the Province, which belongs to you.

To restore the Spanish Monarchy to the House of Austria, who by their own Supiness, and by the Perfidy of the French, had lost it; and to regain a Barrier for Holland which lay naked and open to the Insults of France; were the Wise and Generous Motives, which engag'd Britain in the present War. We engag'd as Confederates, but we have been made to proceed as Principals: Principals in expence of Blood and of Treasure, whilst hardly a Second Place in Respect and Dignity is allow'd to us.

IN the Year 1706, the last of these two Motives was effectually answer'd by the Reduction of the Netherlands; or might have been so, by the Concessions, which 'tis Notorious that the Enemy offer'd. But the first Motive remain'd still in its full Force; and we were told, That tho' the Barrier of Holland was Secur'd, the Trade of Britain, and the Ballance of Power in Europe, would be still Precarious. Spain therefore was to be conquer'd, before we laid down our Arms, and we were made to expect, that the whole Attention of our Ministers would be apply'd to that Part of the War. Like Men of resign'd Understandings, we acquiesc'd, and flatter'd our selves, That since Holland had been secur'd in the First Place, Britain would be taken care of in the Second. But alas! these Expectations, like many others, have fail'd us.

FROM that Point of Time to this Hour, France has continu'd like a great Town Invested indeed on every Part, but Attack'd only in one. In Spain, in Savoy, on the Rhine, Enough and, but just Enough has been done, to serve as a Pretence for Estimates, and Demands of Supplies: But nothing Decisive, nothing which had the Appearance of Earnest, has been so much as Attempted; except that Wise Expedition to Thouzon, which we suffer'd to be Defeated, before it began. The whole Stress of the War has been wantonly laid, where France is best able to keep us at Bay; as if we Fought only to make Ostentation of our Valour, and of our Riches. Towns have been Taken, and Battles have been Won; the Mob has huzza'd round Bonfires; the Stentor of the Chappel has strain'd his Throat in the Gallery, and the Stentor of Sarum has deafen'd his Audience from the Pulpit. In the mean while, the French King has withdrawn his Troops from Spain, and has put it out of his Power to restore that Monarchy to us, was he reduced low enough really to desire to do it. The Duke of Anjou has had leisure to take off those whom he Suspected, to confirm his Friends, to regulate his Revenues, to encrease and form his Troops, and above all, to rouze that Spirit in the Spanish Nation, which a Succession of Lazy and Indolent Princes had lull'd asleep.

FROM hence it appears probable enough, That if the War continue much longer on the present Foot; instead of regaining Spain, we shall find the Duke of Anjou in a Condition to pay the Debt of Gratitude, and Support the Grandfather in his declining Years, by whose Arms, in the Days of his Infancy, he was upheld. The Dutch will have a larger and a better Country than their Own, at the Expence of Britain, conquer'd for them, by those Ministers, who Once thought it Impolitick to Consent, that even Ostend should be made a Part of their Barrier. The Emperor has already Bavaria, the Dutchy of Mantua, the State of Milan, and the Kingdom of Naples, Sicily, and some other Places dependent on these, may be added to his Portion; and by the little Care he now takes to Support King Charles, we may easily judge how Great his Concern will be, if that Prince should be deprived of all the rest.

Britain may expect to remain exhausted of Men and Money, to see her Trade divided amongst her Neighbours, her Revenues anticipated even to future Generations, and to have this only Glory left Her, that She has proved a Farm to the Bank, a Province to Holland, and a Jest to the whole World.

If the Facts I have mentioned are true, and the Consequences I have drawn from them, are naturally deducible from such Causes, may not the King of France reasonably Hope, tho' Holland should be aggrandiz'd, that Britain will be in proportion weakened? May he not hope, in exchange for a few Towns, which he either Bought or Stole, in former Wars, to Secure the Spanish Monarchy to the House of Bourbon for ever, by happily concluding this?

LET us now survey the present State of our Domestick Affairs, and Examin whether from the Conduct of the Ministry, and of the Factious Whigs, the French King has not good Grounds to expect to see us in Confusion, and by consequence the great Band of the Confederacy dissolved.

DOMESTICK Occurrences, the more they are Examined, the greater Weight will they add to the same Argument.

You have, in your Second Paper, pointed out some few of those innumerable Obligations, which the Whigs have laid on the French King. Whenever you think fit to go to the bottom of the Subject, I make no doubt but it will evidently appear, that Lewis XIV. has Reason enough to hope for Success from the Measures taken by the Ministers, and their Faction at Home, as I have already shewn, that he has from the Conduct of the War Abroad.

NOTWITHSTANDING all the Pains which have been taken to lessen her Character in the World, by the Wits of the Kit-Kat, and the Sages of the Collar; Mankind remains convinc'd, that a QUEEN possess'd of all the Vertues requisite to bless a Nation, or to make a private Family Happy, sits on the Throne.

By an excess of Goodness She delighted to raise some of Her Servants to the highest Degrees of Riches, of Power, and of Honour; and in this only Instance can be said to have Griev'd any of Her Subjects.

THE Rule which She had prescribed to these Persons, as the Measure of their Conduct, was soon departed from. But so unable were they, to associate with Men of Honest Principles than themselves, that the Sovereign Authority was Parcell'd out among a Faction, and made the Purchase of Indemnity for an Offending Minister. Instead of the Mild Influences of a Gracious QUEEN Governing by Law, we soon felt the Miserable Consequences of Subjection to the Will of an Arbitrary Junto, and to the Caprice of an Insolent Woman.

UNHAPPY Nation, which expecting to be Govern'd by the Best, fell under the Tyranny of the Worst of her Sex! But now, Thanks be to God, that Fury, who broke Loose to execute the Vengeance of Heaven on a Sinful People is restrain'd, and the Royal Hand is already reach'd out to Chain up the Plague.

Invisum numen terras calumq; levabit.

ONE would expect, that on the First Appearance of the QUEEN's Displeasure, these little Tyrants should have had recourse to Submission, and to Resignation. But they believ'd the whole Nation as Debauch'd and Corrupted, as those Profigate Wretches, who were in their Confidence; they imagin'd, that under the Name of their Prince, they should be able to Govern against Her declar'd Intention; and having Usurp'd the Royal Seat, resolved to venture Overturning the Chariot of Government, rather than to lose their Place in it. They set their Mistress at open Defiance, neither the Ties of Gratitude, nor the Bands of Allegiance, were any Restraint to them.

THEIR First Attempt was to take that Privilege from Her, which the Meanest of Her Subjects enjoy, and Slavery was to pursue Her even into Her Bed-Chamber.

HERE the Nation in general took the Alarm; a Spirit of Loyalty began to rise, which the Faction foresaw would no longer bear to have the meanest Submission shewn to the Ministers, whilst Common Decency was hardly used towards the Throne. The Conspirators resolv'd therefore to precipitate their Measures, and a Sermon was made the Pretence of their Clamour. Those who prove themselves Friends to This Government by avowing Principles inconsistent with any, presum'd Daily to Try the Title of the QUEEN, and to Limit the Allegiance of the Subject. The Party-Agents of every Rank were employ'd to declaim in Publick Places, and we had the Mortification to see Cabals of Upstarts, Sit in Judgment on the Right and Authority of the Crown, who, had it not been for the Profusion of Royal Favour, could have had no Pretence to be Common Tryers in any Cause.

By long insipid Harangues and fulsome Panegyrick, the Merits of the Ministers were exalted: The whole Success of the Administration, both at Home and Abroad, was singly attributed to them; and lest the QUEEN should think fit to declare them Dangerous, she was by necessary Consequence from the Positions laid down, declared Her self to be Useless.

THIS Attempt had likewise an Effect, contrary to what the Projectors of it expected. The Ferment, instead of abating, increased; the Bulk of the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Commonalty of Britain declared themselves Loudly in the Cause of their Prince; and those Disorders which the Faction had rais'd for their Security, threaten'd their Destruction.

NOT Daunted yet, they resolve to Try a new Expedient, and the Interest of Europe is to be represented as inseparable from that of the Ministers.

—Haud dubitant equidem implorare quod usquam est;
Flectere si nequeunt superos, Arberonta movebunt.

THE Members of the Bank, the Dutch, and the Court of Vienna, are call'd in as Confederates to the Ministry, and such an Indignity is offer'd to the Crown, as no Man, who has the Honour of his Country at Heart, can with Patience hear.

WHAT a Weakness in our Constitution, what a Sickness at Heart do these Symptoms, which appear too openly, discover?

THESE are Signs which shew a Government to be near its Dissolution; These are Things which justly give Encouragement to an Enemy. And if you would go to the Root of our Distemper, these are the Topicks you must insist upon, as the real Causes which have prolong'd the War, distracted the Nation, and given France Spirit enough at last to break off the Peace.

AND these are the Things, Sir, that deserve to pass under your Pen, that the Nation may be truly inform'd from what Springs our own Grievances, and the Hopes of our Enemies, have risen.

---

---

APPENDIX B

---

---

A Continuation of

A SHORT CHARACTER OF THOMAS
EARL OF WHARTON

---

---

A RELATION of several facts, exactly as they were transmitted to me from Ireland, about three Months ago, and at several Times from a Person of Quality and Employment there.

THE Earl of Rockfort's Regiment of Dragoons was embarked for her Majesty's Service abroad, on the 27th of August, 1709, and left their Horses behind them, which were subsisted in Order to mount another Regiment to fill up their Room; as the Horses of Lieutenant-General *Horw*y's Regiment had formerly mounted a Regiment raised, and still commanded by the Duke of Ormond; on which Occasion the Duke had her Majesty's Orders only for as much Money as would supply the Charge of the Horses 'till the Regiment was raised, which was soon after, and then it was put on the Establishment as other Regiments. But, that which was to supply the Earl of Rockfort's had not a Commission granted until the 29th of April, 1710, and all the Pay from the 27th of August to that Time (being above 5,700*l.*) was taken, under Pretence of keeping the Horses, buying new ones in the Room of such as should be wanting or unserviceable, and for provideing Accoutrements for the Men and Horses. As for the last Use, those are always produced out of the Funds for providing Cloathing, and the Duke of Ormond did so: As for Horses wanting, they are very few, and the Captains have Orders to provide them another Way; the keeping the Horses did not amount to 700*l.* by the Accounts laid before the Committee of Parliament: So there was at least 5000*l.* charged to the Nation, more than the real Charge could amount to.

Mrs. Lloyd, at first coming over, expected the Benefit of the Box-money; and accordingly talked of selling it for about 200*l.* but at last was told she must expect but Part of it, and that the Grooms of the Chamber, and other Servants, would deserve a Consideration for their Attendance; accordingly his Excellency had it brought to him every Night; and, to make it worth his receiving, my Lady gave great Encouragement to Play; so that by a moderate Computation, it amounted to near 1,000*l.* of which a small Share was given to the Grooms of the Chamber, and the rest made a Perquisite to his Excellency. For Mrs. Lloyd having an Husband, and a Bishoprick promised her, the other Pretensions were cut off.

He met Lieutenant General Langston in the Court of Requests, and presented a Gentleman to him, saying, ‘This is a particular Friend of mine; he tells me he is a Lieutenant in your Regiment; I must desire you will take the first Opportunity to give him a Troop, and you will oblige me mightily.’ The Lieutenant-General answered, he had served very well, and had very good Pretensions to a Troop, and that he would give him the first ‘that fell.’ With this the Gentleman was mighty well satisfied, returned Thanks and withdrew. Upon which his Excellency said immediately, ‘I was forced to speak for him, as a great many of his Friends have Votes at Elections; but, d—n him, he is a Rogue, therefore take no Care for him.’

He brought one May to the Duke of Ormond, and recommended him as a very honest Gentleman, and desired his Grace would provide for him; which his Grace promised. So May withdrew. As soon as he was gone, his Lordship immediately said to the Duke; ‘That Fellow is the greatest Rogue in Christendom.’

COLONEL Coward having received Pay, for some Time, in two or three Regiments, as Captain, but never done any other Service to the Crown than eating and drinking in the Expedition to Cadiz under the Duke of Ormond, finding he had not Pretensions enough to rise, after he had sold the last Employment he had, applied to his Excellency, who represented him in such a Light, that he got above 900*l.* as an Arrear of Half-pay, which he had no Title to, and a Pension of 10*s.* per Day; but he reckoning this as much too little for his Wants, as every Body else did too much for his Pretensions, gave in a second Petition to the Queen for a further Addition of 10*s.* a Day; which being referred to his Excellency, he gave him a favourable Report, by Means whereof, it is hoped, his Merit will be still farther rewarded. He turned out the poor Gate-keeper of Chapel-izod Gate, although he and his Wife were each above sixty Years old, without assigning any Cause, and they are now starving.

As for the Business of the Arsenal, it was the Product of Chance, and never so much as thought of by the Persons who of late have given so many good Reasons for the building it; until upon enquiring into the Funds, they were found to hold out so well, that there was a Necessity of destroying sixty or seventy thousand Pounds, otherwise his Excellency, for that Time, could hardly have had the Credit of taxing the Kingdom: Upon this Occasion, many Projects were proposed, all which at last gave Way to the Proposal of a worthy Person who had often persuaded the Nation to do itself a great Deal of Harm, by attempting to do itself a little Good, which was, that forty thousand Arms should be provided for the Militia, and Ammunition in Proportion, to be kept in four Arsenals to be built for that Purpose: This was accordingly put into the Heads of a Bill, and then this worthy Patriot, with his usual Sincerity, declared he would not consent to the giving of Money for any other Use; as every Body thought by the Words he spoke, although afterwards he shewed them, that his Meaning was not to [be] known by the vulgar Acceptation of Words; for he not only gave his Consent to the Bill, but used all the Art and Industry he was Master of to have it pass; although the Money was applied in it, to the building one Arsenal only, and Ammunition and other Stores proportionable, without one Word of the Militia. So the Arsenal was conceived, and afterwards formed in a proper Manner; but when it came to be brought forth, his Excellency took it out of the Hands that had formed it as far as he could, and contrary to all Precedents, put it out of the Care of the Ordnance-Board, who were properly to have taken Care of the Receipt and Payment of the Money, without any further Charge to the Public, and appointed his second Secretary, Mr. Denton, to be Paymaster, whose Salary was a Charge of above five hundred Pounds in the whole: Then, thinking this was too small a Charge to put the Public to for Nothing, he made an Establishment for that Work, consisting of one Superintendant at three Pounds per Week, eight Overseers at seven Pounds four Shillings a Week, and sixteen Assistants at seven Pounds four Shillings a Week, making in all seventeen Pounds eight Shillings a Week: And these were, for the greater Part, Persons who had no Knowledge of such Business, and their Honesty was equal to their Knowledge, as it hath since appeared by the notorious Cheats and Neglects that have been made out against them; insomuch, that the Work that they have overseen, which, with their Salaries hath cost near three thousand Pounds, might have been done for less than eighteen hundred Pounds, if it had been agreed for by the Yard, which is the usual Method, and was so proposed in the Estimate. And, this is all a Certainty, because all that hath been done, is only removing Earth, which hath been exactly computed by the Yard, and might have been so agreed for.

Philip Savage, Esq; as Chancellor of the Exchequer, demanded Fees of the Commissioners of the Revenue for sealing Writs in the Queen's Business, and shewed them for it some Precedents; but they, not being well satisfied with them, wrote to Mr. South, one of the Commissioners, then in London, to enquire the Practice there. He sent them Word, upon Enquiry, that Fees were paid there upon the like Cases; so they adjudged it for him, and constantly paid him Fees. If therefore there was a Fault, it must lie at their Door, for he never offered to stop the Business; yet, his Excellency knew so well how to chuse an Attorney and Sollicitor-General, that when the Case was referred to them, they gave it against the Chancellor, and said, he had forfeited his Place by it, and ought to refund the Money, being about two hundred Pounds per Annum; but never found any Fault in the Commissioners, who adjudged the Case for him, and might have refused him the Money, if they had thought fit.

CAPTAIN Robert Fitzgerald, Father to the present Earl of Kildare, had a Grant from King Charles the Second, of the Office of Comptroller of the Musters, during the Lives of Captain Charles Brabazon, now Earl of Meath, and George Fitzgerald, elder Brother to the present Earl of Kildare; which the said Robert Fitzgerald enjoyed with a Salary of three hundred Pounds per Annum; and, after his Death, his Son George enjoyed it; until my Lord Galway did by Threats, compel him to surrender the said Patent for a Pension of two hundred Pounds per Annum, which he enjoyed during his Life. Some Time ago the present Earl of Kildare, as Heir to his Father and Brother, looked upon himself to be injured by the Surrender of the said Patent, which should have come to him, the Earl of Meath being still living: Therefore in Order to right himself, did petition her Majesty; which Petition, as usual, was referred to the Earl of Wharton, then Lord Lieutenant, who being at that Time, in London, referred it, according to the common Method on such Occasions, to the Lord Chancellor, and Lieutenant-General Ingoldsby, the then Lords Justices of this Kingdom; who, for their Information, ordered the Attorney General to enquire, whether the Earl of Kildare had any legal Title to the said Patent, which he in a full Report said he had: And, they referred it to the Deputy Vice-Treasurer to enquire into the Nature of the Office, and to give them his Opinion, whether he thought it was useful or necessary for her Majesty's Service? He gave in his Report, and said, he thought it both useful and necessary; and, with more Honesty than Wit, gave the following Reasons: First, that the Muster-Master-General computed the Pay of the whole military List, which is above 200,000 £. per Annum, so having no Check on him, might commit Mistakes, to the great Prejudice of the Crown: And, Secondly, because he had himself found out several of those Mistakes, which a Comptroller might prevent. The Lords Justices approved of these Reasons, and so sent over their Report to my Lord Lieutenant, that they thought the Office useful and necessary: But Colonel P---r, the Muster-Master-General, being then in London, and having given my Lord Lieutenant, One thousand Pounds for his Consent to enjoy that Office, after he had got her Majesty's Orders for a Patent, thought a Check upon his Office would be a troublesome Spy upon him; so he pleaded the Merit of his thousand Pounds, and desired, in Consideration thereof, that his Excellency would free him from an Office that would put it out of his Power to wrong the Crown; and, to strengthen his Pretensions, put my Lady in Mind of what Money he had lost to her at Play; who immediately, out of a grateful Sense of Benefits received, railed as much against the Lords Justices Report, as ever she had done against the Tories; and my Lord Lieutenant, prompted by the same Virtue, made his Report, that there needed no Comptroller to that Office, because he comtrolled it himself; which (now having given his Word for it) he will, beyond all doubt, effectually do for the future: Although since it hath been plainly made appear, that for Want of some Controul on that Office, her Majesty hath been wronged of many hundred Pounds by the Roguery of a Clerk; and that during the Time of his Excellency's Government, of which there hath been but a small Part refunded, and the rest hath not been enquired after, lest he should make it plainly appear, that a Comptroller in that Office is absolutely necessary.

His Excellency being desirous, for a private Reason, to provide for the worthless Son of a worthless Father, who had lately sold his Company, and, of Course, all Pretensions to Preferment in the Army, took this Opportunity: A Captain in the oldest Regiment in the Kingdom, being worn out with Service, desired Leave to sell, which was granted him: And, accordingly, for a Consideration agreed upon, he gave a Resignation of his Company to a Person approved of by the Commander of the Regiment, who, at the same Time, applied to his Excellency for Leave for another Captain of his Regiment, who is an Engineer in her Majesty's Service in Spain, and absent by her Majesty's Licence: His Excellency hearing that, said they might give him a Company in Spain, for he would dispose of this here; and so, notwithstanding all the Commander of the Regiment could urge, he gave the Company, which was regularly surrendered, to his worthy Favourite; and the other Company, which was a disputable Title, to the Gentleman who had paid his Money for that which was surrendered. Talking one Morning as he was dressing (at least a dozen People present) of the Debates in Council, about the Affairs of Trim, he said, the Lord Chief Justice Dolben had laid down as Law, a Thing, for which a Man ought to have his Gown stripped off, and be whipped at the Cart's A—e; and, in less than a Quarter of an Hour, repeated the Expression again: Yet, some Days after, sent Dr. Lloyd to assure his Lordship he said no such Thing. Some Time after, while he was in England, he used his utmost Efforts with the Queen to turn him out, but could not: And when he came once again, he took an Opportunity (when the Judges were to wait on him) to say to them, particularly to Lord Chief Justice Dolben, that perhaps some officious Persons might spread Stories, that he had endeavoured to do some of them a Prejudice in England, which he assured them he never had; but, on the contrary, would always, without Distinction, shew his Regard according to Merit; which the Lord Chief Justice Dolben was pleased to approve of, by saying, that was very honourable, that he was very gracious, although he knew the contrary himself.

IN England he bid Mr. Deering assure all his Friends and Acquaintance here, that they and every body might depend on his Favour, as they behaved themselves; with which Mr. Deering was much pleased, and wrote over to his Friends accordingly; and, as soon as his Back was turned, he jeeringly said, 'D-mn 'me, how easily he is bit.' When the Duke of Ormond was in the Government, he gave to Mr. Anderson Saunders the Government of Wicklow Castle, which has no Salary, but a Perquisite of some Land worth about 12*l.* per Annum, which Mr. Saunders gave to the Free-School of the Town; but, his Excellency, not liking either the Person or the Use, without any Ceremony, or Reason given, superseded him, by giving a Commission for it to Jennings the Horse-courser, who lieth under several odious and scandalous Reflections, particularly of very narrowly escaping the Gallows for Coining. Some Time after his Excellency's landing the second Time, he sent for Mr. Saunders, among others, desiring their good Offices in the ensuing Session, and that Mr. Saunders would not take amiss his giving that Place to Jennings, for he assured him he did not know it belonged to him, which is highly probable, because Men of his Knowledge usually give away Things, without enquiring how they are in their Disposal. Mr. Saunders answered him, 'He was very glad to find what was done 'was not out of any particular Displeasure to him; because Mr. Whitshed had said at Wicklow, by Way of Apology for what his Excellency had done, that it was occasioned by Mr. Saunders 'having it; and seeing his Excellency had no ill Intention against 'him, was glad he could tell his Excellency it was not legally given 'away, for he had a Custodium for the Land out of the Court of 'Exchequer; so his Excellency's Commission could do him no 'Prejudice.'

LIEUTENANT General Eshlin had Pay on this Establishment

as Brigadier, until the Middle of October, 1708, when he was removed from it by his Excellency, because his Regiment went away at that Time, and Lieutenant General Gorges was put in his Room. Some Time after, Major General Rooke, considering the Reason why Echlin was removed, concluded, that Gorges could not come on, until some Time in February after, because his Regiment was also out of the Kingdom, until that Time, and therefore, he being the eldest General Officer, that had no Pay as such, was entitled to the Brigadier's Pay, from the Time Echlin was removed until Gorges was qualified to receive it; he having done the Duty. His Excellency, upon hearing the Reason, owned it to be a very good one, and told him, if the Money were not paid to Gorges he should have it, so bid him go see; which he did, and found it was: Then his Excellency told him he would refer his Case to a Court of General Officers to give their Opinion in it, which he said must needs be in his Favour; and, upon that Ground, he would find a Way to do him Right; yet when the General Officers sat, he sent for several of them, and made them give the Case against Rooke.

WHEN the Prosecution against the Dissenting Ministers in Drogheda was depending, one Stevens, a Lawyer in this Town of Dublin, sent his Excellency, then in London, a Petition, in the Name of the said Dissenting Minister, in Behalf of himself and others, who lay under any such Prosecution; and in about a Fortnight's Time, his Excellency sent over a Letter, to the then Lords Justices, to give the Attorney and Sollicitor General, Orders, to enter a Noli prosequi to all such Suits; which was done accordingly, although he never so much as enquired into the Merit of the Cause, or referred the Petition to any Body, which is a Justice done to all Men, let the Case be never so light. He said, he had her Majesty's Orders for it, but they did not appear under her Hand; and it is generally affirmed he never had any.

THAT his Excellency can descend to small Gains, take this Instance: There were 850*l.* ordered by her Majesty to buy new Liveries for the State Trumpets, Messengers, &c. but with great Industry he got them made cheaper by 200*l.* which he saved out of that Sum; and, it is reported, that his Steward got a handsome Consideration beside, from the Undertaker.

THE Agent to his Regiment, being so also to others, bought a Lieutenant's Commission in a Regiment of Foot, for which he never was to do any Duty, which Service pleased his Excellency so well, that he gave him Leave to buy a Company, and would have had him keep both; but before his Pleasure was known, the former was disposed of.

THE Lord Lieutenant hath no Power to remove or put in a Solicitor General without the Queen's Letter, it being one of those Employments excepted out of his Commission; yet, because Sir Richard Levinge disengaged him, by voting according to his Opinion, he removed him, and put in Mr. Forster*, although he had no Queen's Letter for so doing, only a Letter from Mr. Secretary Boyle that her Majesty designed to remove him.

THE Privy-Council in Ireland have a great Share of the Administration, all Things being carried by the Consent of the Majority, and they sign all Orders and Proclamations there, as well as the Chief Governor. But, his Excellency disliked so great Share of Power in any but himself: And when Matters were debated in Council, otherwise than he approved, he would stop them, and say, 'Come, my Lords, I see how your Opinions are, 'and therefore I will not take your Votes,' and so would put an End to the Dispute.

ONE of his chief Favourites was a scandalous Clergyman, a constant Companion of his Pleasures, who appeared publickly with his Excellency, but never in his Habit, and who was a Hearer and Sharer of all the lewd and blasphemous Discourses of his Excellency and his Cabal. His Excellency presented this worthy Divine to one of the Bishops, with the following Recommendation: 'My Lord, M— is a very honest Fellow, and 'hath no Fault but that he is a little too immoral.' He made this Man Chaplain to his Regiment, although he had been so infamous, that a Bishop in England refused to admit him to a Living he had been presented to, until the Patron forced him to it by Law.

His Excellency recommended the Earl of Inchiquin to be one of the Lords Justices in his Absence, and was much mortified, when he found Lieutenant General Ingoldsby appointed, without any Regard to his Recommendation; particularly, because the usual Salary of a Lord Justice, in the Lord Lieutenant's Absence, is 100*l.* per Month, and he had bargained with the Earl for 40*l.*

---

* Afterwards Recorder of the City of Dublin, and Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

I WILL send you, in a Pacquet or two, some Particulars of his Excellency's Usage of the Convocation, of his infamous Intrigues with Mrs. Coningsby, an Account of his arbitrary Proceedings about the Election of a Magistrate in Trim, his barbarous Injustice to Dean Jephson and poor Will Crow; his deciding a Case at Hazard to get my Lady twenty Guineas, but in so scandalous and unfair a Manner, that the arrantest Sharper would be ashamed of; the common Custom of playing on Sunday in my Lady's Closet; the Partie Quarrel between her Ladyship and Mrs. Lloyd and two young Fellows dining privately and frequently at Clontarf, where they used to go in a Hackney Coach; and his Excellency's making no Scruple of dining in a Hedge Tavern whenever he was invited; with some other Passages, which, I hope you will put into some Method, and correct the Style, and publish as speedy as you can.

NOTE, Mr. * Savage, besides the Persecution about his Fees, was turned out of the Council for giving his Vote in Parliament in a Case where his Excellency's own Friends were of the same Opinion, until they were wheedled out of it by his Excellency. The Particulars before mentioned I have not yet received; whenever they come, I shall publish them in a second Part.

---

* Tbs R<sup>t</sup>. Hon. Philip Savage, Esq;

---

---

APPENDIX C

---

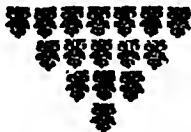

---

A LETTER

To the Seven Lords of the COMMITTEE appointed to Examine GREGG

A LETTER
TO THE
SEVEN LORDS
OF THE COMMITTEE, Appointed to Examine GREGG.

LONDON
Printed, for J. BAKER at the Black-Boy in Paternoster-Row, 1711.
( Price 3 d. )

---

---

A LETTER

*To the Seven Lords of the COMMITTEE
appointed to Examine GREGG.*

YOUR Lordships have, for these Fifteen or Sixteen Months last past, been treated by the Publick Writers, such as say they are allowed, approved, and encouraged, by our Great Folks, as Rogues, and Rascalls, Cheats, and Villains, Enemies of the Nation, Affronters of the Queen, Subverters of the Constitution, and such as have been long endeavouring to destroy both Church and State. Thus you have been treated in common with the present General, the late Lord Chancellor, the late Lord Treasurer, the late Secretaries of State, and almost all that had any thing to do in what is call'd the late Ministry. But it is but since the 8th. of March last past, that your Lordships in particular, have been compared to Murtherers and Assassines; and exposed to all the Kingdom, as Men that would, by your Menaces, and Promises, and Bribes, have Suborned the Criminal Gregg, to confess Mr. H. (now E. of O.) guilty of Corresponding with Her Majesty's Enemies, in order to the taking away his Life.

The Examiner, who would have us believe he is employ'd to Write for the Government, and only against such as are Enemies to the Q. and State, this same Examiner, in Paper 33, speaking of Guiscard's Villainous attempt upon Mr. H. makes the following Reflections on it, 'Had such an Accident happen'd under the 'late Ministry, and to so considerable a Member of it, as Mr. H. 'Commissioners would have been sent, to promise the Criminal his Life, provided they might have liberty to direct and dictate his 'Confession. And a Black List would have been Printed of all those who had been ever seen in the Murtherers Company. But the present Men in Power hate and despise all such detestable 'Arts, which they might now turn upon their Adversaries, with much more Plausibility, than ever These (i.e. your Seven 'Lordships) did their Honourable Negotiations with Gregg.

'And here it may be worth observing, how unanimous a Con'currence there is betwixt some Persons once in great Power and 'a French Papist, both agreeing in the great end of taking away 'Mr. H.'s Life, tho' differing in their Methods. The First (i.e. your 'Lordships) proceeding by Subornation; the other (i.e. Guiscard) by 'Violence: Wherein Guiscard seems to have the advantage, as 'aiming no further than his Life; while the others (i.e. your 'Lordships) design'd to destroy at once, both that and his Repu'tation. The Malice of Both (i.e. of Guiscard and your Lordships) 'against this Gentleman, seems to have risen from the same 'Cause, i.e. His discovering Designs against the Government. It was Mr. H. who detected the Treasonable Correspondence of 'Gregg, and secured him betimes, when a certain Great Man who shall be nameless, had, out of the Depth of his Politicks, sent him 'a caution to make his escape; which would certainly have fix'd 'the appearance of Guilt upon Mr. H. But when that was pre'vented, they (i.e. your Lordships the Commissioners) would have 'enticed the Condemned Criminal, with the promise of a Pardon, 'to Writs and Sign an Accusation against the Secretary, i.e. Mr. H.

What do your Lordships think of this Passage? does not this State Writer charge you with intending to take away the Secretary's Life, by the basest of Subornations? It may be, your Lordships think he intended no such Charge, because, when he has said that your Lordships did equally concur with Guiscard to take away Mr. H.'s Life, he afterwards proves, beyond all contradiction, from Guiscard's own Confession, 'That his chief design was 'not against Mr. H. but against Mr. Secretary St. John; and that 'Mr. H. was only Stabbed because he had changed Chairs with 'the Secretary, for more convenience of examining the Criminal.

Now, if your Lordships did no more design to take away Mr. H.'s Life, than Guiscard did, your Lordships may think the Examiner has acquitted you, because he has acquitted Guiscard of any such Design, tho' not of the Fact. But 'tis plain, my Lords, this great Defender of the Government intended seriously to charge you all, with Subornation, in order to proceed to Murther; and if he has acquitted you, it was by mere Mistake and Blunder: It was not in his Heart, to do you any such Service, by his account of Guisard: It was what he thought not of: He has Repented of that Passage: He cannot blot it out, but denies the Consequence: And your Lordships shall see he does, for in the next Paper 34, he says, He means not to be answerable for what Guiscard said: i.e. He will not be tied to believe what is the natural and unavoidable Consequence of Guisard's Confession: It is not, belike, to his purpose: Guisard had told, what should not have been told again, at least so soon: But the Examiner thought it was then a fine Story, and out it came, and in my Opinion had like to have spoil'd all, for Wise Men immediately drew Inferences from it, that, one would have thought, should have quite prevented the use that was afterwards made of that sore blow; but, as it happened, those Inferences did no great harm; and the World went on, just as if no such Confession had been made. But because it had, for Two or Three Days, some seeming Consequence, the Examiner deserts it quite, and will not be answerable for it, but sticks to somewhat he is sure of, and which no Body will presume to meddle with; and boldly begins again: 'They 'take, says he, abundance of Pains to clear Guisard from a 'design against Mr. H.'s Life, (but the Examiner did it easily) but 'offer not one Argument to clear their other Friends (your Lordships certainly) who in the Business of Gregg, were equally 'guilty of the same design, against the same Person.'

Your Lordships are now again, as very Murtherers by Subornation as you were in his first Paper 33. He has, he thinks, Authority now, to deal more freely with you, than before; and your Lordships shall find it. Because the Parliament has told the Queen, that 'They had reason to believe that Mr. H.'s Fidelity to Her Ma. and Zeal for Her Service, had drawn upon Him, the Hatred of all the Abettors of Popery and Faction.' Therefore the Examiner is now sure, that your Lordships did as certainly intend to take away Mr. H.'s Life, by Subornation, as the French Papist did by a Penknife. The Examiner knows You are as much intended by Faction, as Guisard was by Popery. But this is a consequence of the Examiner's own making; the Parliament made it not. The P—— indeed says, this Stabb was an Instance of inveterate Malice. Monsieur de Guiscard said it was an effect of sudden Despair, and that his Design was to have kill'd Mr. St. John. But whose word shall be taken in such a matter as this? Shall we believe a Villain (and in his own Case too) against the P—— who certainly knew what he intended, and knew moreover that he had long intended it (let him say what he would) because it was an Instance of Inveterate Malice? Is it so new a thing, for Frenchmen, and for Papists, to dye with Lies in their Mouths, even when it serves no manner of Purpose, that they can have in View? But cannot these things be said by those who certainly ought to know what 'tis they say, without concluding, that therefore your Lordships did endeavour to suborn another Wretch to take away that important Life? If, press'd by such unanswerable Authority, we must at length, believe that Guisard's malice was inveterate, and that He made that Villainous Attempt to reach the Heart of a Privy Councillor, only because it was so full of Fidelity to the Q. and of Zeal against Popery and Faction. Yet how should we be made to believe, from thence, that Seven great Lords intended, heretofore, to Murther the same great Person, but by ways much more detestable and villainous? And yet this is the Examiners Consequence; this is the Conclusion of a Man, that, every day, tells us he Writes in Defence of the Government, and would make us believe he is set on Work by great People. He says in Paper 34. Your Tongues were very Swords, and your Penknives Axes. This, he thinks, is a very elegant Expression; but the English of it is, that your Lordships would by Subornation have taken away the Life of Mr. H. And least his Reader should (for want of knowing him) imagine it impossible for any Man that had any Sense of Justice, or Honour, to charge Seven Peers, with an attempt of such a horrid nature, He says it openly and in so many Words, in Paper 35. only with this Difference, that He now joyns others with your Lordships, of whose Company you have not been heretofore ashamed. 'I said, They had formerly a Design against Mr. H.'s. Life: If They were now in Power, would they not immediately cut off his Head, and thank Me, for justifying the Sincerity of their Intentions?' What sort of Consequence is this? I should now be extreamly glad to have the Examiner severely punish'd, for abusing the greatest Men of the Kingdom; and I should thank the Justice of the Nation, for doing what so well became them: And yet I never had one evil thought against the Examiner, before, much less design'd him any Mischief. And yet the Examiner affirms, as much as if he knew it true, that, because your Lordships would, if you were now in Power, immediately cut off Mr. H.'s Head, therefore you had heretofore a Design to destroy him, by Subversion. How the Examiner should know your Lordships Hearts, I, who hardly know my own, cannot imagine. "Tis very well that Peoples Heads are to stand upon their Shoulders as long as the Law will let them; if it depended upon any thing besides, it may be, your Lordships seven Heads might be as soon cut off, as that one Gentleman, were you in Power. May the Head, that has done the Kingdom the greatest Mischief, fall first, let it be whose it will!

After this abandon'd Wretch has screen'd himself under the Protection of the Address of P——, and made that Great Body say what he was pleased they should. that he might say it after them, 'tis wonderful to find him seeking for farther Security, in the Example of a great Man indeed, but yet a single Man, who had said, that Mr. H. had been wonderfully Preserv'd from some unparallel'd Attempts. Now this great Critick of an Examiner, finding that Some was of the Plural Number, and that Guiscard's attempt was but One, immediately concludes from the Correct Style of the foresaid Orator, that this Plural Number must, in all probability, take in the business of Gregg: And thereupon He falls to compliment that eminent Person, upon the matter of Style, and Superiority of Spirit; but tells him, that, let him express himself, as loftily and finely as he would, yet he meant to say in plain English, that there was a Committee of Seven Lords, sent to a Condemn'd Criminal in Newgate, to bribe Him with a Pardon, on Condition he would swear High Treason, against His Master. 41. And there, your Lordships have the matter out, in his own Words. He says —He knows but of two unparallel'd Attempts against Mr. H. which are those of Gregg, and Guiscard: That of Guiscard, he bestows (and yet as little as he can) on Guiscard: That of Gregg, he Fathers upon Three Dukes, One Earl, One Viscount, and Two Barons. Is not that eminent Person much indebted to the Examiner, who, because he will not let him speak (as he thinks) improperly, will make him call your Lordships, Murtherers and Villains? I should have thought, a Gentleman of Honour and of Virtue, would have been better pleas'd, to have made a Solecism in Speech (had it indeed been such) than rais'd a Calumny; and to have written somewhat less correctly, than to mean Maliciously. But thus it is, the Examiner had said these things himself before, That your Lordships were Guilty of intended Murther, by Subornation, and fearing his Authority and Credit were not great enough to support this dreadful weight, He does, with his own Impudence, and with the Malice of a Devil, bring in Both Houses of P— to say and mean the same thing, and afterwards (upon another Occasion) this very Honourable Gentleman, to strengthen his security. Let the Examiner answer for his Usage of those Great Names, as well as he can, he seems, to me, to be distrustful of his Credit and his Safety, at the bottom: He who runs here, and there, and every where, for shelter, is far from thinking himself secure. This, My Lords, is the matter of Fact; thus are you handled by the Examiner, the Favourite-Writer of the Times, the Tory-Ladies Politician, the Guide and Oracle of the Inferior-Clergy, and great Defender of the New World.

But I am bound to do Him Right, bad as he is; There was an Author of equal Face, and equal Fame, and almost equal Esteem, with the Children of the New-Church, that started this great Slander, four Days at least, before the Examiner could get it into Print; I dare not say before it came into his Heart, but before his Periodical Day of Slandering came, to utter it. The Post-boy, March the 10th, after he had given an Account of Guisard's villainous attempt upon Mr. H. adds—It is said that Seven Great and Excellent Men, are to meet at a House near Charing-Cross; and that they will find Witnesses to prove, that, notwithstanding Mr. H. discover'd this Treason, as He did likewise that of Mr. Gregg, yet that He was an Accomplice of the Man, who would have Murder'd him.

And March the 17th, He says, His Intentions, in the foregoing Passage, were to expose the most Dishonourable and Scandalous Practices of Seven Men, in the business of Gregg. And a little lower, in the same Paper—to expose the blackest Conspiracy, that ever was form'd by Seven Men, or perhaps by any One Man in the whole World, against the Life of that Honourable and Innocent Gentleman.

The Examiner alone can tell us, if he will, whether he truly borrowed his Accusation from that Rascally Paper, or whether (by a natural Concurrence of the Mind in Villainy) he also invented it, as well as His Good Brother. But be that as it will, 'tis manifest, that the Examiner has improv'd it to the height, and only wants the Honesty of the other to set his Name to it, and at what Sign he Lodges; for I believe it is not his Modesty that hinders us from knowing who he is.

There is now also, My Lords, another Book, fresh in my Hands, whose Title is—Secret Transactions, &c. Printed in a better Letter, and on better Paper than is usual, and the whole Sheet is sold for a Penny, which, I am told, no Bookseller can well afford, at such a Rate, without the Assistance of some that bear Good Will to your Lordships, in order to spread the same Charge and Accusation. In this Book, your Lordships are gotten into the Hands of the Ordinary of Newgate, and of one Francis Hoffman, who may, for any thing I know, be Another Officer belonging to that House. And your Lordships shall see, how you are treated, by these two great Authors. Francis Hoffman tells the World, that the Ordinary did in a most solemn and ready Manner, tell him of so many endeavours to corrupt Gregg's Conscience not only with repeated Offers of Life, but of great Preferments and Advantages, that He felt as much uneasiness, least Gregg should betray his Master, as if it had been his own Case. And Page 6, the next words—That 'tis apparent from hence, that Some Persons (your Lordships certainly) Stabbed, as directly and villainously, at Mr. H.'s Life then, as Guiscard did since. This is the Language that Master Examiner hath taught Francis Hoffman, (whoever he is) to speak. But I would take leave to observe upon this Passage, that a Servant is said to betray his Master, tho' what he confesses of him should be true. How comes Hoffman, therefore, to be under such an uneasiness, least Gregg, should betray his Master, when he might, for ought he knew, confess what was exactly True of that his Master? Could any one alive, but Gregg, tell whether what he would say of his Master, should be true or false, till he knew what was said? An indifferent Person might as well have been uneasy, for fear Gregg should discover something of his Master, that would touch his Life, and yet might have been True. 'Tis certain he neither did, nor would confess any thing, but what did manifestly clear his Master; and his Master was accordingly untainted. This uneasiness therefore of Francis Hoffman, or of the Ordinary, seems to me, to be ill-timed, and has rather appear'd since the Advancement of Gregg's Master, than whilst he was under Examination, and his Master's Conduct only inquired into. These Poor Creatures would compliment the Great Man, with their Solicitous concern for his Safety, (but they tell him so now he is safe and great) and since that cannot be done thoroughly, without doing your Lordships the greatest Injury in your Honour and Good Name, that, it seems, is now to be ventured.

The Ordinary himself says, P. 8, that when Gregg had clear'd Mr. H. of knowing any thing of his Corresponding with France, He (i.e. the Ordinary) grew jealous of those People that frequently came to Him. And he says moreover, that to some of Mr. H.'s Friends, who came to Gregg, He (i.e. the Ordinary) express'd some dislike of Gregg's being so much disturb'd by Persons that resorted to him, at unseasonable Hours, when he should have been at Prayers; But he knew not Who those Persons were, that thus came to him. And again—As Gregg also told me, he was proffered his Life, and a great Reward if he would accuse his Master; so I must own to you, I was uneasy at his frequent Visiters, when I consider'd how they disturb'd his Mind, and how much they took up of his precious Moments.

The Ordinary, my Lords, leaves room for other People to tempt Gregg (if he indeed was tempted) to betray his Master, and does not lay it on your Lordships wholly, if at all. He talks of many Persons, and of frequent Visiters, that resorted to the Prisoner, and says He knew not who they were. Now, I believe, that tho' your Lordships may not know the Ordinary of Newgate, yet He may very probably know your Lordships, after a sight or two, at least; and it is not likely that you came in a Disguise, or Singly, or in the Dark. 'Tis likely enough that a Committee of Seven Great Peers would be as quickly known as any other People. He knew the Friends of Mr. H. it seems, because he made his complaints to them, of the frequent Resort of Visiters to Gregg. Now it is not very probable, that the Ordinary should complain of the frequent Visits made by the Lords of the Committee. One might therefore imagine, that if there were any Subornation in the Case, it should not necessarily follow, that your Lordships were the Suborners. And therefore if I had been the Examiner, I would not (for the mere sake of Reason and Justice) have charg'd your Lordships only, with Subornation and intended Murber, when other People might, as easily, be guilty of it. But nothing below the Greatest Quality can be abus'd by him. He has (because he is so great a Man with the new Governors) led Francis Hoffman to make the very same conclusion, notwithstanding all his good Correspondent the Ordinary has said. Who those Persons were (says Francis) that offer'd Gregg his Life, with great Preferments and Advantages (if he would but accuse his Master) may not uneasily be guessed at; for, most of the time he was lock'd up, NONE BUT PEOPLE OF NOTE were permitted to come near him, who made him strange Promises, and often repeated them. Here, I think, the matter is brought within a little compass. The Ordinary left the Subornation to abundance of People, who might share the Guilt, and whom, he says, he knew not. But Hoffman pins us down to Persons of Note only; and for fear we should not, after all this, know whom he means by People of Note, he has caused your Lordships' Names to be Printed at length, at the Conclusion of the Libel; only (to screen himself from the Vengeance of the Law) he has put over those your Names, the Title, I have presum'd to Address you by, viz. The Committee of Lords appointed to Examine Gregg—were the Duke of &c..

And now I Challenge all the Books in the New Lord's Library (because I hear it is the largest) to furnish us with an instance like this—Where Seven Great Peers, distinguish'd by their Birth, Estates, Honours, Offices, and great Abilities, as much as any Seven besides in all the Kingdom, have been, day after day, expos'd to the Rage of an irritated People, in Penny-Papers, as the most Villainous Suborners, Murberers, and Assassines, because they were appointed by the House of Lords, to Examine Gregg and see if they could bring him to discover, who (if any one) was privy to his Corresponding with the Queen's Enemies: And promised him, it may be, to obtain his Pardon, if he would make a full Discovery. I do not know that such a promise was made of Pardon, but I suppose it was, because no other Offer could, 'tis probable, prevail to the making a Discovery of that kind; and it is what is every Day done, by the Ministers of State, and must be done, if they will gain the Secrets they want to know:

And it is no more than was very lately done (and rightly done) to the Sieur de Guiscard himself; The D. of O——, and the Secretaries of State, and several Privy Councillors, went to him in the Prison, and Examin'd him, put several Questions to him, and tried, if it were possible, to bring him to confess who were his Accomplices, and promised him the Queen's Pardon, if he would make a full Discovery. Would any but an Examiner, a Post-boy, or such Licentious Writers, charge these Honourable Councillors with Suborning Guiscard, by Promises of Pardon, and Life, and Pension, to accuse the Innocent, and betray his Friends? Is this the turn that any one, but a Villain, would give to such an Inquiry, and Examination? Supposing Guiscard had been intimate with some Great Officer of State, and had been suspected to Communicate his most Secret Affairs to this Great Officer, had it been Subornation? had it been seeking the Life and Blood of this Great Officer, in these Great Lords of the Council, if they had narrowly examin'd this Affair, inquired with all Exactness, what he knew of this Great Officer, what Secrets he had imparted to him, and whether he were Privy to his Corresponding with the Banker Moreau, or any thing more Dangerous? The Injury (if any) had not been, in pressing Guiscard to say what he knew of this Great Officer, and in promising to obtain his Pardon, if he would discover all he knew; but it had been in Suspecting him if Innocent: And how far that may be done without any manner of Ill-will, Malice, or Mischievous Design, I leave to all the World to judge: But of this I am certain, that when once a Great Officer is suspected, there is no coming at him (ordinarily speaking) but by such Ways and Promises as these, of Pardon and Life, to such as are thought to be in his Interests and Secrets, and will, for such a Recompence, discover them. And therefore the Patience (I must say no more) of our New Governors, is hardly less to be wondered at, than the Insolence and Wickedness of these Audacious Wretches, in suffering the Peerage of England, and Seven such Noble Lords, to be treated like the most Flagitious Villains, for doing what Courts, and Ministers of State have always done, and always must do, if they will preserve the Crown and secure the People. But this, it seems, is the thing that is so much in Fashion! to Run down a Set of Men, for taking such Courses in their Ministration, as those who succeed them must take, or ten times worse! to make the Common People believe they have been beggar'd and undone, by such a management of Affairs, for some years past; when it is very well known, that those Affairs are still under the like Management, and must be so, because there is no better! This way of Representing Things and Persons, and rend'ring them Odious both to Prince and People, may serve a present turn, but it is certainly (as all things Wicked are) the falsest Policy that can be, not only because the Cheat is soon detected, but because it will as soon destroy those who use it, when the humour of Change comes on, as those against whom it is used. When a King, thro' the Multitudes of Complaints, Secret Teazings, and Importunate Clamors of a Rout of People (led by their Priests, and Spirited underhand by Crafty Emissaries) hath been brought to discard his old Officers, who had, till then, been accounted Able, Faithful, Diligent, and Dutiful, and by whose Service he had lived, Glorious Abroad, and Easie and Beloved at Home; but who have of late been Represented to Him, as Weak, False, Careless, and Insolent, such as have engag'd Him in Desperate Measures Abroad, and run Him at Home into Immense Debts, and caused Him to be ill thought of by his overburthened and abused Subjects: When this Prince comes, in time, to consider his Affairs, and finds things go much as they used to go, that his New Servants (tho' every day finding fault with the Old Ones) take the same Courses, go on in the Old Methods, and give him the same Counsel and Advice, on like Occasions, and when they find themselves in Straits, and under any new Exigencies (as such will be, in spight of all the Care and Caution in the World) they are forced to go out of the Common way, and do as well as they can, just as their Predecessors did: When the King finds this (as he will, in a year or two, if he make any Observations at all) He will consider, who they were that made those Complaints, that rais'd those Cries, that Cheated those poor Priests, that Spirited those Multitudes, that taught them what to say, what to Petition from Him, what to promise for themselves, and who they were that encouraged them to come, and hawked to introduce them; and that after all, He has only chang'd Hands, got new Faces about him, and is serv'd (it may be) with more obsequious Words, more humble Adorations, and a more seeming Resignation to his Will and Pleasure, than he was before; but that his Affairs Abroad are in no better Posture, that his Influence is no greater on his Neighbouring Princes and States, nor his People at Home eased of one Penny-Tax, or Publick Credit in better Health, or Trade increas'd, or his Subjects in better Humour. The Prince I say, will consider this, and tho' he will not think of calling for his Old Servants again, because He will not be thought to be Inconstant, or to have been misled, or over-reach'd, or because He will not bear the uneasiness which even the Looks of Wrongfully suspected Servants, tho' restor'd to Favour, give; and tho' He will much less think of discarding his new Choice, upon the finding his Mistakes, yet every Body will agree, that He is in the readiest Disposition to such a Change, that can be; and that he wants no handle or pretence to do it, on whatever Day of the Week he pleases to begin. The Example is set, The People are ever ready to be moved; the Priests are seldom wanting to become the Tools of Cunning Managers; and let but the Inclination of the Great Superior once be made to appear, the Revolution of Ministry follows naturally and easily.

I say therefore, that it is matter of Wonder to many People, to see such Representations of the late Management of Publick Affairs, so little Discountenanc'd by those who Manage them, at present. To see the Greatest Ministers of State we ever had (till now) treated by a Poor Paper-Pedlar, every Thursday, like the veriest Rascals in the Kingdom; and as oft besides, as any of his Scribbling Brethren please. This great Indignity, and Insolence, if common Honesty could suffer, yet common Prudence and good Policy should not. I could, if it were needful, bring a great many Instances, of this Licentious way of the Scum of Mankind's treating the greatest Peers in the Nation, but I have chosen to do it but in One, which tho' I have offered to those Lords that are more particularly concern'd, yet it will I hope be seriously considered by all others of that Quality, and by those especially who have it in their hands to repress such daring Insolence and Wickedness; least People should come, in time, to think they like it, and encourage it; than which a worser thing can scarcely be said of them. And yet it is so observable, that no body can easily overlook it, that these Hedge-Writers seldom speak a word against these Seven or any other Lords of the late Ministry, but they presently fall to Complimenting the New L. F—ite, and others in great Places, as tho' they wanted it; or shone more bright by the Comparison; or could receive additional esteem from the Applauses of such base Breath. Cannot the Successors be Excellent Men, unless the Predecessors be Villains? Cannot they who are in great Offices, be very Worthy of them, unless those who lately left them, be Represented the most Odious and Abominable of Mankind? Cannot the Q. change Ministers, but they must presently be such as neither God nor Man can endure? Do Noble Men fall from all Honour, Virtue, and Religion, because they are so unhappy as to fall from their Prince's Favour? These were not used to be the Consequences of such Placings and Displacings. But this it is, for poor unskilful Sycophants, to think of pleasing Great Men in Offices. They heap up all the vile, dis honourable, reproachful, wicked things, that they alone can think on, and then throw them on the Predecessors Heads of their New Patrons; least, otherwise, it should be wondred at how they should come to loose their Places, and their Patrons get into them. But neither are their Patrons Heads so weak, nor their Hearts so vain, as to receive with any satisfaction such Accounts, either of others or of themselves; they know them both, much better. When Men have long supported their Characters with Honour and Reputation, and the whole Kingdom has approved and applauded their good Services, and Providence has Crown'd them with astonishing Success, Years after Years, it is not the sudden turn of a giddy Multitude, made to believe and call them Villains and betrayers of their Country, that will make them truly such, with serious People: They may, for the present be abused, and treated as if they were truly such; but Men will recover their Senses; the Witchcraft will wear off; these publick Cheats will be every Day more and more detected: In a word, as fast as the People of England return to their understanding and Sobriety of Mind, so fast will these Great Men recover their Esteem and Credit; and tho' they may never enjoy (as I hope they will never want) their Places again, Yet 'tis great odds but some of their Places may come to want them, which is much worse for the Kingdom. And because I will do the fairest thing in the World, I will appeal to the King of France and all his Councillors, to the Pretender and all his Favourers and Abettors, to the King's of Spain, Denmark, and Sweden, the Electors, Princes of Germany and Italy, and to the States, as Wise as High and Mighty, i.e. I will appeal to all the Enemies and Friends we have in Europe, to give their Judgment, whether they think the Late Ministry were wanting in Faithfulness, Ability, or Diligence, to serve their Prince and Country.

FINIS.

---

---

APPENDIX D

---

---

A
Learned Comment
ON
Dr. HARE'S SERMON

A
Learned Comment
UPON
Dr. HARE's Excellent Sermon
Preach'd before the
D. of Marlborough,
On the Surrender of
BOUCHAIN.

---

By an Enemy to PEACE.

---

Et multis utile Bellum.

---

L O N D O N.

Printed for John Morphew, near Stationers-Hall, 1711. (Price 2 d.)

---

---

---

---

A Learned Comment ON Dr. HARE'S SERMON

I HAVE been so well Entertain'd by reading Dr. Hare's Sermon, Preach'd before the Duke of Marlborough and the Army, in way of Thanksgiving for passing the Lines and taking Bouchain, that I can't forbear giving part of my Thoughts thereupon to the Publick. If a Colonel had been to preach at the Head of his Regiment, I believe he would have made just such a Sermon; which, before I begin with, I must beg leave to consider the Preface, and that stale Topick in the Publisher, of Printing a Discourse without the Author's leave, by a Copy got from a Friend; being himself so modest, that he would by no means bear of Printing what was drawn up in so much haste. If the thing be not worth Publishing, either the Author is a Fool, or his Friend a Knave. Besides, the Apology seems very needless for one that has so often been complimented upon his Productions; of which we have seen several without either Art or Care, tho' Publish'd with this famous Doctor's Consent. A good Argument, indeed, is not the worse for being without Art or Care, but an ill one is nothing without both. If Painless and Honesty made amends for every hasty foolish Composition, we should never have an end, and every Dunce that blotted Paper would have the same Plea. But the good Doctor's Zeal for the continuation of the War, must attone for the rest of his Defects: His Politicks and his Divinity seem to be much of a size; there is no more of the last in his Sermon, than what is to be found in the Text; he is so great an Enemy to a Partition, that he scorns to divide even That.

He begins, Pag. 5. I can't but think, that one of the properest Acknowledgments to God for the manifest Tokens we receive of his good Providence, is to consider their natural Tendency, and what is the true use which he has put into our Power to make of them. May we not very well Query whether this be Sense or Truth? The properest Acknowledgments to God for the manifest Tokens, &c. is to offer him Thanks and Praise, and obey his Laws. Pag. 6. Persevere bravely in the just and necessary War we are engag'd, till we can obtain such a Peace, as the many Successes he has given us naturally lead to, and by the continuance of the Divine Favour must end in, if we be content to wait his leisure, and are not by our Impatience and misgiving Fears, wanting to our selves. At this rate when must we expect a Peace? May we not justly enquire, Whether it be God's, or the D. of M—'s Leisure, he would have us wait? He is there in an Army well paid, sees nothing but Plenty, nay Profuseness in the Great Officers, and Riches in the General. Profuseness, when they every day in their Turns receive the Honour of his G's Company to Dinner with them: At that sumptuous Table which his G. once a Week provides for himself and them, the good Doctor never considers what we suffer at Home, or how long we shall be able to find them Money to support their Magnificence. I should think the Queen and Ministry, next under God, the best Judges what hence we ought to make. If by our Impatience be meant the Army, it was needless and absurd; if he meant our Impatience here at home, being so far remov'd from the Scene, and in quite another View, he can be no judge of that.

Pag. 7. One would think a People, who by such a Train of wonderful Successes were now brought to the very Banks of Jordan, could not be so fearful as to stop there, or doubt with themselves, whether or no they should try to pass the River, [Querc Sensem or Scheld] and get Possession of the Land which God had promis'd them; that they could, with their own Eyes, take a view of it [apply'd to Picardy] and behold it was exceeding good, &c. Our Case and the Israelites is very different: What they Conquer'd they got for themselves; we take a view of the Land, as they did, and, behold it to be exceeding good, but good for others: If Joshua had spent many Years in Conquering the Amorites (with the loss of infinite Blood and Treasure) and then deliver'd the Land over to the Gibeonites, the Israelites might have had good reason to murmur; and that has been our Case. Pag. 7. It seems incredible, that Men should for many Years together struggle with the greatest Difficulties, and successfully go through innumerable Dangers, in pursuit of a Noble End, an End worthy of all the Pains and Trouble they are at, and yet lose their Courage as they gain

Ground, &c. Tho' this be a Falsity, yet to lose Courage as we gain Ground, may very probably happen, if we squander our Courage by the Yard, and gain Ground by the Inch.

Pag. 7. Of all the Virtues Human Nature wou'd aspire to, Constancy seems to be that 'tis least made for: A steady pursuit of the same End for any long time together, has something in it that looks like Immortality [hath not this Flight something in it that looks like Nonsense?] and seems to be above the reach of Mortal Man. How does a steady pursuit look like Immortality? If it looks like Immortality, it certainly seems to be above the reach of Mortal Men. The Earth we live on, the Air we breath, the Nourishment we take, every thing about us is by Nature subject to continual Change; our Bodies themselves are in a perpetual Flux, and not a Moment together the same they were. What Place then can there be for a constant steady Principle of Action amidst so much Inconstancy? If these Reasons were true, it would be impossible not to be Inconstant: With this old beaten Trash of a Flux, he might go on a hundred Pages on the same Subject, without producing any thing new: It is a wonder we had not the grave Observation, That nothing is Constant but Inconstancy. What does all this end in? his first Heat and Edge shows us indeed a Flux of what we did not expect.

Pag. 9. And tho' the end we aim at be the same it was, and certainly nearer. This puts me in mind of a Divine, who Preaching on the Day of Judgment, said, There was one thing he would be bold to affirm, That the Day of Judgment was nearer now, than ever it was since the beginning of the World: So the War is certainly nearer an end to Day than it was Yesterday, tho' it does not end these twenty Years.

Such fickle, inconstant, irresolute Creatures are we in the midst of our bravest Resolutions, when we set out we seem to look at what we are aiming at, thro' that end of the Perspective that magnifies the Object, and it brings it nearer to us; but when we are got some way, before we are aware we turn the Glass, and looking thro' the little end, what we are pursuing seems to be at a vast distance, and dwindle almost into nothing. This is strange Reasoning, where does his Instrument-maker live? We may have the same Constancy, the same Desire to pursue a thing, and yet not the same Abilities: For Example, In Hunting many Accidents happen; you grow weary, your Horse falls lame, or in leaping a Hedge throws you; you have the same Reason to pursue the Game, but not the same Ability.

P. 10. Their Zeal perhaps flames at first, but 'tis the flame of Straw, it has not strength to last. When the Multitude once begin to be weary and indifferent, how easily are they then seduc'd into false Measures? How readily do they give into Suspicions against those who would encourage them to Persevere, while they are fond of others, who to serve themselves, fall in with their Complaints, but at the bottom mean nothing but their own Interest. How base and false soever this Reproach be, I have set it almost at length, that I may not be charg'd with unfair Quotation. By the Company the Doctor keeps, and the Patrons he has chosen, I should think him an undoubted Judge when People mean their own Interest; but that I know, Conversing only on one side, generally gives our Thoughts the same turn; just as the Jaundice make those that have it, think all things yellow. This Writer is prejudic'd, and looks upon the rest of the World to be as Self-Interested, as those Persons from whom he has taken his Observation. But if he means the Present Ministry, it is certain they could find their own Interest in continuing the War as well as other People; their Capacities are not less, nor their Fortunes so great, neither need they be at a loss how to follow in a Path so well beaten. Were they thus inclin'd, the way is open before them, the means that enrich'd their Predecessors, gave them a pretence to continue in Power, and made them almost necessary Evils to the State, are now no longer a Secret. Did their Successors study their own Interest with the same Zeal, as they do that of the Publick, we should not have the Doctor in these Agonies for fear of a Peace, things would be then as he would have them; it would be no longer a flame of Straw, but a solid Fire, likely to last as long as his poor Country-men had any Materials to feed it: But I wonder he would talk of those who mean their own Interest, in such an Audience, especially before those who fall in with their Complaints, unless he had given it quite another turn, and bestow'd some of his Eloquence in showing what he really thinks, that nothing in Nature, is so Eligible as Self-Interest, tho' purchased at the Price of a lasting War, the Blood and Treasure of his Fellow-Subjects, and the Weal of his Native Country.

P. 11. This is a Misfortune, which free Assemblies, and popular or mixt Governments, are almost unavoidably expos'd to; and 'tis for this Reason, so few Nations have ever steadily pursued, for any long time, the Measures at first resolv'd on, were they never so right and just; and 'tis for the same Reason, that a single Power seldom fails at long run to be too hard for a Confederacy. A very good Argument for this War, a good Overture and Warning, to make a General for Life: It is an excellent Panegyrick upon Arbitrary Power; at this rate the French King is sure to get the better at last. This Preacher must certainly be an admirable Judge of popular Assemblies, by living in an Army. Such poor Writers get a Rote and common place of talking, by reading Pamphlets, and from thence presume to make general Observations upon Government, and set up for Statesmen. If the D. of M.—be Moses, what promised Land is he bringing us to, unless this Sermon be preach'd only to the Dutch? He may have promised them Land, and they Him something else, and both been as good as their Words. In his Allegory of the People brought out of Egypt, does the Doctor mean our Army? The Parallel must then be drawn to make the War last Forty Year, or else it can be no Parallel: We may easily see how near the Comparison grows. Moses was accused by certain Israelites; Is it a small thing, say they, that thou hast brought us out of a Land that floweth with Milk and Honey, to kill us in the Wilderness, except thou make thy self altogether a Prince over us? Hath the D. of M.—been suspected of any such Design? Moses was wroth, and said unto the Lord, Respect not their Offerings, I have not taken one Ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them. Whose Ox have I taken? Or whom have I defrauded? Whom have I oppressed? Or of whose Hand have I receiv'd any Bribe, &c. Does the British Moses speak thus to the People? Is there any sort of Agreement between them? Nor are we sure of Gods Commands to go up against the Amorites, p. 13, as the Israelites were, and we have fifty times more reason to murmur. They were carried from the Wilderness, into a Land flowing with Milk and Honey; we from such a Land into the Wilderness, that is Poverty and Misery, and are like to be kept in the Wilderness till this Generation and the next too are consum'd, by Mortgages, Anticipations, &c. Ibid, Where the Doctor says, the Country it self, was much too narrow for them, he must certainly mean the Dutch, who never think their Frontiers can be too much extended.

The Doctor tells us, p. 15. The Justice and Necessity of our Cause, is little short of the Force of a Command: Does God command to Fight, because the Chaplain-General will have no Peace? He asks, what is bidding us go on, if our Successes are not? At this rate, whenever any new Success is gain'd, or a Town taken, no Peace must be made. The whole Exhortation against Peace, which follows, is very proper for the Chaplain of an Army, it looks like an other Essay of the Management of the War. These Successes have generally been so much wanted and so little expected. If we have been ten Years at this vast expence getting Successes that we could not expect, we were mad to begin this War, which hath ruin'd us with all this Success. But why this Acclamation? Is taking one small Town such great Success, as points out to us the Finger of God? Who is his God! I believe the General has no little share in his Thoughts, as well as the present Ministry, tho' upon a quite different Consideration. The Clouds have never this War thickned more, or look'd blacker than this Year: Things look'd so black on every side, as not to leave us the faintest glimpse of Light, we apprehended nothing less than the dissolution of the Alliance. Whatever the Doctor may be for a Preacher, he has prov'd but an indifferent Prophet. The General and Army may be oblig'd to him for the dissipation of these Clouds, tho' the Ministry are not: Were they the Cause that such Clouds gather'd, as made him fear an universal Storm, which could no way be fenced against? To hear him run on in praise of the Wonders of this Campaign, one would scarce believe he were speaking to those very Persons who had formerly gain'd such memorable Victories, and taken Towns of so much greater Importance than Bouchain. Had the French no Lines before? I thought Mons, Lisle, &c. had been once esteem'd considerable Places; but this is his youngest Child, he does like most Mothers, when they are past the Hopes of more, they doat upon the youngest, tho' not so Healthy, nor Praise-worthy, as the rest of the Brethren. Is it our Fault, that three of the Princes in Aliance with us resolve to recall their Troops? we brought our Quota's, if our Allies did not, by whose Indulgence was it, that some of them have not been press'd more closely upon that Head, or rather have been left to do as they please? It is no matter how hard a Bargain People pretend to make, if they are not ty'd to the Performance.

P. 18. If the Enemy are stronger than they were, how are we so near our great Hopes, the Promised Land? The affectation of Eloquence, which carries the Doctor away by a Tide of Words, makes him contradict himself, and betray his own Argument. Yet by all those Expressions, p. 19, we can only find, that whatever Success we have, must be miraculous; he says, we must trust to Miracles for our Success, which as I take it is to tempt God: Tho' p. 20. he thinks, the most Fearful cannot doubt of God's continuance. We have had miraculous Success this nine Years by his own Account, and this Year, he owns, we should have been all undone without a new Miracle, black Clouds, &c. hanging over our Heads; and why may not our Sins provoke God to forsake us, and bring the black Clouds again? Greater Sins than our Inconstancy! Avarice, Ambition, Disloyalty, Corruption, Pride, Drunkenness, Gaming, Profaneness, Blasphemy, Ignorance, and all other Immoralities and Irreligion! These are certainly much greater Sins, and whether found in a Court, or in a Camp, much likelier to provoke God's Anger, than Inconstancy. If we have not Patience to wait 'till he has finish'd by gradual Steps this great Work, in such a manner as he in his infinite Wisdom shall think fit. I desire the Doctor would explain himself upon the Business of gradual Steps, whether three and twenty Years longer will do, or what time he thinks the General and himself may live; I suppose he does not desire his gradual Steps should exceed Their date, as fond as he seems of Miracles; I believe he is willing enough they should be confin'd to his Grace's Life, and his own.

What does he mean, P. 21. by the natural and moral Consequences that must lead us? If those moral Consequences are Consequences upon our Morals, they are very small. Whatever Reason if so can be for putting an End to the War but a good one, was a stronger Reason against beginning it. Right! so far we allow: And yet those very Reasons that make us in so much haste to end it, shew the Necessity there was for entring into it. I am in mighty hope to get out of a Squabble, and therefore I had Reason to get into it; generally the contrary is true. What Condition should we have now been in, had we tamely let that prodigious Power settle and confirm it self without Dispute? It could never settle and confirm it self but by a War. P. 22. Did we not go into the War in hopes of Success? The greatest Argument for going on with the War, is that we may have more Success. According to the Doctrine laid down by our Author, we must never be inclined to Peace till we lose a Battle; every Victory ought to be a Motive to continue the War. Upon this Principle, I suppose a Peace was refus'd after the Battle of Ramillies. How can we doubt that we shall not still succeed, or that an Enemy that grows every day weaker and weaker? &c. The Doctor's Zeal overbears his Memory: Just now the Enemy was stronger than ever. P. 23. If we consider that our Strength is from God, &c. Tho' all Men ought to trust in God, yet our Saviour tells us, we ought to regard Human Means: And in the Point before us, we are told, St. Luke xiv. 31, 32. That a King going forth to war against another King, sitteth down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand; or else while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an Embassage, and desireth Conditions of Peace. Our Saviour was a Preacher of Peace; St. John xiv. 27. Peace I leave with you; my Peace I give unto you, &c. But the Doctor chuseth rather to drive on furiously with Jehu; he answers to the Question, Is it Peace? as that King did to the Horsemen, What hast thou to do with Peace? get thee behind me. He saith, Our Ingratitude and Impenitence may defeat the surest prospects we have. May we not ask him, whose Ingratitude? As to Impenitence, I think this Paragraph is the only one wherein he vouchsafes, and that but very slightly, in his whole Sermon, to remind the People of Repentance and Amendment; but leaves a Subject so little suited to a Day of Joy, to encourage them to go on to obtain the End towards which they have made so many happy Steps. We differ about that End; some desire Peace, others War, that so they may get Money and Power: It is the Interest of some to be in Action, others to be at Rest: Some People clap their Finger upon one Point, and say That alone can be a good Peace; We say there may be many sorts of good Peace, of all which we esteem the Queen and Ministry to be the best Judges. The Doctor tells us, Our Sins may force us to put an ill End to the War; he should explain what he calls an ill End; I am apt to think he will think nothing good that puts an End to it, since he saith, Vengeance may affect not only us, but Generations yet unborn: That they have taken care of already; We have pretty well mortgag'd Posterity by the Expences of this Devouring War, and must we never see an End to it till there is not an Enemy left to contend with, for so our Author would intimate? In what a Condition must we expect to be, long before that? It is very happy for the Nation, that we do not lie at the Mercy of this Gentleman; that his Voice is not necessary towards the great End we pant after, the unloading of our Burthen, and the Mitigation of our Taxes. A just and necessary War is an ostentatious Theam, and may bear being declaim'd on. Let us have War, what have we to do with Peace? we have beaten our Enemy, let us beat him again: God has given us Success, he encourages us to go on. Have we not won Battles, and Towns, pass'd the Lines, and taken the great Bouchain? What avails our Miseries at home? A little paulyr Wealth, the Decay of Trade, Increase of Taxes, Dearness of Necessaries, Expence of Blood, and Lives of our Country-men. Are there not Foreigners to supply their Places? Have not the Loss of so many brave Soldiers been offer'd to the Legislature as a Reason for Calling in such Numbers of poor Palatines, as it were to fill up the Chasm of War, and attone for the Desolation amongst our Subjects? If we continue thus prodigal of our Blood and Treasure, in a few Years we shall have as little of the one as the other left; and our Women, if they intend to multiply, must be reduc'd, like the Amazons, to go out of the Land, or take them Husbands at home of those wretched Strangers, whom our Piety and Charity relieved. Of the Natives there will be scarce a Remnant preserved; and thus the British Name may be endanger'd once more to be lost in the German.

Were it not for fear of offending the worthy Doctor, I should be tempted to compare his Sermon with one that some time since made so much Noise in the World; but I am with-held by the Consideration of its being so universally Condemned, nay Prosecuted on one side: Perhaps the Chaplain General will not like the Parallel: There may be found the same Heat, the same Inuendo's, upon different Subjects, tho' the Occasion be not so pressing. What Necessity was there of Preaching up War to an Army, who daily enrich themselves by the Continuation of it? Does he not think, Loyalty and Obedience would have been a properer Subject? To have exhorted them to a Perseverance in their Duty to the Queen, to prepare and soften their Minds, that they may receive with Resignation, if not Applause, whatever Her Majesty shall think fit to Transact. The Doctor, without suspicion of Flattery, might very well have extoll'd their great Actions, and Congratulated with them upon the Peace we are likely to enjoy, by which they will be at leisure to reap the Harvest of their Blood and Toil, take their Rest at Home, and be relieved from the Burthen and Danger of a Cruel War. And as our Gratitude will be ever due to them for delivering us from our distant Enemy the French, so shall we have Reason to bless whoever are the Authors of Peace to these distressed Nations, by which we may be freed from those nearer and much more formidable Enemies, Discontent and Poverty at Home.

---

---

---

TEXTUAL NOTES

THE EXAMINER

Printed weekly from August 3, 1710; half-sheet folio. 2 pages. LONDON:
Printed for John Morphew, near Stationer's Hall, 1710.

Reprinted in Dublin, weekly from August 14, 1710; 4to. 4 pages. DUBLIN:
Printed by C. Carter at the Old Post-Office in Fishamble-Street.

First collected edition of The Examiners for the Year 1711 published by Morphew and Dodd in 16mo, in 1712. See facsimile of the title-page, p. i.

Swift's Works, Dublin, 1738, Vol. V, p. 75.

The present text is printed from Faulkner's edition of the Works, 1738, which has been collated with the original Examiners, printed in London and Dublin and with the collected edition of 1712. As already pointed out in the Introduction to this volume, p. xxviii, there is some reason to believe that Swift may have glanced over the proofs, and made one or two significant changes. He cannot have taken much interest in the volume, or he would not have allowed Faulkner to include the last Examiners from June 14 to July 28, 1711, which in the prefatory note to the volume are distinctly stated not to have been written by Swift.

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
3	11	although	though 10, 12; altho' 35
4	2	already	lately 10, 12
	31	Civil	Peaceable 10, 12
	32	who otherwise would	who would otherwise 10, 12
5	7	as we call ourselves	as we take ourselves to be 10, 12
	22	continue	continues 10, 12
6	5 f.b.	the Nation	a Ntione 35
7	11	prudent	Prudence 10, 12
	16	last	lasts 10, 12
	20	if our Fathers had left	had our Fathers left 10, 12
9	23	Rabbie	Mob 10, 12
10	16	Moderation	and Moderation 10, 12
	21	W <sup>ay</sup> s	w <sup>ay</sup> 10, 12
	28	Exchange-Alley 12	Paper-head Alley 10
12	3 f.b.	undeceive or discover	undeceive 10, 12
17	6.	such a Doctrine	that Doctrine 10, 12
19	21	the People who	the People that 10, 12
	26	If a	Should a 10, 12
	4 f.b.	Rabble	Mob 10, 12
22	8-9	Comparison of	comparison with 10, 12
23	7 f.b.	and all	also all 10, 11
	6.	Consequences	Consequence 10, 12
24	9	Debtor	Creditor 10, 12
	18	her own Allowance	her Allowance 10, 12
	22	Pounds	Pound 10, 12
	23	Pounds	Found 10, 12
25	16	were	was 10, 12

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
	17-18	all my Income	half my Income 10, 12
	5 f.b.	Rascal who	Rascal that 10, 12
27	19-20	brought here a Man before you	brought a Man here before you 10, 12
	8 f.b.	objected, the Criminal	objected that the Criminal 10, 12
	2 f.b.	so High or Holy	so High or so Holy 10, 12
28	24	In Sicily he sold	he sold all Employments in Sicily of Judicature 10, 12
30	11	peaceably	peaceable 10, 12
31	12	fourscore of	fourscore others of 10, 12
	27-28	alledge, that a good and wise Prince may be allowed to change his Ministers	alledge, what no Body doubts, that a Prince may chuse his own Ser- vants 10, 12
	29-30	probable, that he will not make such a Change	certain that a wise and good Prince will not change his Ministers 10, 12
32	23	be Men	are Men 10, 12
33	29	spirit up	Spirit 10, 12
34	12	Debts on 10, 12	Debts of 33
35	8	or	nor 10, 12
	15	Shrewdness	Smartness 10, 12
37	18	by taking off	for taking off 10, 12
40	4 f.b.	must allow	will allow 10, 12
41	1-2	yet in Winter	however in Winter 10, 12
	6	in England	here in England 10, 12
42	2	at a Distance	at distance 10, 12
43	22	Contempt on	Contempt of 10, 12
45	8 f.b.	they were	it were 10, 12
46	17	of some	of those 10, 12
	21	or more	nor more 10, 12
47	4 f.b.	the Convocations	their Convocations 10, 12
48	23	every	any 10, 12
50	10	was thus	is thus 10, 12
52	8	EXAMINER 10	Examiners 12, 33
53	24	Junts	J - - - to 10, 12 [regular]
56	29	the Clergy	their Clergy 10, 12
57	23-24	a late Examiner	the late Examiner 10, 12
60	3	What ? Shall	What shall 10, 12
	17	concerning	relating to 10, 12
63	12-13	if the former Danger had been	had the ... been 10, 12
64	3	know 10	have 12, 38
	4	several	some 10, 12
67	4	into 12	in 10
68	3 f.b.	to confess	to acknowledge 10, 12
70	3 f.b.	be	they 10, 12
	2 f.b.	who durst	that durst 10, 12
71	5-6	spur on an	spur an 10, 12
	10	the proper Time	the Time 10, 12
	29	Employment, Ecclesiastical, Civil, or Military.	Employment , 10, 12

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
72	7	James Duke of Ormonde;	C. D. of Sh., 10, 12 'i.e. Charles, Duke of Shrewsbury.'
	9	Henry St John	H.S. 10, 12; William Shippen 38
	10	Abigail Masham	A.M. Spinster 10, 12
	16	Contract	Compact 10, 12
	18	Junta.	Junto. Order'd, That a Bill be brought in for further limiting the Prgovtive 10, 12
73	12	in Council 12	at Council 10
74	b.	my Paper	this Paper 10, 12
75	24	Commiseration	Besides, Commiseration 10, 12
	26	if your Friends	if your Party 10, 12
79	21	many amiable Qualities	all the amiable Qualities that can accomplish a great Man 10, 12
	25-26	who ventured	that ventured 10, 12
82	9	a hundred Times	ten times 10, 12
84	3	Million 10	Millions 12
	25	ingeniously 10	ingeniously 12
86	17	be	are 10, 12
	27	that the	the 10, 12
	30	also	likewise 10, 12
	3f.b.	who live	that live 10, 12
	2f.b.	besides	likewise 10, 12
88	2f.b.	Act for Toleration	Act of Toleration 10, 12
89	10	at an End 10, 12	at End 35
	2f.b.	and Stables 10	and the Stables 12, 38
90	26	his Mother	the Lady 10, 12
92	5	conceal his Opinions, . . .	conceals his Opinions . . . endeavours 10, 12
93	9	Monarch who	Monarch that 10, 12
	13	their Minions	Minions 10, 12
	17	and some others	the Earl of Oxford 10, 12
94	1	disobliging it	disobliging of it 10, 12
95	1	the Faction 12	a Faction 10
	6	Prince George's Death	the Prince's Death 10, 12
	19	if he still remain	remains 10, 12
	26	administered 10	administer 12
96	18	to be a Secretary	for a Secretary 10, 12
97	28-29	be rewarded	is rewarded 10, 12
98	13	upon most	on most 10, 12
99	3	in great	in all great 10, 12
	15	the false Merit	he 10, 12
100	30	Congregation, which	Congregation, who 10, 12
102	3	of the Fable	the Table 10; the Fable 12
	12	Brood	Crowd 10, 12
	6f.b.	dreamt	Dream'd 10, 12
103	11	she fled	fled 10, 12
	13	being driven out	driven out 10, 12
109	30	belonged	belonging 10, 12
113	12	as a Doctrine	as Doctrines 10, 12
114	7	interpose	interposes 10, 12

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
	18-19	Prerogative.	Prerogative; when according to the Judgment of those who know our Constitution best, Things rather seem to lean to the other Extream, which is equally to be avoided. 10, 12
115	13	one of which 10, 12	one; to which 35
116	4 f.b.	a Pension	a larger Pension 11, 12
119	19	allowed	allowed to be 11, allowed to 12
122	9 f.b.	upon settling Points 11 7-6 f.b. the Duke of Venice	upon Points 12 a Duke . . . 11, 12
123	21	against the next	against next 11, 12
124	17	lead them	tempt them 11, 12
	30	or why	nor why 11, 12
125	14	in this Case	in that Case 11, 12
129	1	being a Party	being of a Party 11, 12
130	20	hath felt	has had 11, 12
135	9-10	the present War	this present War 11, t2
136	13	their Lies, and for twice	their Scandal and Malice and . . . 11, 12
138	7-8	they can win	and win 11, 12
	3 f.b.	in a Degree	in any Degree 11, 12
141	3	least Pretensions	least Pretensions to it 11, 12
142	20	Aversion against	Aversion for 11, 12
143	13	here:	among us: 11, 12
144	15	but	and 11, 12
145	13	at last	at least 11, 12
146	1	Power	Tyrant 11, 12
147	5	latter were 11, 12	latter was 35
149	19	the Sons	these Sons 11, 12
153	b.	intended to be of	thought was of 11, 12
154	6	this worthy	that worthy 11, 12
156	30	other Motives 11, 12	no other Motives 35
	b.	Maitre de Langues	Maitres des Langues 11, 12
165	29	by any other	under any other 11, 12
167	27	and Liberty	Liberty 11, 12
168	9	believe	think 11, 12
	13	It is pleasant	It was pleasant 11, 12
169	29	incapacitating all Men 11	incapacitating Men 12, 35
170	24-25	the first Fruits . . . known to have already done . . .	a Remission of the First Fruits . . . formerly known to have done . . . 11, 12
	29	ever	always t1, 12
172	25-26	their Factors	these their Factors 11, 12
173	23	dress it in 11	dress in 12

A SHORT CHARACTER OF HIS EXCELLENCY
THOMAS, EARL OF WHARTON, LORD
LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND

First printed in December, 1710, apparently without imprint. I have been able to find no copy of this. Swift refers to it in the Journal to Stella, Dec. 8: 'Here's a damned libellous pamphlet come out against lord Wharton. . . . It has been sent by dozens to several gentlemen's lodgings, and I have one or two of them, but nobody knows the author or printer.' Again he writes on Jan. 1: 'It was first printed privately here; and then some bold cur ventured to do it publickly, and sold two thousand in two days.' This is probably the edition printed for William Coryton, dated 1711. See facsimile of title-page, p. 175. I have examined a number of copies; and there appear to be three different issues with slight variations in the title and first sheet (ff. 1-16). (See Teerink, pp. 242-3.)

Possibly the copies without 'Price 4d' on the t.p. belong to the first issue.

Another edition in smaller type without a t.p. appeared with the same imprint in 1711.

Reprinted again after the death of Wharton in 1713, omitting the introductory paragraphs, and with other minor alterations and a different title: A Short Character Of the late M—S of IV—n. &c. Extracted from an Irish Manuscript, By The Author of the Tale of a Tub. London: Printed, and Sold by A. Dodd without Temple-bar, and E. Smith at the Royal Exchange, and most Booksellers of London and Westminster. Price 4d.

Swift's Works, Dublin, 1762, Vol. X, p. 283.

Swift's Works, London, 1764, 4to, Vol. VII, Part i, p. 188.

The present text is printed from the Faulkner reprint, 1762, not because that has any authority, but because it provides conveniently some uniformity in matters of spelling, punctuation and capitalization with the rest of this volume. In any case the Coryton editions were also booksellers' reprints, without any authority; and all important variants are given below.

Page Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
177 11	Events in 11	Events of 62
13	had by 11	had of 62
18	Degree, however 11	Degree; however, 62
24	in which	wherein 11
25	such as under	such as 11
32	by which	whereby 11
178 4	next: and because this Account may be judged	next. [new par.] And because the Relation I am going to make, may be judged 11
6	to his Person	of his Person 11
11	Consciousness of Innocence	Consciousness of his Innocence 11
15	these	those 11
16	Whoever, for the Sake of others,	Whoever were . . . to do it for the sake of others 11
29	to which his Excellency hath arrived, which	which his Excellency has arrived to, which 11
33	Government,	Government in Ir-d, 11
35	Administration in Ireland,	Administration in that kingdom 11
179 2	hath some Years passed his Grand Climacteric,	hath, some Years past his past grand Climacterick, 11

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
179	28	to impose on	Imposing on <sup>ii</sup>
	36	Friendship	Friendliness <sup>ii</sup>
	37	Familiarity,	familiarity in the World <sup>ii</sup>
180	2	the very	that very <sup>ii</sup>
	6	on a sudden	upon a sudden <sup>ii</sup>
	16	maketh use . . . , whose Talents reach	he makes choice . . . , whose Talent reaches <sup>ii</sup>
	22	a Gallantry <sup>ii</sup>	Gallantry <sup>62</sup>
	28	most common	commonest <sup>ii</sup>
181	3	Ireland	that Kingdom <sup>ii</sup>
	8 ff.	Promise; as I remember he told a Lady, but with an Exception to the Promise be then made (which was to get her a Pension) yet he broke even that, and I confess, deceived us both.	Promise. But . . . <sup>62</sup>
	11
	23	just as he recollects them;	as they came into his Memory: <sup>ii</sup>
	24	will, I hope, pardon me	I hope will pardon me <sup>ii</sup>
	27	Chirurgeon-General	Surgeon-General <sup>ii</sup>
	30	the Phoenix Park	the Park <sup>ii</sup>
182	10	to me	me <sup>ii</sup>
	12	here	here in Town <sup>ii</sup>
183	6	Provost <sup>ii</sup>	the Provost <sup>62</sup>
	24	here when	here, where <sup>ii</sup>
	31	introduced himself	prod' d himself <sup>ii</sup>
	35	never before seen nor thought of him	never seen nor thought on him in his Life <sup>ii</sup>
	38	fully	circumstancially <sup>ii</sup>
184	2	to stop Dr. Pratt's Promo- tion	to hinder Dr. Prat from the Pro- vostship: <sup>ii</sup>
	6	especially that of	especially the last, of <sup>ii</sup>
	13	the Doctor and his Excellency	his Ex-y and the Doctor <sup>ii</sup>
	23	owned he did not oppose him directly, but confessed he did it collaterally.	confess'd that he did not directly oppose him, but collaterally he did: <sup>ii</sup>

SOME REMARKS ON A PAMPHLET, ETC.

First printed in August 1711. See facsimile of title-page, p. 185.

Reprinted in Dublin by E. Waters in 1711. I have not seen the copy of this edition in the Marsh Library. (See Teerink, No. 535.)

Reprinted in Dublin by Cogan in 1752, and first included among Swift's collected Works in 1801 by John Nichols. See Works, London, 1808, III, 369 ff.

The present text is printed from a photostat of one of the Bodleian copies (8vo. L. 2. Linc.). Names have been printed in full, and elisions removed in accordance with Swift's later practice.

A NEW JOURNEY TO PARIS

First printed in September, 1711. See facsimile of title-page, p. 206.

The Second Edition Corrected, 1711. This was not reset throughout, but a few corrections were made.

The Third Edition, 1711.

First included among Swift's collected Works in 1801 by John Nichols. See Works, London, 1808, III, 370, & 401 ff.

The present text is printed from a photostat of the Bodleian copy of the second edition, collated with the first edition and the following variants noted. Names have been printed in full and elisions removed.

Page	Line	PRESENT TEXT	VARIANTS
210	12	Hostellrie	Hostellerie
213	4	before his Reception	before his Reception
218	4	Marquises	Marquisses
	9	civillest	civilfest
10	Twenty		Fifty

APPENDIXES

A. A LETTER TO THE EXAMINER

The present text is printed from a copy of the 12mo reprint of the Examiners for the Year 1711, printed for John Morphew in 1712, to which it was prefixed, pp. v-xvi.

B. A RELATION OF SEVERAL FACTS ETC.

The present text is printed from Swift's Works, Dublin, 1762, X, 297 ff.

C. A LETTER TO THE SEVEN LORDS ETC.

The present text is printed from a photostat of one of the Bodleian copies (8vo. L. 2. Linc.), printed for J. Baker at the Black-Boy in Paternoster Row, 1711.

D. A LEARNED COMMENT ON DR. HARE'S SERMON

First included among Swift's collected Works by John Nichols in 1801. See Works, London, 1808, III, 421 ff. The present text is printed from a photostat of the copy in the British Museum (698.h.13) printed for John Morphew in 1711.

---

THE INDEX

- Abbeyville, 212
Act for the Queen's General Pardon, 29, 139, 140, 225
Act for Securing the Freedom of Parliaments, see Qualifications Bill
Act of Settlement, 18
Act for Toleration, 88
Addison, Joseph, relations with Wharton and Swift, xx; The Whig Examiner, xix, 26 Admiralty, 66
Aeolus, sons of, 149
Agricola, Cnaeus Julius, 149
Alcibiades and the Athenian Brewer, 26
Alexander the Great, 6, 19
Allies, The, xxxii, 34, 61, 168, 198, 268
Almanza, defeat at, 149
Amazons, the, 271
American plantations, Christianity in, 161
Amnesty, see Act for the Queen's General Pardon
Amorites, 264, 267
Anabaptists, xiii, 92, 127, 144
Anarchy, 204
Anjou, Duke of, see Philip
Anne, Queen of England, xiv, xxii, xxv, xxviii, 20, 39, 134, 197, 213; accession of, 94, 164; aims of her reign, 34; and the change of ministry, ix, xi, xii, 4, 8, 59, 60, 64, 95, 123, 126, 133, 135, 203, 257; and the Church, xv, 16, 17, 48, 49–50, 51, 74, 157, 158, 161, 170; and the Dissenters, 130, 132; Guiscard's supposed threat against, 110; and Harley, 29, 106, 116, 155, 247, 248; and Harley ministry, 99, 109, 270; hereditary right of, 17–18, 166; and Marlborough, ix, xvii, 20; and Sarah Marlborough, ix, 24, 72; and Mrs Masham, 38; and Parliament, 32, 120; and the Peace, xxv, 140, 210, 264; and the Prerogative, xxviii, 114, 138, 143, 172; and the Pretender, 146–7; and the Tory Party, xxi, 66, 76, 78, 104, 105, 121; and the War, xxxiii, 34; and the Whig Party, ix, 12, 33, 70, 80, 85, 89, 117, 121, 137, 139, 225, 226, 258
- Arbitrary Power, xxiv, 6, 34, 47, 69, 73, 88, 131, 143, 204, 267; not a consequence of Passive Obedience, 111; not a Tory threat, xxi; a Whig charge against Tories, 142, 144–5
- Aristocracy, Whig contempt for, 150–1; a Whig ideal of government, 122
- Aristophanes, and fable of original of love, 101
- Army, the, 40–6, 58–63; abuses in, xiv, 44–5, 58, 61, 138, 170, 233–4; and the civil power, 43, 44, 45; in the Gothic governments, 41; in Greece and Rome, 40; in Ireland, 177, 235; mercenary troops in, 41–2; in the Revolution, 44; danger of a standing —, 146, 164; and the Whig ministers, 61
- Athens, a pragmatical orator of, 105
- Atheists, xiii, 49, 71, 144; in the army, 44; and Dissenters, 130; and Wharton, 179; and Whigs, 56, 92, 204
- Atterbury, Francis, Bishop of Rochester, xi, xxvii, 2
- Atticus, T. Pomponius, 84
- Austria, Charles, Archduke of, 222, see also Charles VI
- Avarice, description of, 80–1; and the Faction, 104; in public employments, 81–2, 96, see also Marlborough
- Bank of England, a Whig interest, 63, 66, 125, 134, 244, 266
- Banks, Sir Jacob, Letter to, 100
- Barrier Treaty, 223–4
- Bartholomew Fair, the dancing girl of, 147
- 'Bastide, M. de la,' pseudonym of de Torcy, 210 ff.
- Bavaria, 224
- Beef-Eaters, 204
- Bible, not believed by some Whigs, 55, 126
- 'Bill for the Encouragement of Learning,' 37
- Bill for a General Naturalization, 48, 71, 169
- 'Bill for further Limiting the Prerogative,' xxviii

- Bishops, of Church of England, 47, 49, 51, 73, 55–6, 72; in Convocation, xv, 50, 74; the deprived —, 163; in House of Lords, 51, 56, 146; the Whig —, xxx, 50–1, 53, 200
 Blenheim Palace, xxvi, 21, 159
 Boileau, Nicholas Despreaux, 215
 Bolingbroke, Viscount, see St John, Henry
 Boulogne, 210, 212, 215, 216
 Bolton, Charles Paulet, 2nd Duke of, xxix, 243 ff.
 Bouchain, xxxii, 263, 271
Bouchain: In Dialogue Between the Late Medley and Examiner, xxxii Bourbon, The House of, and the War of the Spanish Succession, 224
 Boyer, Abel, 156–7
 Boyle, Harry, Secretary of State under Godolphin, 239, 245
 Brabazon, Captain Charles, afterward Earl of Meath, 234
 Bradshaw, John, portrait of, 73
 Brentford, 199
 Britain, Agricola as Praetor of, 149; and the war, 222, 223, 224
 Broderick, Alan, see Middleton
 Broderick, Thomas, 182
 Bromley, William, Speaker of the House of Commons, 154, 155, 156, 192, 249, 250; death of his son, 120–1
 Browne, Dr Peter, Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, 183
 Brownists, 144
 Brutus, Marcus Junius, 84
 Buckingham, George Villiers, Duke of, 106
 Buckingham, John Sheffield, Duke of, 72, 79
 Burnet, Gilbert, Bishop of Salisbury, in favour with Whig party, 18; Steward of Sarum, 223
- Cabal, the Whig, xxi, 71, 136
 Cadiz, Expedition to, 232
 Cadogan, Lt.-General William, xiv
 Caesar, Julius, 19, 42, 44, 100, 106
 Calais, 210, 211, 213, 216, 218
 Calves-Head Clubs, 142
 Cambridge, 209
- Canterbury, Archbishop of, see Tenison
 Carew, John, 127
 Carthage, 41
Case of the Present Convocation Considered etc., see Wotton Catiline, 82, 84, 148
 Cato the Elder, 84
 Cavaliers, 162
Censor of Great Britain, Whig paper, 221 Censor of Rome, 221
 Chapel-izod, 232
Charge of God to Joshua, see Hare
 Charing-Cross, 250
 Charles I, King of England, 47; his murder, 127, 141, 143, 189, 196, 200; rebellion against, 44, 118, 123; ridiculed in Calves-Head Clubs, 142; 'the Royal Martyr', 152
 Charles II, King of England, 234; parties under, 163, 164; Passive Obedience under, 144, 145; restoration of, 127
 Charles VI, Emperor, Archduke of Austria, and Charles III of Spain, 129, 191, 205, 222, 224, 238
 Charles XII, King of Sweden, 205, 224, 238
 Charon, 45
 Chaumont, 217
 Christian, King of Denmark, 205, 238
 Christianity, 47; in America, 161; 'a system of Speculative Opinions', 49
 Churches, 'ancient Gothic,' 162; crowding of, 159–60; fifty new, xxv, 157–62, 170, 200
 Churchill, John, see Marlborough
 Church of England, 47, 52, 70, 166, 167, 189, 195; 'in danger', xiii, 16, 17; high-church, 108, 151, 163; low-church, 126, 128, 129, 163, 164; non-jurors' definition of, 104; Queen's support of, 34, 161; 'Religion of the Magistrate', 52, 123, 243; and the Revolution of 1688, 6, 128, 144; Tory support of, ix, xxvi, 120, 125, 143, 158, 167; and Wharton, xviii, xxi; and Whigs, xv, 94, 129, 142, 146, 172
 Church of Ireland, x, xxvi
 Church of Scotland, 101

- Cicero, Marcus Tullius, imitated by Swift, xix, 27-9; on Verres, 26
Cinna, see Cowper
Clement, Jacques, murder of Henry III of France, 106, 107
Clarendon, John, 55, 71
Clergy of Church of England, xxx, 127, 160, 199, 200; and the Revolution, 46, 47, 163; and the Tory party, 158, 167; and Whig party, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 56, 71, 189, see also Church of England
Clergy of Ireland, x, 170
Clergy of Scotland, 101
Clodius Albinus, for Wharton, 77, 84
Clontarf, Lady Wharton's behaviour at, 240
Coalition government, ix; recommended by Swift, 122
Coinage, altering of, 135
Coligny, Admiral de, assassination of, 107
Collins, Anthony, 37, 55, 71
Commonwealth, a, 13; a Whig design, 69, 123, 142
Commonwealth, The, 44, 63
Congratulatory Speech of William Brownley, Esq., commented on by Examiner, 147; quoted, 148
Coningsby, Mrs, Wharton's conduct with, 28-9, 240
Conscience, Liberty of, 144
Constitution, the British, according to the Union, 34; compared with others, 121; obligation of new ministry to preserve, 66; security of in Qualifications Bill, 169
Conventicles, of non-jurors, 127, 160
Convention of Lords and Commons at Revolutions, 163
Convocation, xv, 46-51, 52-4, 56, 131, 137, 138, 240; bishops in, 50, 51, 74; Examiner on, answered, 53; Examiner's reply to Wotton on, 73; Queen's address to, 49, 50, 200
Cork, Bishoprick of, 182
Covenant, taken by English Dissenters, 128
Coward, William, 55, 71
Coward, Colonel, 232
Cowper, Mary, 1st Countess of, Diary quoted, xvi
Cowper, William, Earl, 241; as Cinna, 77; compared with Sir Simon Harcourt, 78; and Tindal, 78; as 'Will Bigamy,' 25, 57
Crassus, Marcus, 83 ff., 96; for Marlborough, 77, 83-5; Letter to, 83-5, 95
Credit, public, xxvi, 4, 5, 6, 64, 168, 236; Whig efforts to sink, 70, 117, 125, 134
Cromwell, Oliver, arbitrary power of, 146; his government, 44, 104; his picture, 73; his pretensions to royalty, 151
Crow, Will, 240
Crown, Settlement of, 4, see also Succession
Currency, change in value of, 161, see also Coinage
Curiajil, defeat of, 98
Czar of Russia, see Ivan Basilovitz
Daily Courant, The, xxii
Dartmouth, William Legge, Earl of, Secretary of State, 80, 254
Davila, Enrico, his Historia delle Guerre Civile di Francia, cited, 107
Debt, the public, Whig responsibility for, xxvi, 7, 32, 72, 117, 120, 136, 158, 167, 170, 198
Deering, Dr Hencage, afterward Dean of Ripon, 237
Deists, the, xiii, 71, 79, 92, 122
Denmark, King of, see Christian Denton, Mr, Secretary to Wharton, 233
Devonshire, William Cavendish, 2nd Duke of, and the Greg affair, xxix, 245 ff.
Dissenters, 52, 88, 89, 123, 160, 200, 238; an Examiner written for, 126-32; and interests of James II, 46, 47, 127, 144, 146, 147; and Occasional Conformity, 131; and Sacheverell trial, ix; Wharton's support of, xviii, xix; and Tindal and Toland, 142; and Whig party, xxiv-v, xxvi, 54, 124, 126, 128, 145, 165; and William III, 9
Doddwell, Henry, non-juror, 115
Dolben, Sir William, Lord Chief Justice, 236, 237; 'shall Blush in his Grave,' 86, 222

- Dover, 211
Drapier's Letters, The, xx, xxiii
 Drogheda, 238
 Dublin, xx, 181, 184, 238, 239
 Dublin, Archbishop of, see King, William Dublin College, see Trinity College, Dublin
 Dutch, the, 73, 157, 268; and Whig party, 122, 226; and the War, 223
 Dytet, Richard, Commissioner of Stamped Paper, 138
- East-India Company, 66, 125, 134
 Echlin, Lieutenant-General Robert, 237-8
 Egypt, 267
 Elections, Tory conduct of, 66, 120; Whig management of, 10, 12, 37, 72, 134, 138, 170, 171
 Ely, Bishop of, see More
 Emperor, The, see Charles VI
 England, xx, 143, 157, 180, 209; a king of, 124, 134; peerage of, 254; prosperity of, 213
 Episcopacy, 51, 74, 142; abhorers of, 47, 50
 Establishment, military, in Ireland, 177, 231, 237
 Estaples, 209
 Eugene, Prince of Savoy, 191
 Eumenes of Cardia, Alexander's general, 6
 Europe, 41, 46, 121, 191, 209, 213, 258; Queen Anne and safety of, 48; Whigs and interests of, 226
Examiner, The, xiii, xxi, 32, 43, 59, 149, 202; advice to, 88 ff., 221 ff.; authorship of, x, xi, xxvi, xxvii, xxix, 2, 30; collected editions of, 1712, xi, xxvii; Faulkner's edition of, xxvii-xxviii; impartiality of, xii, xxv, 13, 90, 91, 145, 152, 194, 195; purpose of, xiv-xv, xix, xxiv, xxx, xxxii, 3, 4, 13-4, 24-5, 31, 98, 153, 156, 171, 221; style of, xvii, 30, 87, 147, 148
- Faction, 16, 101-5, 120, 129, 139, 221; allegorical account of, 102-3; characteristics of, 103, 104; Swift's opposition to, xi; Tories not a, 26, 103
 Familists, 144
- Fanaticism, 101, 128, 142, 146
 Felton, John, 106, 107
Few Words upon the Examiner's Scandalous Peace, A, xxv
 Fire, the Great, 159, 161
 First-Fruits and Tenthths of Church of England, 48, 52, 74, 170
 First-Fruits of Church of Ireland, x, 74, 170
 Fitzgerald, Captain Robert, father of Earl of Kildare, 234
 Fitzgerald, George, former Earl of Kildare, 234
 Flanders, 7, 20, 62
 Forster, John, Recorder of the City of Dublin, 239
 France, assassins in, 106-7; economic state of, 209, 213, 217; and Greg correspondence, xxix, 190, 193, 252; and the Peace, xxxii, 227; and the Pretender, 17; spirited up by the change, 4, 168, 203, 222; and the War, 7, 223
 Free-Thinkers, xv, 55, 78; and the Whigs, 122, 124, 129, 130, 142, 144
 Freind, Dr John, connection with Examiner, xi
 Furnese, Sir Henry, Bart, 151-2
- Galway, Henry, Earl of, 234
 Gaming, A Bill against Excessive, 170
 Gaul, Caesar's command in, 42
 Gaveston, Piers, Earl of Cornwall, 93
 George of Denmark, Prince, husband of Queen Anne, 93, 165
 George II, King of England, xxix
 Gerrtruydenberg, Treaty of, 'treaty with the old Parthian King,' 83, 222
 Germany, the Electors of, 258
 Ghibellines, 162
 Gibeonites, 264
 Gloucester, Cathedral of, Wharton's desecration of, 57, 69
 Godolphin, Sidney, 1st Earl of, Lord Treasurer, 4, 20, 91, 96, 133, 245; his change of party, xii-xiii, 15, 135, 164; compared with Harley, 80; correspondence with St German's 146; dismissal of, ix, xi, xix; as Gracchus, 77; 'the Quondam Treasurer,' 221; Swift's lampoon on, x, xvi; as Volpone, 71, 86, 222

- Godolphin Ministry, 34, 77, 90-1, 108, 131, 139, 150, 165, 223-224; abuses of, xiii, 32, 33, 46, 52, 86, 87, 90, 93-4, 97, 98, 117, 120, 149, 153, 170, 171; compared with Harley ministry, 78-80, 199; and the Church, 53-8, 91; domestic policies of, 224-6; Examiner's aim to discredit, xv; of Famous Memory, 135; and Greg Affair, xxix, 108; and the Marlboroughs, 15, 134; and the Palatinates, 48; and the Queen, ix, 93, 222; popular revolt against, 225-6; 'The Serpent with Seven Heads,' 49, 53; 'the Spirit of Shop-Keepers,' 48; supposed virtues of, 33, 59, 60, 77-8, 202, 203, 205; and Tory press, 136; and the War, 44, 62-3, 135, 223, 266. see also Whig Party
- Gorges, Lieutenant-General Richard, 238
- Goths, the, 103
- Gracchus, for Godolphin, 77
- Grand Alliance, 224, 268
- Grand Signior, 205
- 'Gaunt, Captain John,' see Petty
- Great Britain, 38
- Grecian Coffee House, 119
- Greece, 70, 103; popular commotions in, 150; tyranny in, 41, 61, 146
- Greeks, 105; gratitude of, 19, 22
- Greenshields, Rev James, 96, 100-1
- Greg or Gregg, William, Harley's clerk, xxiii, xxix-xxx, 146, 191, 193, 246; compared with Guiscard's attempt, 108, 116, 148; connection of Harley with his crime, 190, 198; and the Seven lords, 193, 197; and the Whigs, 108, 194. see also Harley
- Guelphs, 162
- Guiscard, Marquis de, his attack on Harley, xxii ff., 110, 138-9, 148, 193, 197-8, 245-57 passim; a Hack described, 106 ff.; Boyers account of, 157; his character, 107-8; compared with Greg affair, 108, 116, 197; design against St John, 115; profligate Abbott, 115; supposed design against Queen, 110. see also Harley
- Guise, François de Lorraine, Duc de, 107
- Guise, Henri de Balafré, Duc de, 107
- Hague, The, 208
- Halifax, Charles Montague, Earl of, deserted by Swift, xii; and Greg affair, xxix, 245 ff.
- Hall, Dr John, Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, 183
- Hamer, Sir Thomas, 211
- Hanover, House of, xxviii, 34, 123, 166
- Harcourt, Sir Simon, Lord Keeper, xxii, 72; compared with Cowper, 78
- Hare, Dr Francis, Chaplain-General, his Management of the War, xxxiii, 63, 87-8, 268; his sermon, The Charge of God to Justice, xxxii, 263 ff.
- Harley, Robert, afterwards 1st Earl of Oxford, xiv, xxii, xxviii, 72, 74, 154, 194; address to Queen on his recovery, 120, 198; character of, 79-80; and Greg, xxix, 60, 108, 190 f., 193, 243, 251 f.; and Guiscard, xxii-xxiii, 106 ff., 109, 148, 153, 168, 243 ff.; his library, 197, 233; Lord Treasurer, 169, 170, 201, 202, 204; and Marlborough, xvii; and a national government, ix, xii; and Swift, ix, x, xi, xxiii, 80; and Whigs, 94, 108, 117, 149, 189, 197, 249
- Harley Ministry, The, 34, 44, 66, 73, 168, 171, 189, 199, 201; character of, ix, 78-80; and the Church, 145; and Examiner, xi, xxi, 26, 77-80, 132, 153, 194-5; and Marlborough, xiv, xvi, 17, 20, 21; and the Peace, 264; and the Queen, 33, 99, 123; and Swift, xi, xxx, xxxi, xxxv; and the War, xxxiv, 226; and Wharton, xix. see also Tory Party
- Harrington, James; his Oceana, 115
- Harwich, 43
- Henry III, king of France, 106
- Henry IV, king of France, 106
- Hervey, Lieutenant-General, 231
- Hickes, Dr George, Dean of Worcester, 115
- High-Fliers, 52, 60, 202, see also Tory Party
- Hill, Brigadier-General John, his expedition to West Indies, 198
- Hoffman, Francia, his Secret Transactions etc., xxix, xxx, 192, 193, 251, 253; More Secret Transactions, xxx

- Holland, 41, 157, 205, 209, 222, 223, 224; taxation in, 7
- Honeywood, Colonel, xiv
- Horatii, 98
- Huguenots, 162
- Inchiquin, William O'Brien, 3rd Earl of, 239
- Independents, xiii, 92, 127
- Ingoldsby, Lieutenant-General Richard, 235, 240
- Ireland, x, xix, xxvi, 58, 101, 177, 178, 179, 181, 182, 183, 184; clergy of, 170; English establishment in, 177, 231, 237; Privy Council in, 239; Wharton in, xvi, xvii, xviii, xx, 27-29, 180, 231
- Ireton, General, portrait of, 73
- Israelites, 264, 267
- Italy, 103, 107; Furnese and a prince of, 152; princes of, 258; tyranny in, 41, 146
- Ivan Basilovitz, first Czar of Russia, 205
- Jacobites, xxiv, 30, 60, 90, 112, 127, 128, 164, 202
- Jeju, 270
- Jennings, the horse-courser, a coiner, 237
- Jephson, Michael, Dean of St Patrick's, 240
- Jersey, Edward Villiers, 1st Earl of, 209, 211
- Jesuit, 88, 97, 143, 144
- Jews, compared with Whigs, 102, 130
- James II, King of England, 17, 47, 91, 118, 204; and the Dissenters, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 144, 146, 200; parties in reign of, 163; and 'supposed Pretender,' 146; and Whigs, 166-7
- John the Baptist, 48
- Johnson, Esther, xxiii
- Jonson, Ben, 71
- Jordan, River, 264
- Joshua, 264
- Journal to Stella*, quoted, x, xiv, xvii, xviii, xx, xxi, xxii, xxvi, xxvii, xxx, xxxi, xxxii
- Juno, 102
- Jupiter, 101
- Junta or Junto, xi, 53, 71, 72, 73, 77, 95, 136, 221, 225, see also Godolphin Ministry, Whig Party
- Kent, 211
- Kildare, Earl of, see Fitzgerald
- Kit-Kat Club, The, 224
- King, William, Archbishop of Dublin, ix, xxxii, xxxiv
- 'Landed Men,' the, xxiv, xxv, xxvi, 63, 68, 92, 111, 119, 164, 169; decline of during the war, 5; not in Whig interest, 12, 66, 124
- Langton, General Francis, 232
- LeBas, M., Guiscard's agent, 115
- Learned Comment upon Dr Hare's Excellent Sermon, etc.*, xxxiii, xxxiv, 261 ff.
- Lechmere, Nicholas, 71
- Leslie, Charles, writer of 'the pernicious Rebeausis,' xii, 13-4, 55; quoted by Whigs against Tories, 115
- Letter addressed to a Tory-member on the Management of the War*, see Hare
- Letter of Thanks to the Tories of Great Britain, by the French King*, 58
- 'Letter to Crassus, A,' xvii, xxxii, 83-5
- Letter to the Examiner, The*, see St John
- Letter to Isaac Bickerstaff, A*, an answer to the Examiner, xi-xii
- Letter to Lord Chancellor Middleton*, xxiii
- Letter, Mr Petticum's*, see Petticum
- Letter to the Seven Lords of the Committee appointed to Examine Grogg, A*; author called a 'Son of Obscurity,' 199; quoted, 192-205 passim, referred to, xxx, 187, 189, 193; Swift's reply to, 188 ff.; text of, 245 ff.
- Letter to Sir Jacob Banks, A*, a traitorous pamphlet, 100
- Levinge, Sir Richard, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons and Solicitor-General, 239
- Lille, 268
- Livy, 26
- Lloyd, Dr Eugene, Dean of Connor, 182, 183, 184, 236
- Lloyd, Mrs ('Foydy'), companion of Lady Wharton, 231, 232, 240

- London, xxv, xxvii, xxxii, 66, 112, 157, 159, 170, 183, 209, 234, 235
Lorraine, Rev Paul, Ordinary of Newgate, xxix, 192 ff., 251 ff.
Louis XIV, king of France, 129, 205, 209, 210, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 258, 267; his letter to the Tories forged, 58; as Orodes, 85; supposed hopes of, 224
Low Countries, the, 210
Lucan, quoted, 4
Lucian, quoted, 45
Ludlow, Edmund, Memoirs of, cited, 44, 143
Luther, Martin, 95
- Macedon, 41
Macartney, General George, xiv
Machiavelli, 19, 41, 64-5, 146
Magna Charta, 114
Mahomet, 92
Maintenon, Mme de, and the peace negotiations, 215, 216, 217
Management of the War, The, see Hare Manley, Mrs Mary de la Rivière, xxvii, xxxiii
Mantua, 224
Mary, Queen of England, wife of William III, 18, 146
Marlborough, John, Duke of, xxxii, xxxiv, 21, 26, 85, 87, 198, 204, 213, 221, 245, 263, 268, 269; addressed as Crassus, 77, 83-5; alleged ingratitude towards, 19-20; his change of party, xii-xiii, 15, 135, 164; compared with Caesar, 42; correspondence with St Germains, 146; dismissal of, xiii; Examiner's attacks on, xvi, 19-24, 27-9, 80-5; and Godolphin ministry, 4, 20-1, 133-4; grants to, 21-2, 74, 94; as 'John the coachman,' 25; as Moses, 267; and the Queen, ix, 20; and the Peace, 264; Swift's estimate of, xvii; his vices, 83-4, 93, 139; his virtues, xxxiii, 83, 87; his wish to be General for Life, xiv, 42, 45, 72, 267
Marlborough, Sarah, Duchess of, 38, 72; her employments, 22; as 'Fulvia,' 77; her insolence, 26, 93, 225; her fraud, 138; and the Queen, ix, xvi, 24
Masham, Abigail, 38, 72
- Meath, Charles Brabazon, Earl of, 234, 235
Medley, The, xxiv, 153-4, 155, 188, 202; attacks on ministry, 189; Examiner's answer to No. 32, 154-6; and Greg affair, xxix; on Guiscard, xxiii; on Marlborough, xvi-xvii; on Swift as Examiner, xviii
Memoirs relating to that Change in the Queen's Ministry in 1710, quoted on origin of Examiner, ix, x-xi
Meredith, Lieutenant-General Thomas, xiv
Mesopotamia, for the Low-Lands, 83, 85
Middleton, Alan Broderick, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, xx; Swift's Letter to, xxiii
Milan, 224
Mildenheim, Marlborough's principality in Germany, 21, 23
Miltiades, 61
Milton, John, his Paradise Lost, 8
Ministry, see Godolphin Ministry, Harley Ministry
Ministry, the change of, in 1710, ix, xiii, xxi, 19, 31, 33, 67, 95, 133, 136, 167, 171; addresses to Queen on, 66, 134; Examiner's on, 3-8, 35-40, 91-6; popular demand for, 12, 16, 21, 65-6; Swift's Memoirs of, ix, x-xi
'Moneyed-Men,' xiii, xxv, xxvi, 5; constitution at mercy of, 134, 169; and the Whigs, 124, 165
Moderation, 'The new-fangled,' 32; scheme of government, Harley's, ix, xiii, 122; Swift's belief in, xii, xxiv, 14, 90
Mons, 268
Montreuil, 212
More, John, Bishop of, 184
Moreau, banker in Paris, 254
More Secret Transactions etc., see Hoffman Muggletonians, 144
- Naples, 224
Naseby, 118
Natural and Political Observations . . . upon the Bills of Mortality, see Petty

- Naturalization, of foreign Protestants, a Bill for, 48, 71, 169
 Navy, debts on, 32, 34, 170
 Neptune, 149
 Netherlands, 222
 Nevis, British colony, 169
New Journey to Paris, A, xxxi, xxii; text of, 208-18
 Newgate, 119; Gregg in, 148, 189, 249; Guiscard in, xxii, 109, 116, see also Lorraine
 Newton, Sir Isaac, 215
 Non-Conformists, penal laws against, 127
 Non-Jurors, xxiv, 68, 104, 115, 127, 189
 Normandy, William Rufus in, 41
 Nottingham, Daniel Finch, 2nd Earl of, 38; 'great Prosclyte of the Junta,' 53
Observator, The, Whig paper, xxiv, 13-4, 154, 202, 221; and the Clergy, 189; on Guiscard, xxiii; on the Peace, xxv; on the Examiner, xii, 14, 18
 Occasional Conformity Bill, xviii, 123, 131
 Opera, fashions at the, 102
 Orange, William, Prince of, see William III
 Orkney Islands (Orcades), 58
 Ormonde, James, Duke of, xxviii, 72, 183, 231, 232, 237
 Ostend, and Dutch Barrier, 224
 Oxford, Earl of, see Harley
 Oxford University, decree of, 144

 Pall-Mall, 22
 Paper left by William Gregg, etc., xxix
 Palatines, importation of, 48, 52, 54, 149, 169, 271
 Papists, 53, 97, 111, 123, 128, 130, 137, 163, 248; and Guiscard, 108, 109, 115, 246, 247; and the Tories, 189; and the Whigs, 68, 122, 144
 Paris, 209, 212
 Parliament, The English, xviii, 45, 48, 50, 127, 149, 173, 198; acts of, examined, xxvi, 120, 167-72; addresses on Guiscard and Harley, 116, 192, 247 ff.; addresses on the War, xxv, 140; Bishops in, 56; the change of, 8, 64, 167, 168; and the Church, 16, 121, 158, 160; a free, 71, 119, 134, 168; frequency of, 159, 162; Harley in, 79; and Marlborough, 20, 94; obedience due to, 113, 145; and the Rebellion, 44, 141; the Rump, 146; and the Succession, 114; and Tory cause, 30, 104; and the Whigs, 71, 72, 119; House of Commons, xxiii, 44, 60, 78, 94, 119, 131, 164, 169, 170, 171, 179; address to Harley, 154, 155; and the fifty churches, 158; its speaker, 120-1, 155, 189, 192, 193; Tory majority in, ix; House of Lords, xxix, 101, 164; abolished by the Rump, 146; and Naturalization Act, 169; and Gregg affair, xxix, 191, 253
 Parliament, The Irish, 240; House of Commons, 183
 Party, 97; evils of extremes in, 13, 15, 58, 99, 102, 129; history of, 121-6, 162-7; length of life of a, 89; malice of, 83, 199; metaphorical genealogy of, 102-3; motives for engaging in, 156; Swift's distaste for, 35
 Party Writers, Tory, 245, 253, 256; disadvantages of, 76, see also The Examiner
 Party Writers, Whig, xxi, 30, 36, 91, 99-100, 142; advantages of, 75, 76; attacks on the Examiner by, 35, 77, 115, 118, 121, 135, 173; attacks on the Queen by, 100; Examiner's treatment of, xxi, xxvii, 172; 'flaming Licentiousness' of, 153; 'Hedge-writers,' 148; 'little barking Pens,' 171; petition of to Ministry, 31, 172-3, see also Medley, Observator, Rehearsal, Review
 Passive Obedience, 6, 72, 125, 144-5; an Examiner on, 110-6
 Paternoster Row, 281
 Paulus Amelius, 42
 Peace, The, xxxi, xxxii, 34, 44, 62, 210, 215, 218; addresses on, xxv, 140; broken off by France, 227; hopes of Church in, 162; Marlborough and, xvii; Tory desire for, 8; Whigs against, 5, 72, 87, 117; — without Spain,' xxv, 140, see also War of the Spanish Succession

- Pembroke, Thomas, 8th Earl of, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, 181
Pepper, Colonel John, 235
Peterborough, Charles Mordaunt, Earl of, x
Pesticium's Letter, Mr., 221
Petty, Sir William, His Natural and Political Observations . . . upon the Bills of Mortality, 159
Philip, Duke of Anjou, afterwards Philip V, King of Spain, 203, 210, 215, 223, 238
Phoenix Park, Dublin, 181
Picardy, as 'Promised Land,' 264
Plato, a fable of, 101; his Republic, cited, 115
Play-house, 102
Plutarch, 19; quoted, 120
Political State of Great Britain, The, 156-7
Pope, The, 143
Popery, xviii, xxi, 111, 128, 139, 142, 143
Portland, William Bentinck, Earl of, 209
Portsmouth, the fraud of the brewers at, 82, 138
Portugal, 7
Post-Boy, The, on Guiscard, 250, 254; on Wharton, xxi Praemunire, 205
Prasini, 162
Pratt, Dr Benjamin, of Trinity College, Dublin, 183, 184
Prerogative, The Royal, xv, xxix, 47, 48, 105; limitations of, 114, 135, 138, 141; Swift's change of opinion on, xxvii, 278; Tory view of, 125, 167; Whig attacks on, 123, 143, 164, 173
Presbyterians, xiii, 74, 93, 104, 129; their part in the Rebellion, 127; as Whigs, 92, 122
Press, Freedom of, abuse of, 99-100, 133, 153, 155, 156; under Tories, 35, 70, 99, 188; under Whigs, 70-1
Pretender, The, see Stuart, James
Prior, Matthew, xxxi, xxxii, 208 ff.; and the Examiner, xi, xxvii, 2, 76-7; his employments, 209; his prejudices, 218; his reputation, 102; at Ryswick, 211
Proby, Thomas, Surgeon-General of Ireland, 181, 182, 280
Quakers, xiii, 92, 144
Qualifications Bill, xxvi, 119, 169
Rabelais, Francois, cited, 38
Ramillies, The Battle of, 270
Rebellion, The, 127, 141, 143, 146; and Whig designs, 122; 'only a Civil War,' 128, 142
Reformation, The, 93, 111, 200
Rehearsal, The, see Leslie
Relation of Several Facts: A Continuation of the Short Character of Wharton, xx, 231 ff.
Review, The (Defoe's), xii, 13-4, 189, 202, 221
Restoration, The, 127, 128, 159
Revelations, quoted, 49
Revolution, The, of 1688, xiii, xxvi, 5, 12, 15, 34, 47, 79, 128, 144, 163; and the Church, 6; and the Succession, 18; and Tories, 114; and Whigs, xxiv, 147, 166, 189
Rhine, The, 223
Richard II, king of England, xxviii
Rivers, Richard Savage, 4th Earl of, xvii
Rochester, Laurence Hyde, Earl of, 72, 91, 204; his character, 78-9; his death, 152
Rochford, William Henry Zulestein de Nassau, 2nd Earl of, 231
Romans, The, 42; ingratitude of, 19, 22; piety of, 159
Rome, 27, 41, 44, 65, 83, 84; popular commotions in, 150
Rooke, Major-General Heyman, 238
Round-heads, 162
Royal Exchange, 279
Rue St Louis, 213
Rump Parliament, 146
Ryswick or Reswick, Peace of, 209, 211
Sacheverell, Dr Henry, impeachment of, ix, 56-7, 64, 71, 89; sermon of, 226, 271

- Sacramental Test, The, repeal of, xv, xix, 54, 71, 142, 143, 182
 St Christophers, British colony, 169
 St Germain, Whig correspondence with, 146
 St Jean, Hostelerie de, 210
St John, The Gospel of, quoted, xiv, 27, 270
 St John, Henry, Viscount Bolingbroke, Secretary of State, xxii, 72, 94, 149; character of, 80; and Examiner, x, xi, xvii, 2; and Guiscard, 106, 109, 115, 246, 247; letter to Harley quoted, ix; and Marlborough, xvi, xvii; and Swift, xii. Letter to the Examiner, xi, xxxiii, 86, 94, 221; Swift's reply to, xii, 85 ff.; text of, 221 ff.
 St Paul, 54, 110
Sarmatia, History of, 40
 Saunders, Anderson, governor of Wicklow Castle, 237
 Savage, Philip, Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland, 234, 240
 Savoy, the war in, 223
 Seipio Africanus, 42, 152
 Scheld, River, 264
 Scotland, 10; episcopacy in, 100, 101; the Union with, xviii, 40
 Scythia, for Scotland, 40
Secret Transactions, etc., see Hoffman Security, Act of, see Act for the Queen's General Pardon Senate, the Roman, 42
 Sensem, River, 264
 Servius, Sulpicius, friend of Crassus, 84
 Sharpe, John, Archbishop of York, 183
 Sheffield, John, see Buckingham
 Shelburn, Henry, 3rd Lord, xxvii
 Shippens, William, 276
Sbori Character of his Excellency Thomas, Earl of Wharton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, A, xx; text, 177 ff.
 Shrewsbury, Charles Talbot, Duke of, xxviii, 79, 276
 Sicily, 27-29, 244
 Sid Hamet, see Virtues of Sid Hamet, etc.
 Socinians, The, xiv, 56, 71, 79, 92, 122
Some Remarks on a Letter to the Seven Lords, etc., xxx, xxxi; text, 187 ff.
 Somerset, Charles Seymour, 6th Duke of, xxix, 245 ff. passim
 Sourdis, Marquis de, a noble French beggar, 217
 South, Mr., a Commissioner of the Revenue in Ireland, 234
 South-Sea Trade, Act for carrying on, 170, 198
 Spain, 7, 191, 210, 222, 224; 'a comfortable loss in,' 53; 'no peace without,' xxv, xxxii, 140; the War in, 34, 62, 198, 223, 236; 'shameless mismanagement' in, 87
 Spain, King of, see Philip
 Spencer, Hugh, Earl of Winchester, minion of Edward II, 93; his son, 93
 States-General, 205
 Stationer's Hall, 275
 Stevens, a lawyer in Dublin, 238
 Stock-jobbers, xiii, 7, 8, 67, 137
 Stocks, 4, 63, 202
 Stuart, James, son of James II, 'The Pretender,' 72, 73, 94, 112, 143, 205, 258; his debt to Dissenters, 46, 147; and the Examiner, 88; his legitimacy questioned, 17, 164; and the Tories, xxi, 67, 69, 115, 131, 132, 142; and the Whigs, 17, 115, 146, 147, 166
 Styx, The, 45
 Succession, the, 4, 5; in the House of Hanover, 34, 166; Tory opinion of, 114, 163
 Suffolk, 211
 Sunderland, Charles, 3rd Earl of, Whig Secretary of State, 64, 245; and the Queen, 93; and Marlborough, 20
 Swift, Jonathan, xxv, xxvii, xxviii, xxx, xxxiv-xxxv; as 'Examiner,' xi, xiv, xvii, xxii, xxvi, 3, 29-30, 35, 36, 50, 51, 68, 74, 78, 82, 91, 116, 117-8, 167-8, 178, 246, 250; and Hare, xxxii-xxxiii, 259 ff.; and Harley, ix, x, xiii, xxi ff., 80, 245; and Marlborough, xvii, xxxii; and Prior, xxxi, 207 ff.; and Wharton, xviii ff., 77 ff.; and the Whigs, xv-xvi, 89
 Tacitus, 19, 26; quoted, 149
 Tatler, The, 35; Swift's contribution to, x

- Tenison, or Tennison, Dr Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury, 51, 53
Test Act, see Sacramental Test
Thoulon, or Toulon, failure of expedition to, 149, 223
Tindall, Matthew, deist, 78; encouraged by Whigs, 37, 54, 55, 71, 142
Titus, Colonel Silas, rewarded by James II, 118
Toland, John, deist, 55, 71, 92, 142
Toleration, Act of, 92, 101, 129
Tory, Jean Baptiste Colbert, Marquis de, 210, see also Bastide, M. de la
Tory Party, The, xiii, 226, 235; compared with old Whigs, 15, 111; and the Church, 52, 158; and The Examiner, xii, 53, 88; and the Crown, 4, 114, 125, 126, 130; definition of, 121-6, 162-7; not a faction, 104; the ladies of, 102; leaders of, xxviii; its majority, ix, 26, 30; and non-Resistance, xxviii, 6, 111, 144; and Passive Obedience, 112-4; and Popery, xxi; and the Pretender, xxi, 115, 131; its principles examined, xxiv, xxvi, 68, 121 ff., 125 f., 164, 166; and the Revolution, 114, 163; and Swift, x, 98; and Wharton, xviii, see also Harley Ministry
Townshend, Charles, 2nd Viscount, and Greg affair, xxix, 245 ff.
Trim, 236, 240
Trinity College, Dublin, 182, 183
Triumvirate, the first, 83
Tully, see Cicero
Turk, the, 146; and Louis XIV, 129
- Union of England and Scotland, The, 34, 95; Wharton and, xviii, see also Scotland Universities, ridiculed by Whigs, 151
- Venice, and the army, 41; Duke of, 122
Veneti, The, 162
Verres, Caius, Cicero's oration against, xix, 27 ff.
Versailles, 210-7, passim
Vienna, the Court of, 226
Villiers, George, see Buckingham
- Virgilius Maro, quoted, 36, 149, 152
Virtues of Sid Hamet the Magician's Rod, The, x, see Godolphin Volpone, see Godolphin
- Walpole, Horatio, brother of Sir Robert, Secretary to the English embassy at Gertruydenberg, 25
Walpole, Sir Robert, 'shall blush among the living,' 86, 222
War, of the Spanish Succession, the, xxv, 4, 6, 7, 34, 120, 132, 215; and the Church, 158; Ireland's part in, 177; Marlborough's conduct of, 20; and the Whigs, xiii, 4, 5, 8, 44, 61, 72, 140, 162, 165, 199, 205, 227
West Indies, expedition to, xxv
Westminster, 157, 170
Westminster-Hall, 138, 155
Wharton, Lucy Loftus, Lady, wife of Thomas, xix; her conduct, 180, 235, 240
Wharton, Thomas, 5th Lord and 1st Earl and Marquis of, xvi, xxix, 177, 182, 184, 204, 231 ff.; his character summarized, xviii ff., 178-81, 181-4; as Clodius, 77; defiling the altar, 57, 68-9; and the Gregg affair, xxix, 245 ff.; Memoirs of the Life of Thomas, late Marquis of, xviii, xix; and Sacheverell trial, 57; Swift's efforts to discredit, xvi, xviii, xxi; talents in lying, 11; as Verres, 27, 28-9; 'Viceroy of a Western Province,' 8, see also A Short Character, etc.
Whig-Examiner, The, see Addison
Whig Party, The, xvii, 4, 12, 15, 68, 89, 92-3, 98, 102, 122, 140, 141-2, 146, 147, 151, 201, 224, 226; and the Church, xxx, 49, 51, 53-8, 123, 128, 140; corruptions in, 29, 189; and the Crown, 94, 117, 124, 129, 135, 201, 221; definition of, xxiv, xxvi, 48-9, 69, 71, 92, 105, 114, 121-6, 158, 162-7; and the Dissenters, 129, 130; and The Examiner, xii, xviii, 53, 69-75, 88; and Guiscard affair, 115; and Harley, 109-10, 154, 190, 193; heterogeneous composition of, 92, 94, 111, 122; and Passive Obedience, 112-3, 145; and the press, 68, 76, 136, 188;

- and the Pretender, 147; and Toleration, 39, 101; and the Tories, xii, xxvi, 111, 122, see also Godolphin Ministry
Whitehall, xxii
White's Chocolate House, xx, 119
Wicklow Castle, 237
William I, King of England, 104
William II, 'Rufus,' King of England, in Normandy, 41
William III, King of England, 5, 47, 57, 90, 135, 146, 163, 209, 211; Queen Anne the heir to, 18; and Church of England, 6; and the Dissenters, 6, 128; and Prior, 209, 211
Windsor Castle, xxxiv
Woodstock, 21
Wotton, Rev William, The Case of the Present Convocation Considered, etc., Swift's reply to, xv, 73 f.
Wycombe, xxvii
York, Archbishop of, see Sharpe

D.U.P. 26-4-85—50,000

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY SYSTEM

Cl. No. 01116K672C

H1

Ac. No. 1236140

Date of release of loan

This book should be returned on or before the date last stamped below.

An overdue charge of 20 paise will be charged for each day the book is kept overtime.

